We were so happy until two weeks when he told his mother about me, and she disapproved, because she thinks her son is too young to go with girls. He is 20 and I am 19 years old. If his mother tells his father about me, there will probably be a quarrel with his parents.

He says he'll come to see me as often as he can, but he will have to hide these visits from his parents. We both love each other and don't know what to do about it without causing trouble. Should he continue seeing me without telling his parents? Should we have other friends? We are both writing.

An Unhappy Couple

Very likely his parents feel that at twenty their son is not in a position to support a wife. And believe it or not, they may be right. Boys are in such position. But at 19 and 20, girls and boys should certainly be permitted to know young people of the opposite sex. And I would suggest to both of you to accept other attentions, which will help you to decide how much you really care about each other.

Fathers Who Disapprove of Dancing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A couple of weeks ago in your column, which I always read, I was deeply grieved to read that a young girl of young girls to dance. I do not permit my daughters to dance, to go to parties or to dances. And I hope they are estimable young men whom we will be good wives for any man.

My eldest daughter is 32, and there has never been a breath of scandal against her name, and she is 27 and another is 25. Please write something in your column on the evils of dancing.

Indignant Father

You are not the only indignant father who wrote to me. I have had two other letters besides. And please let me say in regard to your point, of view about dancing that there is more than enough to fill the crop of unhappy old maids on your hands, if you never let your daughters go to dances, parties or picnics. How do you expect them to meet eligible men? Girls brought up like that very often pick up men on the street.

None of these gentlemen who objected to my story, urging girls to dance and dance well, have sent me their names and addresses, in which case I should have been delighted to answer their letters personally.

But please let me say to the father who wrote, that he had been in the habit of going to all kinds of dances, "rough and tumble" and some which were called "polite," and to his way of thinking they were all alike, and evil.

This gentleman tells me he found salvation at 58 years of age, and that he is now shielding his daughters from temptation. Let me remind him of the writer, who has said "never bore nor of legal love." We congratulate ourselves we have not the better of our passions". And I certainly feel sorry for girls who are cooped up and caged just as they are coming into their prime. A little too much of the seamy side of life.

A Plea for Good Humor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Since the weather is becoming pleasant, my boy friend doesn't come to see me as often as before. He makes dates for Saturday afternoon or Sunday, then calls up and breaks them. Sometimes he doesn't even apologize. Some one told me he plays football. I accused him of it, and in my anger said some things I shouldn't have, which he only laughed at me, and walked away. I'm so fond of him that I'd like to be invited to have him back.

Helen

If this young man did come back, would you treat him the same way? If you have him, why don't you offer to go fishing with him some time? You may enjoy it and he may, too. I don't know. I've even heard of girls catchin more fish than their boy friends.

Let me add that good humor is something you must learn if you are to be a sport, and that is something which will pay you good dividends, whether you win this man or not.

Don't Leave Your Hotel Reservations to Chance

Millions of people in this country are travel-minded this summer. If you are one of them, and are planning to stay at a hotel, you will be wise not to leave to chance the hotel accommodations. To arrive at the hotel in which you are planning to stay only to find that all the rooms are "booked up" will certainly cause you inconvenience, discomfort and even disappointment. If possible, write a letter well in advance, reading somewhat like this:

234 Park Street
San Francisco, California.
July 12, 1939

Dear Sir—

Please reserve for my wife and myself, on Wednesday, July 26th, a double room with single bed and bath. I prefer a room not on a court, not above the eighth floor, and of moderate size.

We are due to arrive about seven o'clock in the evening and expect to remain about a month. Please let me know if you can give me such accommodations, and the rate.

Very truly yours,
Philip Atwater

If there's no time to write, send a telegram stating the facts.

You'd better take with you the letter or telegram confirming your reservation. If your arrival is to be delayed, you should inform the hotel to hold the room, for it may not be held if you do not arrive within a reasonable time after the time mentioned in your letter or telegram.

Engagement Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to attend an engagement party for my cousin. I have present for me to take a gift? If so, what kind of gift is appropriate?

Jane

It isn't necessary to give an engagement gift, but it is proper to make this gesture if you wish to do so. You may give your cousin the gift at some time before the party, or you may take the gift to the party.

Personal gifts for the prospective bride are appropriate. A gift for an engagement presents Wedding gifts and gifts for the bride.

So you might give your cousin lovely white linen handkerchiefs, possibly in the facsimile of her handwriting. Or you might give linen guest or some accessory for her dressing-table or for her luggage, or a set of silk containers of toilet sizes, for her lingerie, handkerchiefs, gloves.

Courtesy Tip

When you use the wash bowl in a public place show a decent consideration for others and a decent regard for cleanliness.

Don't be such a coward that you are careless of your manners when you think there is no one looking to check up on you!

Rinse the wash bowl spattered with soapy or dirty water. Pull the plug out let the water drain away. Then, secondly, turn on the fresh water, and rinse out the bowl. The next user will thank you for it . . . and you'll like yourself better.

Matching Up Your Face With Powder

JOY HODGES . . . . . selects her powder with the greatest care.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MATCHING the powder to the complexion isn't the simple matter the girls think it is. Complexions can be gardenia white, pearl, vanilla, tanny, sallow, parchment color, ivory, beige or florid. You're ruddy, ivory, beige or florid. You believe it, would you? Many hurried shoppers select a flesh tint or rachelle, let it go at that.

Believe it or turn up your imperfect nose, but a matching powder can be found for any skin of any color. If you are particularly fussy, the attendant at the make-up bar in the beauty shop will mix one to order. Yes, madame. She will measure the ingredients, write down your prescription and will fill it for you when the powder box goes empty.

Select, a shade slightly darker than your skin; it will hide blemishes that you may fancy are on your celestial countenance. A powder that is of too light a tone is bound to look smeary or patchy. Buy small powder pads so you won't feel that it is an extravagance to throw them away. Soiled powder pads are a common source of blackheads and facial eruptions.

Lipsticks aren't are inclined to faces. But always the same old have a shimmer. Rouge is used sparingly that it seems to have gone into retirement. New fashions new girls.

Hat brims are flattering. Think of that when your eyes pounce upon a little bonnet the size of a thimble. Brims protect the eyes from the sun so you won't get squint lines. They cast a shadow so that if lines are already with you they won't show up like sore thumbs.

Bonnied hats are more harmonious with the long bob than are tiny hats perched on one eye. That long lanky look from the top of the ears to the shoulders where the bob end is trying, even if one is young and beautiful. To get the right hat and the right hairdress rather is every woman's job and responsibility these days.

AT THE BELLE

"Juarez"

In 1936, "The Story of Louis Pasteur", with Paul Muni in the title role, flashed upon screens all over the world with simplicity and sincerity it brought to life one of the greatest scientists of all times. It's grateful world heaped praise upon Muni for his artistry in making Pasteur live again. When the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences went to award their coveted prizes for the best performances of the year, there was not one dissenting voice when he was awarded the gold statuette for the best acting.

Now such an actor as Muni is not content to rest on his laurels, and in 1937 he pulled the world anew with his portrait of France's immortal writer in "The Life of Emile Zola". Audiences went wild with excitement, critics consulted encyclopedias to find new words with which to praise. And the Academy Award for the best picture of 1937 went to Warner Bros. for "The Life of Emile Zola". "Paul Muni rises to his greatest heights as Zola"; "It is Muni's most powerful role"; "This genius colliding with life", these were just a few of the plaudits.

Late in the year 1937, Warner Bros. came to decision that "Juarez", the story of Mexico's great liberator, who freed his country from the domination of Spain, which France had placed upon it. There was only one actor whom they could call upon to bring the man whom Napoleon III called "the greatest American" to life on the screen. That man was Paul Muni. Now, after more than a year devoted to research and preparation, as well as several months of actual production "Juarez" comes to the screen, a worthy successor to "Pasteur" and "Zola", destined even to win greater praise than these two, for it is even wider in scope. Co-starred with Muni are Bette Davis, as highranking an actress as he is as an actor.

"Juarez" which is now showing at the Belle marks a high level of excellence recently in New York. Following is quoted from a critic who viewed it there:

Paul Muni is superb as "Juarez". William Dieterle, the great N. Y. World Telegram. Once again he provides a memorable portrait in the role of the humble people leader." Rose Pelswick in the N.Y. Journel and American.

Step Out For Beauty!

By HELEN FOLLETT

BE A Mrs. Walker. Step pretty. . . a woman is as young as her gait, you know. Many an old girl trips along as gayly as the youngsters. Because she can do that she stays young. No slouchy backbone for Her, no buckling at the knees, no clumping down on the heels in her shoes and worry her nervous system.

That keen observer of the modern woman, the late John Galsworthy, wrote this about her manner of getting places:

"Carriage went out with Edward (meaning the grandfather of the Duke of Windsor). It was succeeded by the lope. All you young women lope as if you were about to spring onto something and make a getaway. I've been trying to fore. see what will come next. Logically, it should be the hound, but it might quite well revert and be the langulish."

What an arraignment! And in these days when women are getting more and more interested in outdoor life, realize the health and beauty benefits of fresh air and sunshine, they should put their backbones, tuck in the tummy, lift the chin high, and then swing naturally and easily, clip off three miles a day, and they can cut out those reducing treatments at the beauty shop.

Walking employs many muscles grouped together to head, hands and skin, makes you forget all those horrid little relentless the pore-opening, blackhead making habits brings the first of every month.

Work hard all day and you will accumulate certain poisons in your body; they are due to fatigue, like breaking down of substances of which you are made. It is only during sleep that these wastes are removed from your body and new ones produced. Therefore, be a wise girl and get your full eight hours of slumber.

Mother Nature has made certain laws; breaks them and you will be penalized. If you go to bed late, up early and tear through a hectic day, you'll be no asset to yourself. Wrinkles will come early and then what'll you do?

If you go to bed with brain overstimulated, nerves jangling, do stretching exercises; that practice normalizes the circulation, brings relaxation and repose.

Little Thought Ever Given to Mystery of Baby's First Breath

I don't suppose there was ever a time or stop to think how marvellous it is that new-born babies start to breathe at once, although they had never before taken a single breath.

The second a baby is born, his lungs begin to function. Up to that time they were just small, tight masses. When this first breath is taken, these lungs fill up and begin their normal duties just as though the infant had been practising for weeks. That first wail is the most welcome sound in the world to the doctor in charge, for it is a healthy sign that has been so regarded for hundreds of years.

We know that the baby gulps in air the minute he comes into the world. We also know that he occasionally bubbles don't take this first gulp; that's why they are induced to take it they will die.

Breathing is a very simple action performed by two sets of muscles one, the diaphragm; the other, the muscles controlling the ribs.

The diaphragm, a large vessel situated at the bottom of the chest cavity separates the chest from the abdomen. When this muscle is relaxed, it forms a good deal of space in the chest; when tightened, that muscle becomes smaller and smaller, etc. taking up less and less space in the chest cavity. The ribs are supplied with another set of muscles. These are so arranged that when they are tightened the entire chest cavity expands. Because the ribs on each side are pulled outwards and backwards.

Of course we aren't conscious that all this is going on, but it is exactly what happens each time we take a breath. That is, to take a breath, we contract the rib muscles at the same time contracting the diaphragm. That means that as the chest expands outward, the diaphragm tightens and recedes downwards. This action enlarges the whole chest cavity, creating a great deal of space down which the air rushes through the windpipe.

During exhalation both sets of muscles relax, the ribs come together and the diaphragm swells up into the chest cavity, driving the air out.

It all sounds very simple. In fact, it is so common to hear some people remark that something or other is as "simple as taking a breath".

It is simple because our muscular system. If it is co-ordinated properly, takes care of it for us. But these lungs fill up and begin their normal duties just as though the infant had been practising for weeks. YUGOSLAVIA

In Bucharest it was pointed out that the entrance of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia might mean that Rumania would be able to draw on the need from land routes to Turkey and Greece, which, like Rumania, have received Anglo-French pledges of aid.

Program Outlined.

Today Bulgaria and Yugoslavia were said to have reversed an old project for virtual union of Slavic peoples of the Balkans, with Kingdom-to-be placing before his cabinet a program which included:

1. A Bulgaro-Yugoslav Customs Union;

2. A common policy by the two nations in foreign affairs;

3. Collaboration in developing foreign trade;

4. Possible cession of Bulgaria of 900 square miles of the lost to Yugoslavia after the Great War.

From the German viewpoint a Yugoslav-Bulgarian-Hungarian bloc could be a diplomatic weapon to threaten Turkey's Premier, Ismet Inonu.

The bloc might also serve to enable Germany to keep Italy in line should the Fascists show signs of weakening.

Kenworth looked sidelong at his chief, and said no word; but he observed a faint cloud, not so much of dislike or antagonism as of intense interest, settle upon the alert face. It did not disturb him with the personal anxiety it would have started in Mickey Dennis. Adam was far over violently and imperiously interested in something or other, and Kenworth had not the knowledge of him to be able to follow the struggle which went on behind those shrewd eyes before Adam turned away and plunged back into the business of the day. Catherine boarded her train. In her third-class compartment she unfolded the little roll of silk, and the slip of paper which was wrapped into it, and read the address of Mrs. Dowling's mother.

'Mrs. Garland,

'26a, Edwards' Pleasance,

Gallowshields Road.'

She had never seen or heard of it, but that was in no way wonderful, for Stanchester was a large town, and harboured here and there many putting districts which had grown round industries. But she thought it could not be among the poorer quarters, for the term 'Road' was unanimous, except for the more comfortable suburbs, and 'Edwards' Pleasance' sounded just the kind of pretentious title a builder of coverlets of suburban property might bestow upon his creation. Probably one of the fairly new working-class districts towards the north-west. She pondered what name the Council, or Adam himself, would bestow upon the finished product of his genius. 'Probert's Pleasance' would sound good, she thought, a fitting title for the colony.

None the less, the simple little mother and the milk-white baby troubled her mind oddly, insistently, all through the half-hour journey into Stanchester; and they were still in her thoughts when she stepped out of the train on Platform 6, and Lyddon Strang stepped forward in the same moment to meet her, as ever immaculate, as ever restrained, even in his most possessive moments; and as he always had been, and as he would be, to point him apart from the magnificent unreality her heart coveted.

CHAPTER XII

"WILL HE FIGHT?"

"This is excellent," said Massingham, and rubbed his hands over Geoffrey Courts letter, "in fact, to tell the truth, it's more than I dared hope for; and Mr. Hart has found an old map which belonged to Richard Poole, and has his spot where the accident occurred scribbled in red ink. The red ink is a faded mauve now, and the map rather dilapidated, too, but he can vouch for it, on his solicitor's authority, for what that's worth, that the marking was done by the old fellow himself, when he related the joke. Frankly, I think we've got him tight. What sort of fighter is he? Will he quiet down, and pay what we ask, or fight for it?"

"Every yard," said Catherine securely, leaning upon the edge of the solicitor's desk to peer upon the finished product of his genius. "Probert's Pleasance' would sound good, she thought, a fitting title for the colony.

"Not to be considered. Will he fight?"

"He will fight," said Catherine, "but he will not win. He will fight the more money can we reasonably expect from him in the long run. For candidly, Mrs. Court, I haven't the slightest doubt that the strip of land is legally yours; and I don't see how he's going to make a court think otherwise."

He clapped the papers together in his hands, triumphantly, and spread them as if he already had Adam Probert's throat between his fingers, and a personal grudge to give the moment sweetness.

Catherine rose, smiling. "Then I can sleep easy,you think?" She turned her head, and smiled along her shoulder at Lyddon Strang. "For this relief, much thanks. Every time I consider my evidence, I feel confident of absolute success; but every time I look at that man, I feel foredoomed to complete failure. Well, at least I can spend today in optimism."

They left the office, and came out into the watery sunlight of midday, glittering upon the white mica which shone everywhere in the business buildings of Stanchester. Inevitably Lyddon suggested lunch and she accepted with all the more alacrity because, in her heart, she would have preferred no lunch alone. As always, he was ready to give his whole day to her, without a murmur, and without making a single request of her; and yet she was his, and no one knew it better than he did, or principal succession more. He had looking at her across the table, and seemed content with the occasional contact of their eyes in public places, and their lips when they were alone; a kiss at meeting, and a kiss at parting and sometimes his arms about her in a taxi at night; but very little more. Nothing of the light that never was on sea or land about this loving, not even on his side. That he loved her, she never doubted, but loved her after his fashion, devout, possessive, gracious .She was not an achievement so much as an accomplishment.

They talked of Adam Probert.

"Have you seen very much of him?" asked Lyddon, his eyes upon her face.

"I've talked with him twice, that's all; and, of course, seen him in Court Brandon several times."

"An interesting man," said Lyddon reflectively, still watching her every movement.

"I find him so. A ruthless man, but terribly honest, So honest that sometimes I doubt myself when I see him. As if, if you can understand what I mean, I prefer to trust him rather than myself." She looked up, and her smile was wry. "Do you suppose that I'm sometimes afraid of him?"

"Why should you be afraid of him? You have a cast-iron case—"

She shrugged her shoulders. They were talking triumphantly, as vague, 'How could she hope to explain. Adam Probert, Lyddon Strang. There was no common tongue into which she could translate him.

"Ruthless, you called him," said Lyddon sensitively, "you wouldn't imagine he is. A man, too, with all the resources money can buy at his finger-ends. And capable of using them in many ways. The only weakness your case has, Catherine, is that it is very susceptible to a line of forgery," from the opposite side. There are people who could have created that document in a moment's leisure, if they can—or shall we say, they would, provided they had sufficient authoritive for him. Poole could easily have got the agreement accepted; then we have Adam Probert, and he was drunk when he signed; and he has witnesses, Mr. Hart, a wife and daughter who would have fought like tigresses for a hundred guineas, and forced him to fight with them, too."

Catherine threw her head with a sudden fierce glance for which he was at a loss to account. "Are you suggesting, Mr. Strang, that it may be expected to defeat us by forgeries? Is that the kind of fair?"

"I'm merely suggesting," said Lyddon, with lifted brows, "that it may be advisable to consider all the possibilities."

"That is an impossibility," she said briefly, and with absolute confidence.

She was aware then of his eyes upon her, fixed with a new wonder, a new consideration of herself as a person, and a person he had just realised that he barely knew. She smiled.

"You see," she went on. "I've seen enough of him to know what I'm talking about when I say that he not only couldn't but wouldn't, use any such methods. Oh, not because he hasn't the power, or the daring for that matter. But he has too much arrogance in him to use weapons his opponent doesn't. He is the original of all the proud people who doffed their armour because they met an enemy without his. I sympathise with that attitude; perhaps that's why I hate it so much, too."

Lyddon made no comment, and asked her no further questions. But she felt that he was considering her from that moment, with a care he had never given to that study before.

It was a relief when they were out of the restaurant, and she was able to shake him off, She had intended to tell him where she was going; but when it came to the point she realised that he would insist on going with her, and that was a thing she did not desire.

So she made an excuse of a visit to the hairdresser, and as soon as her taxi had rounded the first corner, and was out of his sight, she tapped on the glass, and altered the direction to Gallowshields Road. It seemed to cost her utterly some effort to locate the name, and even when she was able to judge by his eyes that light had dawned upon him, he stared at her for a moment as if he could hardly believe he had heard aright, Then he shrugged his shoulders, and drove on.

Presently they were well out of the business and shopping part of the city, and in the newer, broader residential streets, just as she had imagined they would be. She was not at all surprised when the streets became narrower and poorer again, and the houses shrank on either side; that was as she had expected. But after a while she knew that she had reached Gallowshields Road. This was not the comfortable working - class quarter she had expected, but a long and sinister array of houses blackened with smoke, small, thin, narrow-windowed houses on whose doors the paint hung in stripe, almost colourless with age, and whose broken panes of glass were stuffed with rags to keep out the wind.

The taxi stopped opposite a narrow opening which she took to be the mouth of a close. She got out, and stood staring round at the darkly uniform desolation of wall, as she fumbled in her bag for the fare.

"Is this Gallowshields Road?" she asked dubiously.

"This is it, lady. That's Howard's Pleasance there," he volunteered, indicating the uninviting opening on his left. She was still regarding it with fascinated and revolted eyes when he drove away.

ARISTOCRAT IN AN ALLEY

Catherine_saw, now, and saw only too well,—the manner of place was Howard's Pleasance. From the moment that she stepped into the paved path into that shadowy mouth, she knew that it was baleful beyond words. It was not simply that the houses were small and old, or that the very paths were broken and uneven. They were rats, for she saw two run across her path as she walked; and what other vermin lived in these desirable solitudes she could only guess. There were only panes missing from the windows, but those from the doors.

A few children, too young to be at school were playing in the gutter, and their naked dabbling in two inches of filthy water. These children did not play together, but played heartily in their unsavoury pond, That was their pleasance, their only compensation for the distress of their being there at all. Some were there with their mothers, with large, unchildish eyes, as if they knew that there was some other world. She found herself reflecting that they would have grown up before that world probably have spoken to them, perhaps even to her.

Catherine's throat ached, but she did not know what to say. She looked about her, counting the numbers of the houses as she went, noting that there a door was thrust out from a doorway to stare after her, and here and there a window opened, and a head was protruded, though she saw no one but children.

Howard's Pleasance had but the one entrance, and ended in what she had expected, but would probably have described as a small court. It was surrounded by filthy, with rough bricks, which had fallen in here and there, and here and there been kicked out altogether, leaving open holes of liquid mud. No. 26 was at the centre, and 26a, she found behind it, an even smaller, dirtier, more forlorn, single-fronted, and pitifully narrow, as if it had been expressly designed to house a side-show thin man. She went up three brick steps, two of them rickety under her feet, and knocked on the blistered door.

There was a pause, during which she had leisure to observe, what comforted her strangely, that the curtains at the single downstairs window were green and neat, and that the self-same material of which Mrs. Dunning's knee covers were made, at home in Court Brandon.

She heard the slur of footsteps within, and then the door was suddenly opened, and she was face to face with Mrs. Garland, She was but an old woman, as Catherine had somehow expected her to be; certainly not more that fifty years old, and probably not so much; small and frail, like her daughter, but full of an immediate and striking energy which made her small oval face for all its marks of worry, as fascinating as that of a young girl. She stood there in the doorway, in her rusty black blouse, and looked at Catherine with level and composed eyes. Instantly, as if they had a kinship of ill, even, they found themselves liking each other; it was a sudden and as unmistakeable as the friendship of children.

"I think you must be Mrs. Garland," said Catherine, smiling. "I have a message from your daughter."

"Come in," said Mrs. Garland, and stood back from the doorway with a ready smile in response; and in spite of the lines of worry with which it had to contend, that smile struck Catherine as one of the pleasantest sights she had ever seen, perhaps because it bloomed among so much squalor.

"It isn't a palace," said Mrs. Garland cheerfully, as she closed the door, "but there, you won't be expecting one, after coming up the Pleasance. Such a fine name, isn't it? This must be an awful letdown to you, if you haven't seen it before."

"And I haven't" said Catherine soberly. And stood in the middle of Mrs. Garland's little living-room and knew by the light which entered through a door opposite that there was nothing beyond larger than a scullery. The place was deeper from back to front than the width of its frontage, but even that was not very great.

The walls sadly needed re-papering, though she judged from the brightness of the portions which still retained their colour that the fault for that lay in the extreme dampness of every outside wall, and not with the spirit of the tenant. For in every other way the little house was very well-kept, and well-kept without assistance from the elements, which entered from the frame of every door and window as freely as she thought they must blow through the broken panes further down the alley. The furniture suffered for the room, and if it was poor, it was wonderfully neat; and the hearth and its fire looked more inviting to her than many she had seen which were richer and brighter.

"Of course you weren't expecting me," said Catherine, "my name's Court—Mrs. Court. I daresay you've often had Nurse Hayes knocking at your door, though, and today I'm Nurse Hayes's deputy." She explained how she had been mistaken for the good-natured messenger, and insisted on taking the message. "Perhaps I should have left it to Nurse, really, but there was just a chance she wouldn't be going; and it was no trouble to me, now in the least. I was glad to come."

Mrs. Garland, a queen in her own castle, poked the fire into a desmuse blaze, and persuaded Catherine into a chair beside it with a royal simplicity. "There, that's better," she said, dusting her hands. "You'd never believe the stuff they she said with a sigh. "you can't

And just like that scatter-brained girl of mine to have the baby in silk, and like as not the house floors covered in newspaper."

"They weren't," said Catherine, laughing. "The house was beautiful, and so was the baby. And I think parcel, daughter is a very good little housekeeper."

"Not so bad, considering she was never taught to keep it exactly." She worked from the time she left school, did my girl, and never missed a day, except now and then when she was ill, She was an a-1lbo on one of the pot-banks, but I don't believe as it ever rightly suited her. SCENES AS CLEVELAND POLICE INVESTIGATE "TORSO MURDERS"

With the arrest of Frank Dolcesi, 35-year-old former bricklayer and slaughter house employee, Cleveland police hope they have solved the mystery of the 12 "torso murders" that have terrorized the city over the past five years. Dolcesi has confessed the murder of Mrs. Polillo, shown LOWER LEFT, listed as victim No. 3, and officials believe he is guilty of the other slayings, all of which resulted in the finding of dismembered bodies in various parts of the city. Used most frequently by the murderer or murderers of victims in the past as a place to strew the parts of the bodies was the desolate Kingsbury Run, shown at the TOP. Following his confession of Mrs. Polillo's murder, Dolcesi was taken to a railroad bridge beneath which he claimed to have buried his victim's head. He is seen at the LOWER RIGHT as he brought his hands to his face when taken to the spot by police officials. The latter were unable to find any head, although some bones were uncovered.

GORDON BRILLIANT

Dimaggio Brings Grief to National Leaguers by Hitting Homer

(By Orrie Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 13 (AP)—After having watched the American Leaguers (mostly New York Yankees) defeat the National Leaguers (principally Cincinnati Reds) in the seventh annual All-star game at Yankee stadium by a score of 3 to 1, the following thoughts arise:

1. That in Bobby Feller of Cleveland Indians, who pitched the last 3 2-3rds innings for the winners, baseball is looking at one of the greatest pitchers he ever saw. A faster chinaman with his fast ball, and that is your Joe (Flash) Gordon.

2. That in your Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees, there is a star performer today who can play second base as brilliantly, perhaps, as it ever has or ever will be played, and slug, too.

3. That, otherwise, there still is no great difference between the two leagues, even though yesterday was the fifth victory in the last five for the Americans in the seven All-Star games that have been played to date exactly.

It was a good game, as some 68,000 spectators agreed, but for an error by Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh star playing shortstop for the Nationals, the final could well have been 2-1, and the winning pitcher would have been received by Joe DiMaggio's home run that just rimmed the left-field stand in the fifth inning.

Feller at Real Star

Feller went in to pitch for the Americans in the sixth inning, when the leading National Leaguers had filled the bases with only one out, and Tommy Bridges of Detroit was wobbling all over the place. The youngster from Cleveland fired three strikes and forced Vaughan to smack into a double play, assisted by Gordon. The five National Leaguers batted in that inning, and Feller, who relieved, pitched only six balls to them.

Feller went on to baffle the Nationals in the remaining three innings. They didn't have a chance against his fast ball, it cut the plate with such speed that even George M. Cortright, the umpire behind the catcher, was ducking his head when the pitch whizzed over. Mize and Ripper Collins, the last two batters to face Feller, were struck out victims.

And Gordon. He made three hits in four trips. In the sixth he knocked down a drive by Mel Ott with two aboard that cut off at least two runs, and a few moments later started the double play that pulled the Americans out of their worst hole of the day. His greatest exploit, however, was made in the eighth inning, when he made a running jump into short field and knocked down a line drive by Joe Medwick, nearly landing on his face as he did it.

The game brought grief to Cincinnati Reds' players, who starred for National League. Ival Goodman suffered a bruised shoulder when trying for a line drive by George Selkirk in the fourth chapter. He hit heavily on his left shoulder, and the doctor who examined him predicted he would be out of action at least 10 days. This mishap might well decide the National League flag, as the Reds open a series with the second-place Giants here tomorrow.

CORNWALL BISONS IN FIFTH PLACE

Defeat Gloversville While Ottawa Senators Taken by Amsterdam

(By The Canadian Press)

There seems to be no stopping the Ringmakers of Amsterdam in their quest for a second-straight Canadian - American Baseball League pennant. The New York Yankees' farm club has the hitting, the pitching, and more than a little of what is agreeably called "class."

Ottawa Senators thought they had the Ringmakers stopped cold for once last night. Behind 6-0 going into the last of the eighth, Amsterdam's pitching had been shaky at the best of times, and their hitting nothing to write home about.

So the Ringmakers brought into play the third requisite for a winner and scored three runs in the 10-9 triumph. A victory rally in the eighth had brought home the five runs that turned the trick. The Ringmakers collected six hits in the combined.

The victory lifted Amsterdam six points in front of the second-place Oswego Netherlands, who meanwhile, took to forgetting their fourth smile. Playing at home, Colonels banged the visiting Cornwall Cubs, 7-2, in a close battle all the way.

Ottawa's loss was Cornwall's gain. The Bisons, previously tied with Gloversville for fifth position, Gloversville's mates for a 13-3 victory that gave them sole possession of fifth place. Chief Cubs' pitcher Cornwall to the triumph on Gloversville home-grounds.

Sports Roundup

By Biddle Brien Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, July 12 (AP)—Sports writers here for the All-Star game think Billy Conn is the lad who'll eventually lick Joe Louis. The United States army and navy football teams will be strongly scrambled off Gene Flatban, outstanding Marquette halfback, and army owned the count by scoring down there and Walter Koncz of Duquesne than far guard.

Bob Pastor has averaged $2,000 in the last 37 shows he's performed in at Little Rock, playing in his first fair of the season. He was a left-handed golfer as a caddy.

True Story

Until last week, George Archie, Seattle first baseman, had never hit for the cycle—homer, triple, double and single in one game. But on July 4th he celebrated.....He hit a triple in the first game from Pittsburgh to fight Mello Bettina, Billy Conn's sparring partner, will get all set for a fight with Lee Savold, but his doctors have ordered him to knock off the American Association coaching lines for the balance of the season.

DEAL CONFIRMED BETWEEN SHORE AND SPRINGFIELD

Boston Defenceman Purchased and Will Manage Club This Winter

TWO BOMBSHELLS

Draft Price is N.H.L. Raised to $7500 and Indianapolis Admitted to Loop

(By Vincent Hogan Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, July 12 (CP)—Eddie Shore, Boston Bruins' stonewall defenceman for more than a decade of National League hockey, today moved into the ice world with a bang.

Although still the property of the Bruins for home games next season, the big Alberta farmer announced yesterday he had purchased and would manage the Springfield club in the International - American League in the coming season. Maurice Podoloff, league President, confirmed the deal at a meeting of the Int.-Am. governors here yesterday. The club had been operated by corporation set up by the league after the former owners went into the red last January.

The Int.-Am. meeting threw out a couple of other bombshells.

Draft Price is Raised

In conference with a committee of National League governors the league officials conceded in principle the player draft price from the Minor League to N.H.L. clubs from $4,000 to $7,500 but dropped other proposed changes in the working agreement between the leagues. The other proposals related mainly to other aspects of player transfers.

The second surprise was the granting of an international league franchise to Indianapolis, Ind. The new club will be backed financially by James Norris and Arthur Wirtz, part owners of Detroit Red Wings in the N.H.L. and a group of Indianapolis sportsmen.

Norris, who recently sold out his interest in the Pittsburgh Int.-Am. team, said organization of the new team was virtually complete with Manager Herb Lewis of Detroit's Jeff winger, probable manager.

Amicable Agreement

As an indication of the amicable agreement between Shore and Boston, Art Ross, the Bruins Manager, said he was very pleased with "Eddie's buy" and expected to help the former star "in every way."

Agreement to the Bruins it was understood his services would be called for only in the case of a string of Boston injuries or if the team ran into a slump. In any event the contract will not operate, at all, until well into the season.

GENE TUNNEY VISITS WITH PREMIER HEPBURN

St. Thomas, Ont., July 12 (CP)—Gene Tunney, formed heavyweight boxing champion of the world, is spending a few days with Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario on the Premier's Yarmouth township farm. The wealthy former fighter is here to loaf and enjoy a holiday.

Tunney said he could see no one on the heavyweight horizon capable of defeating champion Joe Louis. As for the fact Louis' bout with Bob Pastor at Detroit in September is scheduled for 20 rounds, Tunney said: "They might as well have made it 40 or 80 rounds for all that means."

FERGUS THISTLES PULL SURPRISE

Fifth Place Team Defeats ..League Leading Squad, St. Catharines, 11-7

(By The Canadian Press)

When a fifth place team can smack down the first-placers there's a chance for the rest of the field. Besides such a win arouses a lot of interest.

The fifth-string team, Fergus Thistles, walloped the league-leading St. Catharines Athletics 11-7 at Fergus last night in a Senior "A" Ontario Lacrosse Association match that was one of the most hectic in years.

The battle was climaxed by a free-for-all fight with practically all players joining after Hope of St. Kitts slashed at Rusty White of Fergus as the final bell sounded. Sticks flew freely and it was several minutes before order was restored.

Over at Brampton, Orillia Terriers, paced by Coach Buckie McDonald, outlasted the cellar-occupants, Brampton Excelsiors, to win 14-in Brampton have won but one till this season in 13 played.

Results left the league standing unchanged. Hamilton, with 18 points, is less than 24 Kitts are second, and Mimico third with 17. Orillia, have 14 points and Peterboro, 13. The Athletics have lost only three games and tied one since the season opened.

Syracuse and Rochester Split Doubleheader in Drawn-Out Contests

(By The Associated Press)

Judging by the way they started, the series between Rochester Red Wings and Syracuse Chiefs, both of whom have plenty at stake—is about to supplant Jersey City and Montreal Royals as the "hottest" thing in the International League pennant race.

It took the Red Wings and the Chiefs six hours to divide a double-header last night and the affair was interesting enough to keep most of the crowd of 8,000 hanging around to the early morning hours. Rochester, seeking vainly to regain the league lead, won the seven-inning opener 4-3 behind Mike Ryba's pitching then Syracuse struggled through to a 14-13 victory in 15 innings.

The split caused both of them to lose ground. The Little Giants from Jersey City, tied with Rochester after Monday's games, won a single game from Montreal Royals, 9-6, and took over first place by a half game. Buffalo tightened its grip on third place by knocking off the Baltimore Orioles 7 to 1 to run its winning streak to nine straight.

In the other game last night, Toronto's fast-place Maple Leafs beat Newark 4-1 although they were outhit 7-6. Wild pitches by Freeman Benson and Mark Rodingfield accounted for two runs. Rodingfield walked another in and Bob Elliott homered for the only legitimate Leafs tally.

Relief Mike Ryba had blanked Syracuse with seven hits to earn the first victory in a duel with Johnny Gee, the entire Rochester ground staff failed to help the Chiefs, in the marathon second game. Syracuse put together a five-run rally in the fifth, was tied in the eighth and notched the third Wings three run burst in the 10th. Ed Longacre finally settled the affair with a single that sent two were out in the 15th and Ken Chase, seventh Red Wings hurler, flinger, became the loser.

Jersey City clinched its victory and the lead with a five-run burst against Bill Crouch and Marvin Duke in the opener. Crouch his fifth scored six in the fourth for the big margin he'd been tagged with on homers by Boudreau and Heir.

Small communities along the lake and bay shore front will be surprised to learn that baseball is flourishing in a prolific manner out around Port Stewart, Bancroft, etc. Yesterday Nordin Haslitt League or whatever it may be called 60 miles north of here, affiliated with the Ontario Baseball Association. Already four clubs have entered the league with Coe Hill, Maynooth, Bancroft and Port Stewart being charter members, others are expected to link up with the organization later. Looking over the map of Hastings County we find these clubs travel many miles in order to wend their favorite summer pastime in their own neck of the woods. In this modern da yof radio, automobiles, and what have you, your next door neighbour may be residing thousands of miles away, as the crow flies. Naturally North Hastings way be scenting a Major affiliation, but it merely shows where they are very much alive and appreciated in the northern part of the county which is more than can be said of this area these days.

Sport Spice — Another major league "all-star" game is over and again the power-house attack of the American League, with Joe DiMaggio and the Yankees way clearly exemplified as the junior circuit won 3-1. And we still the American leaguers show their stickless person on the offensive, but that Feller fellow really showed "our counterparts" how to throw baseballs. Paul Derringer turned in a fine chore for the National Leaguers in the five three frames, but his effort was outclassed by Bob Feller's rather pitching affair. Little Tommy Bridges had choked the bats of the Nationals in the fifth ..... Feller took 'em on the mark, Richmond, without an effort.....Joe DiMaggio's third hit in three major league all-star games was a mighty home run yesterday, that just broke up the ball game, insofar as the National Leaguers were concerned..... Nearly 61,000 fans were the game and stayed to cheer Feller's stirring mound effort in his first "All-star" game.

WATCHING SALVAGE

Admiral C. W. Cole, of the United States navy, is seen on board the U.S.S. Falcon, salvage ship, as he watched operations being carried on for bringing to the surface the submarine Squalus, which sank with the loss of 26 lives off the New Hampshire coast. Divers are digging holes beneath the sunken submarine, through which huge chains will be passed and attached to pontoons, after which air will be forced out of the latter, giving them enough 'lift' to raise the submarine.

AMERICAN LOOP EASTERN TEAMS OPEN IN WEST

Rampaging Boston Red Sox Have Eight Game Win Streak to Protect

(By The Associated Press)

Brooklyn Dodgers, who have been trying all manner of means of getting the jump on the rest of the Major League teams, have a sure thing tonight.

While other clubs in the National and American Leagues are completing a three-day holiday occasioned by the All-Star game at New York, the Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates will play what ordinarily would have been their Thursday game under the lights tonight.

In third place and challenging the right of New York Giants to second, the Dodgers will get a day's start on their rivals and even if they lose they'll benefit at the turnstiles.

When the other clubs resume action tomorrow the eastern teams will be in the west and vice-versa in the National League. Attention will be focussed on three series.

Boston's rampaging Red Sox, having beaten the Yankees five straight, and given the champions their first real threat of the season, will open at Cleveland with an eight-game winning streak to nourish.

The Yankees will start their western swing at Detroit, where they lost their only western series the last time around. In an almost unprecedented mid-season slump, the Yanks must shake out of their doldrums to preserve or increase their 6 1-2 game lead.

Cincinnati's league-leading Reds will face the Giants in New York seeking retaliation for their loss of a series when the Terrymen went in the west recently. With Ival Goodman lost from the outfield for an expected two weeks because of a shoulder injury suffered in the All-Star game yesterday, the Reds have run into their first bad break of the season. The champions of the National League may hinge on how well they sustain his loss.

Chicago Cubs open at Philadelphia tomorrow night, in the American League Washington goes to St. Louis and Philadelphia to Chicago.

WAVE UPSETS BOAT 7 ARE RESCUED

Miner on Steamship Leaps 40 Feet to Water and Saves Two

Vancouver, July 12 (CP) — Five women and two small girls were rescued yesterday after a 36-foot gasoline launch rolled and threw them into the water at Anvil Island, twenty miles north of here.

Those rescued were Miss Elizabeth Kendall, Mrs. J. Ryan, Mrs. J. H. Smith, Miss Margaret Bain, all of Vancouver, Mrs. A. Wolfe of Anvil near New Westminster, BC., and her two daughters.

Passengers and freight for the small island settlement were transferred from the coastal steamship Lady Alexandra to the launch Valkyrie. The launch had just turned toward the shore when it was caught by a wave and turned partly over, throwing the passengers into the water.

James L. Blomak, a miner enroute from Vancouver to Britannia Mines, B.C., in search of employment, leaped 40 feet from the top deck of the steamship and held several of the party above water until a row boat from shore and a life boat from the Lady Alexandra were able to pick them up.

Japanese Blockading Three Additional Ports

Shanghai, July 12—(AP)— The Japanese Navy notified foreign consuls today that it was blockading three additional Fukien Province ports beginning Saturday and would not be responsible for safety of third power vessels at those ports thereafter.

British and United States officials were expected to give the same notice they have given previously—that they would hold Japanese responsible for damage to property or injury to their nationals. The ports to be blockaded are Chuanchow, Tungshan and Chasan.

HARDY PERENNIALS

"I love my garden, but I don't have much time and energy to spend on it.

You've probably noticed that most of it is planted in hardy perennials. They come up by themselves every year. I can depend on them—and I know exactly what they're going to be. My mother taught me that hardy perennials are the way to have the nicest garden in return for the least effort."

Advertised products are much like the hardy perennials in your garden. YOU KNOW YOU CAN DEPEND ON THEM. You'll find that buying advertised products will bring you the greatest values for the least expenditure of time and money.

Stick-to-it-ive-ness

By OSCAR SAUNDERS

"That young jackanapes has been here again!" Lucien Bancroft growled, coming into the house with the customary whirlwind entrance of his hand.

"Daddy!" his young daughter replied, "How did you know?"

"How could I help it? The place reeks with the odour of those smelly combinations he's always mixing."

"But, Daddy, he only wanted to show me—"

"See here, Mildred, I'm telling you for the last time, I forbid that boy the house. I'm not going to run the risk of being blown up any longer."

Lucien Bancroft, a power in the business world and a philanthropist at heart, hurried up the stairs to his private quarters, leaving his motherless daughter looking the picture of despair.

"That brainless idiot does make it hard for a fellow!" Bancroft told himself, closing th door and beginning to whistle into a convenient waste-basket. "Mildred's in love with him up to the hilt and I've got to think up something right away to break it off."

Gerry Whitthop, the young jackanapes and brainless idiot referred to, was the son of an old friend of Bancroft's.

During the father's lifetime Gerry has shown that worthy gentleman no end of worry because he insisted upon continually hewing limbs off after his father's sudden demise, when he continued in this line of work instead of taking his rightful place, a place which should by all means carefull preparation to take his father's place in the linen business, Bancroft, his father's old friend, was sorely troubled.

Today Bancroft was recalling how he had watched the prosperous Whitthrop linen business slip almost to the verge of bankruptcy.

He remembered with a poignant throb of regret that once it had been his and Win vcop's dearest wish that their children should marry, but how could he give his only daughter into the keeping of a crazy young madman who was wasting his sustenance and his time on making experiments?

Then he reached into a desk drawer for another. Whittling was Bancroft's hobby.

He could think clearer, so he said, when he was whittling, so he always carried a small piece of wood and a penknife conveniently at hand in his coat pocket.

After an hour of intensive reasoning he decided to take Mildred to Europe at once ,but first he would see Gerry Whitthop again and make one last appeal to the boy to give up his crazy work.

He could suggest that he prepare himself fittingly to be the husband of a splendid girl like Mildred.

Down deep in his heart Bancroft liked the boy and felt that he owed it to Gerrge father is by to do all to show the error of his way.

It wasn't as though the boy's concoctions ever amounted to anything. Bancroft himself had made a considerable portion of his money by finding the grain of sense hidden in the fantastic schemes of various men, but no one could possibly take any of Gerry's things seriously.

Orben he went downstairs Mildred was waiting for him, enthusiasm oozing from every inch of her healthy young body.

"Oh, daddy!" she exclaimed. "Gerry's just telephoned that he's sold two of his inventions to Sears & Lane!"

"Great Scott! That shows what a fool he is if nothing else does!" Bancroft thundered. "Sears & Lane! They'll skin themselves to the pennies from dead men's eyes! What did he sell to them? He's going over to see the rash young cuit! No, I don't want you to go with me. I'm going to say things a perfect lady should not hear!"

In spite of the months of revilling he had bestowed upon his old friend's son for wasting his time among herbs and roots and chemicals, bottles and vials and retorts, Gerry Whitthop was already appearing in a new light to Lucien Bancroft.

If Sears & Lane were interested in anything of Gerry's the boy must be doing something worth while. Sears & Lane were two of the shrewdest men in the country.

"What's this I hear about your selling out to Sears & Lane?" Bancroft exploded, bursting unceremoniously into Gerry's laboratory, plumping himself into the nearest chair and resting his whittling block upon the marble slab which topped the radiator. "Don't you know you'll give a boy like you the worst of it? Why didn't you come to me first? Why—"

"Mr. Bancroft," the boy interrupted humbly, "I had no idea you thinks you would hear what I had to say if I did come to you, and I wanted a start. Selling to Sears & Lane will give it to me. Others will feel as you do, realizing that if Sears & Lane are interested in the Winthrop formulas they must be worth something. I sold them two for $25 each. That's not much money, but I'll make up for it in the advertising I'll get."

"Well, of all fools you're the worst! Twenty-five dollars for anything they would look at twice! Why, they'll make thousand out of each one! What in—"

Bancroft arose in his excitement reached for the whittling block on the radiator.

He could not move it.

He tried again—same result.

"What's the matter here?" he demanded harshly.

"You must have laid that wood on some of my new adhesive, Mr. Bancroft," the young man answered coolly, stifling a chuckle.

"I've just perfected it. I expect it to hold all the buildings in the largest cathedrals in the world for centuries. I'm going to sell that to Sears & Lane, too—another twenty-five."

"You're going to do nothing of the sort, you young fool!" Bancroft yelled. "I'm going to back that discovery and we'll put it on the market ourselves. I'm not going to have gougers like Sears & Lane walking away with millions! Why, it's absurd like all get out!"

Bancroft brought his hand down to emphasis upon the slab.

It met the same fate as the block of wood. He turned wh eden of the rainbow, while his young friend nervously vainly to suppress his amusement.

"Laugh, you young nut!" Bancroft howled. "If you're so darn smart tell me how i'm going to get loos,; if you can."

"That's easy," Gerry answered, laughing outright. "You don't suppose I'd invent a perfect adhesive without discovering a solvent for it, do you? It's only a mixture of vinegar, salt and ammonia, but it does the trick right."

"Say, young fellow," Bancroft began, forcibly shaking the boy's free hand, "maybe it would be a good idea to apply some of this new stick-to-it-ive-ness to your future father-in-law's mouth occasionally when he gets too rambunctious, but be sure to have time to root for the product, and soon I suppose you and Millie might as well begin to make your plans. When it comes to stick-to-it-iveness I've certainly got to hand it to you, boy!"

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night and after supper we were wondering what to do, me saying, I'd beat you a game of Famous Authors.

No you wont, either, because I already know Famous Authors and you wouldn't beat me anyways, Artie said. You couldn't beat a fly, and if you think you could, go ahead and get a fly to play it with, now I'll get a game of Bingo? I said.

Nothing doing, I'll play you Famous Authors, Artie said, and I said, You only think you will.

What's going on around here, cant you fellows agree on anything? pop said, and I said, I went to agree to anything if he says it first, he wants to be the one that makes up everything, the bossy, that's a trouble with him.

O is that so? Artie says. Well Benny's the one that's bossy and he's just wanting he cant get away with it, he said, and pop said, Come come, isn't it bad enough to have the world's big shots going to play unless they can do all the arguing, without the little shots trying it out? Why dont you teach him how to play checkers or play checkers? he said.

Because why cant we play checkers first? Orlie said, and I said, Because checkers is baby stuff, didn't say so, and pop said, Well the arbitration says so now, start with checkers and then go on by uneasy stages to Famous Authors.

No sir, nothing doing, I didn't say not, I said, and pop said, Then you can both go right to bed and have pleasant bossy dreams.

The result being we compromised on a half a game of checkers and a half a game of Famous Authors, both having as many arguments as whole games.

Heavy purchases out of these ports last week were reported at 25,000 boxes, but the current season to date aggregated 19,000 boxes, representing an increase of 36,150 boxes, or in the neighborhood of 3,000 pounds, averaging 6 pounds to the box, over the 157,838 boxes shipped overseas in the corresponding period of last year.

DENIES FEDERAL ASPIRATIONS

Premier Hepburn Says His Interest in Federal Affair Not Personal

St. Thomas, Ont., July 12 (CP)— Premier Hepburn said in an interview yesterday he has "no federal aspirations whatsoever" and is not considering entering any national party set-up.

Referring to published reports he and Premier Duplessis of Quebec might join forces to oppose Prime Minister Mackenzie King at the next federal election, Mr. Hepburn refused to say what attitude he would take in a federal election campaign.

Because he was a personal friend of long standing with Conservative Leader Manion, and had personal goodwill and admiration for Mr. Manion did not mean he was going out and campaign for him, the premier added.

No Interference in Ridings.

Mr. Hepburn said he did not propose to interfere in the individual ridings in Ontario and had told Liberal members of the Ontario legislature in caucus that they were privileged to do as they could do as they saw fit in their own ridings. The Ontario Liberal Association had taken no action in respect to the anticipated federal election.

"Naturally I am interested in federal affairs 99% but from a personal political standpoint," Mr. Hepburn answered to a question of the position of his Hamilton riding up with a new national party movement.

HIGH EXPLOSIVE

many years, but never saw such a complete job. Whoever has planned this safe knew his business and must have taken terrific precautions," the charge, to completely rip off a 3-inch solid reinforced door, would have been sufficient to rock the entire neighborhood," stated Mr. C. J. Floyd, Toronto representative of the J. and J. Taylor Safe Works, who happened to be in Belleville and heard of the robbery today. Mr. Floyd personally went to the scene of the robbery.

Inner Box Open.

"Had the small inner cash box been locked the money would not have been stolen as our company guarantees that inner safety box as being completely burglar proof," Mr. Floyd assured The Ontario Intelligencer today.

"It was definitely the work of experts and they not only entered the building in a manner which, although open as knowing their business, but the fact they forced open the safe so cleanly also establishes their ability as proven safe robbers," was the statement of Chief Kidd, who personally conducted the police investigation after the robbery was reported this morning.

Frank Donnelson, manager of the Belleville Fruit Company, could throw no light on the robbery when interviewed this morning. "It seems strange that my place of business should be the centre of attack for robbers," lamented Mr. Donnelson as he viewed the office and safe wreckage today.

Safe Strewn About

Parts of the safe were strewn for some rod's around the office, one piece of heavy steel door being completely through a large office window, where it fell into the street, curtains and broke an outside window before bounding backwards across the floor.

Fortunately it paid out $565.50 in cash only yesterday morning as revealed Mr. Donnelson as he stated that the morning's take was but mind many cheques taking only cash in the estimated $851.00 loot.

FEWER WOMEN PEDESTRIANS STRUCK

Chicago, July 12 (AP)—The women walked their way to one of 1938's safest traffic safety records, the United States National Safety Council disclosed today.

The council's statistical bureau reported that the percentage of females among the nation's traffic pedestrian deaths last year was only 31.9.

Of the 1275,000 non-fatal injuries to pedestrians 33 per cent was included upon women.

Seeking to determine why women were less likely to be struck down men, Rufus Jasper, traffic engineer and secretary of the Council committee on Pedestrian Protection, believed women were "more safety conscious".

This requirement will apply against imports into Canada of the same group of fruits and vegetables. Such imports must meet Canadian import requirements and be certified by inspectors of the government of the departing country.

The fruits and vegetables affected by this new ruling are, apples, apricots, asparagus, beets, carrots (without tops), cabbage, cantaloupes, celery, cherries, pears, peaches, potatoes, onions (without tops), parsnips, peaches, pears, grapes, quinces, potatoes, rhubarb, rutabagas, tomatoes, extracted honey.

protesting from Protestant pulpits or Protestant societies and there is a subtle influence at work to stifle militant Orangeism."

Honor War Dead

Hamilton, July 12 (CP)—More than 800 persons, members of the Ladies' Orange Lodges and Juvenile organizations, left Hamilton today for Simcoe to participate in a celebration of the Glorious Twelfth. The majority of the delegation left here on a special train. On the way to the station tribute was paid to former members of the Order who gave their lives in the war, a brief halt being made at the cenotaph where a wreath was reverently placed.

Another wreath was placed aboard the train and later in the day it was placed at the foot of the war memorial in Simcoe.

Heading the parade was G. A. Whitehead, Grand Marshal, while the duties of Marshal were handled by Deputy Leader. The fife band, of which William Porter has been a member for more than half a century, provided the march music.

Every Walk in 84 Years

Mr. Porter said that not once in the 54 years he has had charge of the fife has he failed to attend the 12th of July parade.

Grand Chaplain marcher was William Clark, District Treasurer, who boasted of more than 50 years membership in the Order during which time he has never failed to observe July 12th.

Momentous Days in Europe

Toronto, July 12 (CP)— "We are all over Europe how freedom is being destroyed, and how the doctrine of Christ is not God, he was above all, is adhered to," said T. L. Church, M.P., speaking before a large audience of Orange enthusiasts at Exhibition Park.

"We are entering on the last six months of the year and they will be momentous ones for Christianity," he said.

"On the day of William and Mary no English sovereign had been able to advance a claim to the throne unless he was a member of a founded — as act of Parliament," said Mr. Mann.

"An English monarch is now as much the creature of an Act of Parliament as the pettiest taxpayer in his realm," he said.

Canada All To Britain

"Today Canadians know in their hearts that all we have is rendered they owe to Britain. Their very existence depends on the British Navy."

Hillyard Birmingham, Toronto County Master, declared that it was time Protestants took a definite stand on these three matters:

"Must take effective steps to see that the Protestant cause in Canada is given its proper place, particularly in respect to Roman Catholic immigration.

"Must carry effort be made to keep Canada an active working democracy, and not a dictatorship "not something of a neutral and unrecognized nature.

"That we come with all our might, totalitarianism, whether it be Fascism, Nazism or Italism.

"Canadians, however, must not be misled. They are not in the least vast half continent to settle, hidden wealth to bring to the surface, power to develop and thus create industrial expansion."

Meteor Lights Up Bird Sanctuary, Loud Noise Heard

Huge Meteor Blazes Trail Over 5 States and Causes Panic in Canada

Kingsville, Ont., July 13—(CP)— A meteor which passed over southwestern Ontario last night lit up the Jack Miner bird sanctuary here and was visible clearly to persons in the ground after a ball game on the grounds. About five minutes after the meteor was seen, a loud noise like a heavy explosion, or which lasted a minute.

Reports from Detroit, Ann Arbor, residents of five States and Ontario sought trace today of a huge meteor which lit the sky as it fell and broke over an area of several hundred miles.

Thousands in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York and Ontario saw the phenomenon about 9:45 p.m. EDT Tuesday. Newspaper offices and officials were deluged with telephone calls.

Reports varied widely as to the height of the meteor. Jack Miner, bird witnesses believe it may have come down over Lake Erie. Others thought it fell in Lake St. Clair or in Ontario.

Some authorities said its final burst of flame may have consumed it before it reached the earth.

The meteor was seen as far east as Rochester, N. Y., as far south as Cincinnati, O., and as far north Michigan to the west.

Prof. Lincoln Lahtet, S. J., in charge of the John Carroll University observatory, said he believed the meteor was seen about 30 miles up in the sky and that it landed west of Erie. He described a smoky tail on the meteor as sah, red, orange and Canadian observers said they saw an intense flame ahead.

Quiet Twelfth at Belleville

The spirit of "The Glorious Twelfth", was observed quietly in Belleville because there was no "walk" here but elsewhere throughout the district, at Canniffon and Coleman, Frankford, Trenton and Brighton, Orangemen and their friends assembled in their lodge rooms and then marched to the east. During the earlier hours of the afternoon members of the order had left by cars for the centres of various demonstrations.

Special cars passed through the lower section of the city, crossing the lower bridge, headed west. One truck bearing twenty-five or more lodge adherents carried a small band of fife and drum, the shrill and beat of which advertised its coming long before it could be seen.

Decorated With Fresh Oranges

An automobile decorated with fresh oranges, spiked and wired to radiator grill and lamps and with long orange streamers fluttering in the wind, carried another party of shouting visitors on direct passage through lower Front Street.

Orange lilies in some of the stores predominated, though, according to one member of the Order, this flower was difficult to find in proper growth and color this year.

Rain Threat Disappears

The previously threats of rain which hung suspended over the district during the early part of the day did not materialize, and by noon bright sunshine glowed through the clouds.

The Mohawk Orange Lodge was the first passed through the city shortly before noon today on its way to the celebration.

Among the speakers at Orange demonstrations today in this district were Er-Mayor George A. Reid of Belleville, Orange Grand Master, M.P., county master for Lennox and Addington; who spoke at Napanee, Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., at Madoc; and Dr. Harold E. Welsh, M.P.P., of Realm and Mr. George Wells of Madoc, at Boulter.

Gain in Cheese and Butter Exports

Toronto, July 12—Further price shading occurred in undergrade graded eggs, while butter and cheese showed little change from the previous day, on the Toronto open produce market Tuesday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Canadian export shipments of both butter and cheese continued to show substantial improvement over last year, it was indicated in the department report.

Amount of butter shipped out of Montreal and Quebec ports last week totalled 2,455 boxes, bringing shipments since the first of May to 47,500 boxes, which compare with only 600 boxes exported in the similar period of 1938. Heavy purchases out of these ports last week were reported at 25,000 boxes, but the current season to date aggregated 19,000 boxes, representing an increase of 36,150 boxes, or in the neighborhood of 3,000 pounds, averaging 6 pounds to the box, over the 157,838 boxes shipped overseas in the corresponding period of last year.

Fair demand for top grade eggs steadied prices on these grades on the egg range, but the lower grades remained easy. Prices eased off for undergrades in the graded and ungraded table eggs, while values were unchanged. Graded shipments closed at 2c for A large, 21c for medium, 16 1-2c for B, and 14 1-2c for C grade. Eggs graded at 16c to 19c in the retail section, and grade C at 16c to 17c. For C. Receipts, 662 cases.

Storage Stocks Favorable

The butter market maintained a steady tone, although trading was now so active in the afternoon. Yesterday Ontario creamery solids sold at 22 1-4c for No. 1 grades. No sales were recorded in the Western product, but holders were asking in the vicinity of 22 1-2c. Reflecting the previous day's improvement in the wholesale market, prints were stronger at 23 1-2c to 24c for top grades.

Steady trade prevailed on the cheese market. A few sales were made in Ontario at unchanged to 1-2c higher prices, with the unchanged prices of 13c for new, large parchment, 13 1-2c for twins, and 13 1-2c for triplets.

Montreal Butter, Eggs Weaken

Montreal, July 12 (CP)—Egg and butter offerings eased slightly on the Montreal produce market, while potato and cheese prices ruled unchanged, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter was unable to retail-any better for 23-23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2—23 3-4c. Western eggs in limited supply and demand unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized 23c. Wholesale prices unchanged.

Receipts, 1,257 boxes.

Ontario white cheese was quoted at 12 3-4c a pound and colored at 12 7-8c. Quebec white was quoted at 12 1-8c and colored at 12 3-8c. Receipts, 9,461 boxes.

Canadian egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 24 cents in Montreal.

Majority of good ewe and wether lambs sold at $11, with few at $11.25. Bucks were $10 and culls $8. Sheep sold at $3 to $3.50 cwt.

MANION PLEDGES

Speaks In French.

Speaking in French to a wholly French-speaking audience, he said: "The antagonism which exists between Ontario and Quebec is wholly attributable to a certain misunderstanding. I have always lived in Ontario and I can tell you, in all sincerity, that the majority of the people of my province entertain the greatest sentiments of friendship and regard for Quebec and I hope that I may in some measure do a good deal to maintain and augment this understanding between the two great races who have established the foundations of our dominion."

Under Prime Minister Mackenzie King, discord had never been greater, Dr. Manion said. It had reached the point where Premier Hepburn, the Liberal leader in Ontario, had denounced the Liberal leader at Ottawa. Canada was one nation and could progress only if all governments, Dominion and Provincial, cooperated.

If elected, Dr. Manion assured his audience that he would bring about the necessary co-operation, not only with Ontario and Quebec but with all nine provinces.

Dunn, Sask., — Most of the products of Canadian farms were consumed in Canada, and governments should pay more attention to getting fair prices for the farmers and reducing the spread between producers and consumers.

Make Farming Attractive.

"We should do all in our power to make farming more attractive to our boys," he said, "not only to have good farmers but to enable them to take pride in the ownership of land and to enjoy an independence they can find nowhere else than on the farm."

Ferdinand Paradis, Union Nationale member of the Quebec legislature for Matapedia, was on the platform at the meeting and announced that he was independent and would support the best man at the next Dominion election. He was the first elected supporter of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec to attend one of Dr. Manion's Quebec meetings.

As Dr. Manion reaffirmed his opposition to unification or amalgamation of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, an express train rocked by the meeting place near the railway tracks. The sudden appearance of the train seemed to delight the crowd of 2,500, largest and most enthusiastic audience to greet the Conservative leader so far during his tour.

Canadian Minister to Japan. The government has not yet appointed a successor to Ambassador Bruce, last Minister at Tokyo, whose resignation was announced in January.

There are nine vacancies in the Senate but these are not likely to be filled until it is certain there is to be a general election as soon or then at least are expected to go to present Members of Parliament, possibly Cabinet Ministers.

No announcement has been made concerning House of Commons vacancies which must be filled in by-elections if a general election is not to be held this fall. There are now four Commons vacancies, Calgary West, through resignation of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Kent (Ont.) through death of Dr. J. W. Rutherford, Jacques-Cartier (Montreal) through death of Vital Gagnelette, and Saskatoon through the death of Dr. A. M. Young. All but Calgary West were held by the Liberal party.

Election This Fall?

A decision on the date for the next general election is to be expected for some weeks but it is believed here the government will decide to hold it rather than make some development in the European situation resolve it inadvisable.

About half the Cabinet Members are away from Ottawa, some on semi-political missions and others on official business or holidaying, but it is expected there will be well over the necessary number for a quorum when today's meeting assembles.

Bastille Day.

Preparing another demonstration of Anglo-French military unity, the French authorities completed arrangements for participation of British planes, sailors, troops and military leaders, including War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, in the Bastille Day celebrating Friday the 150th anniversary of the French revolution.

Germany received reports of yesterday's mass flight and Paris press comment on the striking radius of British and French Air Forces with reminders in her own press of German air power.

Meanwhile, supplementary British budget estimates disclosed a plan to expand foreign publicity. The estimates called for £110,000, (about $414,000) for such work.

An additional £80,000 (about $197,000) was set aside for the Home Office for establishment of a ministry of information to "collect and circulate information and "to counter, act foreign misrepresentations of British policy."

Purpose of Flight.

The Royal Air Force training flight over France was mainly designed to facilitate technical improvements and to enable British fliers to become better acquainted with unknown terrain, the large provincial dailies said.

"The chief reasons for this flight are technical," the Manchester Guardian (Liberal) said. "Our new long-distance bombers hardly have room to exercise in these islands where 300 miles each way is the longest direct flight that can be undertaken.

"Also it will be better training for pilots and observers to steer a course over unknown country. But the significance of these flights will not be missed either by the allies or by the axis powers. It proves our readiness, if need be, to take part instantly in any war that may break out on the continent.

Not Purely Propagandist.

"It would be a mistake to imagine that the purpose of these Royal Air Force flights over France is purely or mainly propagandist," the Yorkshire Post (Conservative) said. "The fact is that Britain has become relatively too small and its landmarks too familiar to provide our long-distance pilots and navigators with a satisfactory test.

"In the event of a war a certain number of fighter squadrons would certainly operate from French bases. Sector reconnaissance that is a good knowledge of the area over which it will have to fight—is essential to the efficient operations of a fighter squadron in war."

Germans Resident.

Berlin, July 12 (AP)—The mass flight of British bombing planes over France and French newspaper comment on the demonstration brought a flood of angry headlines in the Berlin press today.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Volkischer Beobachter inquired: "Is squalntanceship with the German air force desired?"

All Berlin papers quoted the comment of Paris-Midi to the effect that the British planes had a radius of action which "would confront the population of Nuremberg, Leipzig and Hamburg.

Voelkischer Beobachter's headlined response was: "Paris Picks a Fight". There followed this statement:

"The newspaper overlooks one trifle in its more than clumsy attempt at intimidation.

"The German air force which secured immortal fame for itself in bloody battles in Spain, which has conquered one international record after another and stands today at the peak of all the air fleets of the world, has a radius of action of which these newspapers apparently still have no idea."

Germans Claim Best Guns.

Boersenzeitung said Germany has the best anti-aircraft guns and "countless modern bombers whose fighting power and radius of action surpass considerably the corresponding capacities of the British and French air forces.

"It appears to us therefore that it is should come to certain eventualities' the populations of Manchester, Birmingham or Edinburgh, or of Marseille, Toulouse or Bordeaux would be confronted by these events' realities far more than the people of Nuremberg, Hamburg or Leipzig."

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Liquid air! There are temperatures and pressures occurring on the earth that would cause air to pass from its natural gaseous to a liquid state, which phenomenon is known as liquefaction of air. But air may be liquefied by artificial processes of compression, cooling and expansions. First of all water vapor and carbon dioxide are extracted by chemicals. Air becomes liquid at 313 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, and is kept in a thermos bottle. Milk, vegetable oils, and fats are used in the manufacture of ammonia; the remaining oxygen is used for steels, and when combined with charcoal and cotton waste is used as an explosive in mining.

Captain Sick and Worried Over Loss Of Boat by Which He Earned Living

Halifax, July 13 (CP) — Sick, weary and worried over the loss of the 40-foot motorboat with which he earned his living, Captain Henry Boudreau left a hospital bed in here today while a Royal Canadian Mounted Police cutter searched for the missing craft.

Boudreau and his son, Charles, became separated from the motorboat while setting out their trawls off Sable Island early last night in a fog which, Boudreau said, "came in fast and just fell down around us." He made it impossible for them to locate the larger boat.

They rowed all night to keep themselves warm, and were still lugging away on the oars yesterday afternoon when they heard the sound of Sambro Lightship's "foghorn".

Word was flashed from the lightship to Halifax about the middle of the afternoon that the pair had been picked up. Then came word from another son of the captain, set out in a motorboat to bring them back weary and worried over the loss of the 40-foot motorboat with which he earned his living. Captain Henry Boudreau was taken to his home and placed under medical care.

"I wasn't afraid. I never get afraid," he told reporters at his bedside. "I've never seen anything like the way that fog settled around us."

Asked how he felt, he said: "Never mind. I'm all right. It won't make any difference if they don't find the Oraget. She's all I have."

It was Boudreau's second such experience in a week. He and John Smith of Halifax spent three days at sea when the Oraget's single engine broke down last week off the Halifax. They were rescued after Casey rowed more than seventeen miles in the same dory to reach Halifax and send aid to the captain.

MANITOBA FAVORS BARTER SCHEME

Premier Bracken Announces Decision to Proceed With Co-operative Trade Plans

Winnipeg, July 13 (CP)—After consulting with his cabinet last night, Premier John Bracken announced that Manitoba would go through with the Canada-Germany plans despite objections in Ottawa.

The plans involve exchange of Manitoba products, to the $300,000 worth of German electrical equipment.

The Premier who left shortly after the announcement for Ottawa, plans to attend Confederation's 75th anniversary ceremonies, said he would discuss the implications of the German-Canadian tariff trade agreement in connection with the scheme.

Premier Bracken said Hon. W. D. Euler, Trade and Commerce minister, had objected to the proposals as he said, not normally. She had dragged her leg for 14 years.

Her husband, who lost his faith in 1908 when an earthquake in Italy wiped out his entire family, went to church yesterday for the first time in 31 years. He said his wife's recovery was a "miracle of God."

Electric Eye Guards London Defences, Aims Anti-Aircraft Guns

London, July 13 (CP)—New anti-aircraft guns, linked by an electric eye are capable of hunting 56-pound shells seven miles at a rate of 30 a minute, "now ring London, the Star, evening newspaper, said today.

The newspaper said every air-plane coming near the city day or night is reported and "covered" by three guns as a matter of manoeuvre.

CAN SELL FOR $200

Dresden, Ont., July 13 (CP)—Dr. Lido Smith of Chatham had an 88-pound chunk of meteor on his hands today—price $4—but wasn't sure just what to do with it.

"I don't know why I bought it," the oil prospector said. "I thought it would be nice to have."

But 88 pounds of meteor wouldn't be an attractive watch-fob or a dining table ornament. Professor C. A. Chant, director emeritus of the Dunlap Observatory near Toronto, estimates a good meteorite or the size of Dr. Smith's in market-able condition would be worth from $200 up.

NAVAL OFFICIALS SEEKING CAUSE

Explosion and Spectacular Fire Damages Huge Aircraft Carrier

Norfolk, Va., July 13 (AP)—United States Naval officials sought the cause today of a spectacular fire which damaged the huge aircraft carrier Ranger and injured seven enlisted men.

A muffled roar came from the water line amidship the 735-foot vessel, witnesses said, and flames swept over the main and flight decks for a breadth of 200 feet. Firemen at the Norfolk Navy Yard where the Ranger was docked for repairs, battled the blaze for three hours before it was brought under control late yesterday.

Captain H. E. Kepp of the Navy Yard said: "We do not know what was responsible for the explosion." Unofficial reports said, however, that gasoline being loaded on the ship probably was touched off in some manner.

Trenton, Ont., July 13 (CP)—Mayor R. R. Cory, President of the Ontario Mayors' Association, announced today an executive meeting of the organization has been called for Toronto July 19 to hold a general discussion on the Federal Government offer of financial aid to municipalities for Public Works.

Mayor George W. Wilson of Kitchener voiced a demand yesterday for the immediate calling of the association to deal with Premier Mitchell Hepburn's rejection of the federal offer.

Labor Minister Rogers announced three days ago that the Provincial Government was prepared to share equally with Ontario municipalities the costs of works projects for unemployment relief. Premier Hepburn said he would not have nothing to do with the scheme, branding it "political bribery" to induce "an orgy of spending" on "the eve of an election."

Eastern Ontario Farmers Benefit By Board Action

Trade Minister Euler Announces Today Decision of Canadian Wheat Board in Relation to Eastern Canada

CABINET APPROVES

Price Applies to 1939 Crop and Becomes Effective from August 1 to June 30 of 1940

Ottawa, July 13 (CP)—The Canadian Wheat Board's 70-cent initial price for 1939 spring wheat, has been extended to include winter wheat grown in Eastern Canada, Trade Minister Euler announced today.

The cabinet approved recommendation of the Canadian Wheat Board that a price of 70 cents a bushel, basis delivered at Montreal, be paid for No. 1 Canada Eastern Winter Wheat, No. 2 Canada Eastern Red Winter and No. 1 Canada Eastern Mixed Winter Wheat. This price applies to the 1939 crop and becomes effective from Aug. 1, 1939, to June 30, 1940.

The price equivalent for milling grades other than those named, will be fixed "shortly", the minister said.

Nearly Twenty Million Bushels.

Last year Ontario grew 19,614,000 bushels of winter wheat. The winter wheat was grown east of Ontario too. Quebec grew 758,000 bushels of spring wheat, Nova Scotia produced 54,000 bushels, New Brunswick 180,000 and Prince Edward Island 180,000. Almost no winter wheat is grown in Manitoba, Ontario but spring wheat production there ranges from about 200,000,000 to 400,000,000 bushels, except for wider variation in a few extreme years.

Comparatively little wheat of the grade used as a basis for the government's initial price is produced in Ontario but other grades will probably be paid for in proportion.

Winter wheat, a soft wheat, is planted in the autumn, usually in parts of the country where the climate is less severe. Spring wheat, a hard wheat with milling quality qualities of its own, is sown in late spring and matures, in little more than ninety days, the period varying according to variety.

Nazis Open Drive on Alcohol And Tobacco

Berlin, July 13.—(AP)—With Chancellor Hitler as the inspiration Nazis opened a nationwide campaign against tobacco, the formation of a "state bureau against the dangers of alcohol and nicotine."

For months Nazis have advocated restrictions in drinking and smoking, especially in appeals to the Hitler Youth. Hitler, who himself smokes nor drinks, is held up constantly as the nation's model.

The "state bureau" to study the dangers of alcohol and tobacco" will operate parallel to the Nazi party set-up of provincial and district headquarters. All other organizations dealing with problems will be incorporated into the State Bureau or will co-operate with it.

Nazi party officials are to help carry the crusade directly to the people through demonstrations, lecture courses and exhibits based on the bureau's findings. Special work will be touched to dramatize their findings with printed material, picture slides and films.

RESTRICTIONS ARE RELAXED

British Concession Receives Normal Supply of Milk

Tientsin, July 13 (AP)—Japanese troops blockading the British and French concessions relaxed their restrictions today on the British area's milk supply, permitting entrance of a nearly normal amount.

Instead of searching the bottles for poison as in the past, the Japanese merely counted them. The blockade was started June 14.

The British escort vessel Sandwich was schedule to arrive today, the French vessel Lavoisier, which had hurried to Tsingtao after mobstoned the British Consulate and the British Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank on Monday, left for an undisclosed destination, to be replaced at Tsingtao by the 1,375-ton destroyer Dragonne.

British authorities charged the attacks at Tsingtao were Japanese-inspired. The consulate there protested to Japanese and notified them of information that similar demonstrations were being planned for Friday and Saturday.

Japanese were asked to furnish military protection and were told they would be held responsible for any damage."

The first of the home grown tomatoes are also being picked, and a fair production of this vegetable is ripening on the vines, according to the office. NEW MEANS OF MAKING PURCHASES

Visiting shoppers have found new means of making purchases in Front street stores, and local merchants lately have been co-operating fully in the matter of providing curb service to them.

Yesterday it was observed by Constable Harold Taylor, a motorist evidently apprehensive over the thought of having his car logged for overstaying the half hour limit in the parking area while he was away making purchases, pulled up in front of a downtown shoe store and attracted the attention of a clerk.

"I want a pair of shoes," requested the driver through the open car window.

Several pairs of shoes were brought to the shelves to the car, and while the clerk sat beside him on the front seat the driver tried on one pair after another, selected the best fit, paid for his purchase and drove away.

'S. A.' PURCHASES RESIDENCE FOR LOCAL OFFICER

Mr. B. W. Brown Sells His Henry Street Dwelling Which will become Residence for Officers in Charge of Salvation Army

"The old order changeth, giving place to new", as the Salvation Army Citadel, which is on the point of being demolished to make way for a new citadel. For the fifty-two years or so of the work of the Army" in Belleville, the officer in charge of the local corps has resided at the west end of the building where living quarters were provided.

Major H. S. Alderman, the present officer of the Belleville branch will be the last one to reside within a Belleville citadel, for the new building will have no provision for living quarters, it having been deemed advisable that the officer should have the privilege of dwelling outside of the citadel. Next week the Major and his family will move to a residence which has been purchased by the Salvation Army for the use of Major Alderman and his successors.

Today work is being put through a deal whereby the fine brick residence of Mr. B. W. Brown, one of the members of the Army, becomes the property of the Salvation Army. This is located at 43 Henry Street in a very desirable portion of the west side of the city.

Demolition of the old building of the "Army" will begin shortly. Interest attaches to the cornerstone which has been the centre of the work of the Army for many years, for many more. Thousands of lives have been influenced at the penitent form which is a part of the stone at 256 Pinnacle Street. Into it have come and through it have flowed influences which have marked many lives and which have helped to terminate the Christian character of this city.

When the work of tearing down the citadel to make way for the new building is begun, it will be carried through with expedition and the construction of the new citadel will be started immediately.

Such a change in the life of a corps or congregation like this means arrangement of many details. Provision has been made to house the movable property of the corps during the interim, which will likely last for three months. Arrangements have not yet been completed for a place for services during the time the old corps is without its regular place of worship. These are expected to be arranged in a few days.

Clark, of 192 Bridge Street East, well-known throughout Belleville and this district, died very suddenly at his summer cottage at Presqu'Ile, News of his unexpected demise came as a great shock to his family and many friends, who, while they knew he had not enjoyed good health for a number of years, did not anticipate his death. Some years ago on account of poor health he was obliged to retire from the retail meat business which he had conducted for some years. Eight Lodges are Represented At District Walk at Cannifton

ADDRESSES GIVEN

In typical 12th of July weather Orangemen from the immediate district were guests of L.O.L. No. 2206, Cannifton, at the celebration of the Battle of the Boyne, this year being the 249th anniversary of that historic event. The celebration was somewhat dimmed as no ladies' lodges paraded, the majority from this district going to Watertown, N.Y., for the monster celebration held at that point. However more than 250 Orangemen representing eight district lodges paraded through the village of Cannifton from a grove opposite the Cannifton public school and on their return to the grounds the gathering was entertained with addresses suitable to the occasion.

The parade was marshalled by George McCullough and Arnold Mitchell and the whole parade was led by the fine Stirling band resplendent in their red blazers and white duck trousers. Following the band marched the County Master, James N. Hartt, with George F. Reid, Grand Treasurer of the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario. Lodges in order were L.O.L. No. 942, Shannonville; L.O.L. No. 774, Belleville; L.O.L. No. 2286, Wallbridge; L.O.L. No. 59, Mohawk Reserve; L.O.L. No. 2, Foxboro; L.O.L. No. 179, Plainfield; L.O.L. No. 205, Tyendinaga; L.O.L. No. 206, Trenton. Accompanying each lodge was a fife and drum corps and the musicians beat a merry tune the entire length of the parade and at the conclusion gathered in one large circle within the grounds put on a program that was a delight to the many Orangemen present. Scattered about the grounds were many wearing badges that did not take part in the parade owing to the intense heat and advanced age but that did not dim their enthusiasm for they thoroughly enjoyed themselves under the shade of a tree talking of other years in that had gone before. Some of the older Orangemen were taken the length of the parade in motor cars and many the handclasp and the wave of the hand they received along the route of march. Shannonville lodge received the prize for the best lodge on parade.

Many Enjoy Ball Game.

Returning to the grounds many of the spectators who numbered close to two thousand, wended their way to the speaking platform while others meandered over to the baseball lot where a league game was played between Foxboro and Cannifton and which resulted in a win for the visitors. On the platform was assembled the leading speakers of the district and the whole assembly was welcomed by William T. Cole, secretary of Cannifton Lodge, in turn turned the meeting over to the county master who acted as chairman of the afternoon in a most capable manner. He congratulated the Cannifton brethren on their fine arrangements for the celebration and the enthusiasm with which the visiting brethren were welcomed.

Rev. F. C. Beazer was the first speaker of the afternoon and he told his listeners the defeat of James gave birth to the Bill of Rights which gave equal rights to all and special privileges to none. He also stated this incident was the birth of democracy and the preservation of Protestant faith. Mr. Beazer stated that the democracies of the world were now calling the bluff of Hitler and Mussolini and also counteracting the propaganda that is being spread in this country, where over 500,000 German Canadians and 100,000 Italian Canadians, who he believed were fertile fields for the spy system. "Hitler and Mussolini," said the speaker, "covet the nickel, gold, and wheat of this country; in fact they covet the whole of Canada." Turning to the spread of the Catholic religion, he spoke of South America and showed the absence of moral influence in the religion of that country.

Rev. A. L. Geen Heard.

The speaker also touched on the Papacy of Ireland and said the record of that rule was profoundly discreditable to them. He stated that the Orange order remained the bulwark against the domination of the Catholic religion and that people were living in the most momentous period of the world's history and that the Orange Order still had the same mission to perform as it did in the time of William of Orange.

Rev. A. L. Geen in his fine, forceful stalwart and full of fire and energy was the guest of the evening. He stated that the Orange Society was for the mutual benefit of all because it taught loyalty and christianity. He deplored the fact that the Orange order like the churches had members not faithful to their obligation and he hoped that his visit would reach those members who were not regular attendants at church. "As for loyalty we may have to prove it in the very near future just as we had to prove it not so many years ago," said the speaker. He praised the visit of the King and Queen to Canada and he was of the opinion that the visit would bind us still closer to the mother country.

Praises the King and Queen.

"Our Queen is very sweet and beautiful," said Mr. Geen, "and she displayed along with her husband no pride nor haughtiness and we took them to our hearts."

Mr. Geen denounced Hitler and Mussolini in strong words stating that he was sure that Hitler would come to the same end that Napoleon and others came to that thought they could rule the world by force.

In closing he exhorted his fellow Orangemen to live closer to God and attend the church of their choice regularly.

Rev. W. C. Craig of Deseronto stated that Orangeism was first introduced to give freedom to man to worship God as his conscience led him and in this way a secret order was founded, which led to the open Bible. He asked his listeners to be tolerant and stated that the fault he saw with the Orange order was the lack of co-operation and carrying through of their obligation. In closing he asked all his brethren to be a little more brotherly.

Separate School Grants.

Rt. Wor. Bro. H. B. Petterly, Past Grand Master of Ontario East, after congratulating the Cannifton Lodge on their fine celebration and the Stirling band on their fine appearance and excellent music launched into a discussion of the Separate School Act and the holding of public offices by Catholics. Mr. Petterly gave a brief history of the Separate School Act stating it became operative in 1863 and became part of the British North America Act, when the Dominion was united in 1867. "Taxes are taken from the public schools to help pay for these separate schools," the speaker said. Jumping from the early date to the present era, he stated that on behalf of separate schools it had been stated if certain concessions were given in the early formation of the schools, no further requests would be made but they did make further requests on Premier Hepburn soon after he assumed office and the requests were granted. "The Orange order," he said, "protested vehemently against these further concessions and the people of East Hastings alarmed him so he repealed the Act but the premier took the attitude if it was going to cause so much trouble to give three concessions openly, he would still give them but in the form of special grants.

"The system gave a concise example of how the special grants work, showing that five families in one community can apply and receive permission to open a separate school and if the easement is not sufficient to keep the school going the government come to the aid with special grants. He also cited a case of a one-roomed separate school being turned into a convent where a $5,000 payroll for teachers was established and the pupils, now approximately $3,000 of that amount in special grants.

Mr. Petterly said: "I submit there are thousands of dollars being diverted to separate schools and they are clamoring for more."

Turning to the question of public offices, the speaker declared that England had a great number of Catholics in high places. Were the Foreign Secretary in the British Cabinet, asked the speaker and answered the question by stating he was a Catholic, Viscount Halifax. He also said that the Ministers from Britain to Norway, Sweden and Spain were all Roman Catholics and that the United States' Minister to Britain, Joseph Kennedy was a Catholic, also that the Postmaster General and the Attorney General of the United States were Catholics.

Would Abolish Separate Schools.

Continuing the speaker declared that 90 members of the present Dominion government were Catholics and 95 per cent of them were followers of Hitler. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. "The members of this denomination are working all the time to get in the Protestant ranks, believe their aim is to get possession of Canada," said Mr. Petterly. "They control the press, the radio and they own the films shown. There is only one way to counteract this forward movement and that is constant vigilance and education and that forming in every school section of a Public School Defense League who will oppose all measures detrimental to the Protestant. I am firmly convinced the time has arrived to start a movement to abolish the separate schools."

Rev. W. G. Mercer told his listeners that the Orange Order was a great organization but that it had its faults and failings the same as any other society. He favored the main dangers were the internal forces that were at work today. "If we are celebrating a historic event that changed the whole course of the world," said Mr. Mercer, "yet the world today is sitting on a powder keg.

"I think we're becoming indifferent in that we don't attend our lodge nor our churches."

William of Orange.

He stated that the Battle of the Boyne stood all causes and that William of Orange was a great statesman, a great soldier and a great hero. He praised the work of Wycliffe, of Huss the open Bible and John Huss, the Bohemian for bringing us back to Christ and Martin Luther for bringing us back to the Cross.

The speaker praised both the King and Queen for the visit and for perfect their recent visit had on Canada.

W. C. Mikel, K.C., always prominent at the Orange walks in this district, added his word of praise for the fine celebration and exhorted all the members to be true to their obligations. A number of fine stories of the early history of Orangism in this district were told by the speaker who is one of the most conversant men on early Bay of Quinte district history in this part of the province. Rev. A. Armstrong, minister at the Cannifton United Church expressed the thanks of all the lodge members for the fine turnout. The meeting was closed with the National Anthem and the assembly broke up in little groups to enjoy an old-time visit and to hear the fife and drum bands making merry on the grounds.

Banners, bands and color were the order of the day as the "glorious twelfth," sacred to all Orangemen, was celebrated with its usual parade and monster picnic in Toronto. More than 10,000 men, women and children wended their way through miles of the city streets, and a small section of the parade is seen here as it passed the city hall. Crowds lined the entire route for a march that had as an added feature this year something of the royal touch to many of the displays, in the wake of the recent visit to Canada of Their Majesties.

GREATER BRITAIN OF THE AIR

Britain this week took the first step in long air cruises when a dozen squadrons of the R.A.F. flew to southwest France and back again without mishap and in perfect exhibition of flying. French squadrons are to visit Britain and British and French air fleets are going to fly to Poland and their other allies.

It will be Wings over part of Europe' at least. The immediate effect was enlightenment to the German people and the Nazi-inspired press cast up the prowess of German airmen in Spain.

One year ago no one would have thought of British and French air forces acting so completely in conjunction and flying about Europe and the North Sea, down to the Mediterranean and perhaps into the Levant and Greece and Turkey. That was an idea that the astute Hitler didn't think of and the Briton has beaten him to it.

The idea is that airmen need to know the terrain of their country's allies and that the longer range of planes in these days demands long cruises for the airplanes.

This is the sign of a Britain highly armed for defence, a new Britain which has girded herself against threats from a certain quarter of Europe.

AFTER DANZIG?

One of the Polish newspapers, the semi-official Gazeta Polska, sees a possible change of front on the part of Germany in the form of a more reasonable attitude in the next few months, which might make it possible to negotiate a "simpler" statute for Danzig. It points out that the Germans have their own inability of isolating Poland and that Germany may be expected to show a little good will.

The simpler statute for Danzig would maintain Danzig as a free city, independent of the Reich, remaining in customs union with Poland and submitting Polish rights to no outside control of any sort.

The Gazeta Polska says that Hitler's actions last March lacked the realism and intuition which have characterized him, and that now he is playing a very prudent game, joining excellent sense to audacity. It blames the coup of last March when he drew up the claims against Poland on the opinion of his entourage "among whom are courtiers and careerists".

The tension has eased. But Britain is not letting up on her rearmament. She is doing the best she can and it be possible for peace. Britain does not arm for war, she arms to prevent war in the first instance and if necessary to defend herself and allies against aggression.

It is said that Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop keeps insisting that Britain would not fight in any event. Britain fought in 1914-1918 and Germany, it is said, depended upon her not fighting. Germany lost. Britain knows that is aggression had its way the plight of the democracies would be tragic. Mr. Chamberlain has shown Britain's might and his well-power and the lesson eases. Probably some one is not taking von Ribbentrop at his word, for it pays to be prudent.

175th ANNIVERSARY OF NEWSPAPER

How old is Canada? As old as the world, as old as the years which have passed since Jacques Cartier landed at Gaspe and named the country for France, or have passed since the Cabots touched Cape Breton, or it may be estimated in the years of development of the province and the general growth of Canada.

It also may be measured in the number of years during which the press has served the public and helped to guide public opinion. When it comes to the press the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph has the oldest lineage, ante-dating any newspaper now in existence in Canada. To mark this one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary, the Chronicle-Telegraph has issued an anniversary number. It was established in the heart of French-Canada in the ancient capital of Canada, and it has been the special function of the paper to act as a medium of liasion between English and French thought. It has discharged its mission in a manner to command the respect and confidence of both racial elements.

The Quebec Gazette from which the Chronicle-Telegraph stems, was first published on June 21st., 1764, and was second only to the Halifax Gazette which has long since become the Official Gazette of Nova Scotia. In North America the Quebec Gazette has but a single contemporary, the Courant of Hartford, Conn., founded in the same year as itself. It has priority even over the London Times in point of age and was preceded by only four papers now published in Britain.

Scholars of Canadian history know the story of the siege of Quebec in 1775-76. The records of that struggle were recorded in the Gazette.

The edition is one which gives a clear impression of the history of the city of Quebec and the Province and of the growth of Canada. Among its latest records are the pictures of the royal tour in May of this year which began at Quebec.

WE GO THIS WAY BUT ONCE

We go this way but once, O heart of mine,
So why not make the journey well worth while,
Giving to him who travel on with us
A helping hand, a word of cheer, a smile?

We go this way but once. Ah! never more
Can we go back along the self-same way,
To get more out of life, undo the wrong,
Or speak love's words we knew but did not say.

We go this way but once. Then let us make
The road we travel blossomy and sweet
With helpful, kindly deeds and tender words,
Smoothing the path for bruised and stumbling feet.

SPEED AND MORE SPEED, AMAZING SPEED—skimming over the water like live things. Seeming to fly out of the water entirely, modern speed boats certainly present a fascinating sight, and the spectator of the worlds speed boats are on their way to Belleville to take part in the International Speed Boat Regatta to be held on the Bay of Quinte, off Massassaga Park on Civic Holiday, the first Monday in August. This will be an official regatta sanctioned and directed by the American Power Boat Association with world's records at stake. This regatta will be one of a number held under sanction and direction of the American Power Boat Association, beginning in the early summer on Biscayne Bay, Miami, and repeating at a number of other regattas on the United States, continuing on to the Belleville Regatta, sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club. Points are awarded at each regatta and unless the contenders in the previous regatta attend at Belleville they lose their season standing.

Belleville will see the speediest boats in the world here and there will be more excitement and thrills than could possibly be packed in one day in any other way. One interesting feature of this regatta is the fact that the men who take part are in it for the sport of it, not for monetary gain—they build the most expensive boats and count expense nothing. A few extra mile or two can be added to the speed of their craft, and they travel from one regatta to the other, paying all their own expenses, and bestowing the most loving care on the inborn hankering for speed. The van guard of these interesting water gypsies will appear and begin to try out the waters of the Bay of Quinte preparatory to awaiting the starter's gun which will decide what world's records are to be smashed. In addition there will be events for all classes of craft, from cruisers to outboard motors, and the Rotarians and Rotary Anns will stage other entertaining features in connection with the regatta which are sure to be appreciated, even adding a flavor of the old fashioned picnic for color and amusement between races. Monday, August 7, is the date when acquatic interest will be made on the Bay of Quinte.

The sailing races yesterday afternoon, the first of the season, were carried off in good order. There was a good breeze which ensured good sailing. There was only one mishap, the dinghy class, sailed by Hugo Rathbun, upset. Mr. W. Evans went to the assistance of the boy and got the water in his motor boat. The starting and finishing point was from a buoy in front of the club house. In the dinghy races the results are as follows: "Viola", 1st; Munro, 1st; "Peggy", W. Carter, 2nd; "Seagull", W. Reid, 3rd; "Agnes", J. Rathbun, 4th; "Lena", Wallbridge, 5th. In the punt races the result was: "Alter Ego", A. Callaghan, 1st; "Blaze", C. Cornell, 2nd; "So Long", W. Smith, 3rd. In the yacht race there were only two entries, the "Gladys", owned by Gorman and Spangenberg and the "Stanley" owned by J. Weir. The former boat won. The races were officially were Messrs. W. Dog Saves Miles of Digging

A trained Labrador dog has saved the post office two miles of trench digging by acting as a cable-fault detector. His training has just included this sort of detection, but he was induced so to act by calling on the inborn hatred of a dog for cats.

The faults developed along the cable connecting the island with a new post office "anti-sunspot" trans. Atlantic radio-telephone station being built at Cooling Marshes, near Rochester. The cable is laid in trenches and buried under three feet of earth.

During tests it was noticed that the air in the outer copper tube, which is pumped in to maintain a high electrical insulation, was leaking through a number of minute punctures.

The leakages put the cable, and consequently the station, out of action, and might have led to serious damage by permitting the ingress of rain of water into the cable.

The problem was how to locate the leaks without unnecessary digging. The engineers sent for Mr. R. S. Lloyd, the well-known dog breeder of Ickenham, Middlesex, who trains dogs for the Home Office.

Mr. Lloyd's dog, Rex, a Labrador retriever, and an innocuous cat with a streaky tabby appearance was introduced into the air pumped into the cable.

Rex was led over the path of the cable, and every time he detected a leak he stopped. He sniffed, and he set about scratching up the earth. By digging up the trenches leaks were discovered, and the engineers were enabled to make repairs without digging up the two miles of cable affected.

Mr. Lloyd stated yesterday that the special training for Rex took about a month. "We used a chemical with a sulphuric smell to make Rex associate cats with his food," he said. "I found that cats from the leaks was not enough to be noticed by a human being, but Rex soon found it. Whenever he started digging we introduced a piece of meat into the hole to reward and encourage him."

OLD LYCEUM SEES ITS LAST PLAY

Four Last Days Redeem Recent History With Play of Hamlet

By GUY ERSKADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12.—(CP)—The old Lyceum, one-time stage home of Sir Henry Irving, is crumbling under the wreckers' sledge-hammers, but its death was coupled one of the most glorious in British theatrical history.

In four days 18,000 persons paid $30,000 to see John Gielgud play the title part in the 3 1-2-hour version of Hamlet he took later to historic Kronborg Castle in Elsinore, Denmark, locale of Shakespeare's great tragedy.

The last day hundreds of persons stood in the streets in the rain, waiting for a chance to stand and watch the performance and be in the theatre as theatre associated with the names of the great.

'The Rest is Silence'

Gielgud sank slowly to the ground, speaking Hamlet's last words, "the rest is silence." The curtain swept down and more than 1,000 who packed the theatre rose and cheered, recalling repeatedly Gielgud and Fay Compton who played Ophelia.

Finally Gielgud, his voice husky from a long performance, stepped to the footlights and said:

"Long live the memory of the Lyceum. Long live the memory of Henry Irving. Long live the memory of Ellen Terry."

The last four days, old timers said, had redeemed the more recent shady past of the old theatre and Shakespeare's lines had stolen for all the hopeful lines that had been spoken latterly from its stage.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Many Conditions Cause Symptoms Similar to Appendicitis

"More than twenty-four serious conditions may cause pain on the right side of the abdomen. For example, stones in the pelvis occasionally occurs in disease of the brain pneumonia, and pleurisy at lower surface of right lung. An inflamed and distended gall bladder, kidney colic, inflammation of the intestines or acute obstruction of the intestins may cause pain similar to that of appendicitis."

Other conditions which may be taken for appendicitis are typhoid; tuberculous abscess of the loin, the groin, or right hip; inflammation or breaking through of a stomach ulcer; lead colic; acute inflammation of the pancreas; gland hysteria, and just the fear of appendicitis."

Another of his long number of conditions which can cause pain on the right side is "fear of an appendicitis and thus be mistaken for appendicitis, it is only good sense to consult your physician as appendicitis until an examination by a physician shows it to be one of these other conditions.

Is there any warning, any symptoms that come before the pain in the right side appears that may help the layman and the physician also in knowing that an attack of appendicitis may be on its way?

Symptoms which should serve as a warning include nausea, indigestion, vomiting, loss of appetite, flatulence (gas pressure), a sense of heaviness and soreness and tenderness over the lower right side. In a great many cases the dull heavy pain is right in the pit of the stomach, remains there sometimes for hours, and then gradually sinks down to the lower right side of the abdomen.

In many ailments—gall bladder colic, ulcer of stomach or intestine, kidney colic—there is both the need for surgical treatment, but Dr. Leibow points but once more that "There is no medical treatment for appendicitis. The use of any physic, no matter how mild, may tend to rupture the acutely inflamed appendix and lead to dangerous consequences."

Sometimes when a physic has been taken there is relief from pain for a while because the appendix has been ruptured and the fecal matter or gas has cleared up the cause of the pain, whereas he has only started dangerous peritonitis—peritonitis. Peritonitis requires immediate surgery and this may be too late to save his life.

Once again, then, the warning is sounded that while all severe pains in right lower abdomen are not due to appendicitis, it is better to treat them as appendicitis until the physician arrives.

Try Grass in the Salad

Can man live on grass? Mr. J. R. H. Branson, a retired officer and farmer, has been experimenting. "Seriously you don't mean that you do eat grass?" he was asked in an interview. "If solemnly and seriously do," replied Mr. Branson.

"I'm doing so fairly well on it that I want other people to know. I have learned from scientists that grass contains all the most valuable vitamins, especially it you get it when the growth is fresh. When I grass my horse breeding and dairy farming I became fully alive to the efficiency of grass as food stuff. For the last two years grass has been a staple article of my diet. I am using more and more of it as I go on. And the results are gratifying. I have been an athlete all my life—rugger, rowing, riding—but under normal circumstances age puts a stop to that. Well, I'm rising 57 and although I have my fair share of the resiliency of youth, I have more enthusiasm for life than I had as a young man in my prime. I went for a run just for the fun of the thing this morning, and I have cycled over 90 miles ever.

"The grass I use is principally young shoots of dandelions and nettles."

Mr. Branson's method is to cook the nettles and dandelions as spinach, and to eat the dandelion leaves as a salad with other vegetables. He also uses grass in soups.

Food Changes At High Altitude

The flying boat Cuba recently left Sydney on a survey flight for the British Government to Mombasa in Kenya Colony, Africa. A report of its progress includes the detail that during the flight to Port Hedland, where the Cuba was refuelled, the cold was so intense that when Captain Russell Rogers, the pilot, tried to eat ice cream for breakfast it was frozen so hard he had to thaw it on a stove.

High altitudes play queer tricks with food, says Brigadier-General Vladimir Kokhlaski also discovered on his flight from Moscow to Canada, where he made a non-stop forced landing. After explaining to reporters that he flew at an elevation of from 17,000 to 22,000 feet to obtain best weather conditions, he added that:

A food that is pleasantly sweet at sea level is unbearably sweet at high altitudes. The chocolate we had in vacuum bottles and the candy we took seemed too sweet to eat. Although we had plenty of food, we were hungry throughout the flight. We had plenty of chicken, but it froze so hard up there that we could cut it with only a knife or a hatchet. Apples were frozen so solid they were like stones.

Spiders Are Really Interesting

Letter writers to the London Times who recently discussed a subject of marked interest—namely, the fear of an inbred fear of spiders —were the means of bringing to light a number of letters which dealt in many flaws.

One of the correspondents who had long been afraid of spiders decided to rid herself of the burden of fear; at some effort she managed to find an opportunity to inspect the habits of spiders at close range, and the enemies of mosquitoes, for example, and found that enmity a comparatively rare thing.

They discovered, too, that the spider was much more interested in flies and mosquitoes than in human beings. The discovery, even though it was faintly humiliating, was also comforting, for the spider ceased to be a monster and became one of an indifferent sort.

If it were possible to transfer fear of near and familiar things to unfamiliar and unlikely history of the fears of life could be made to disappear, more usual method of putting an end to what is called by its owners an instinctive fear was suggested by one of the letter writers. They examined the cause of the fear a little more closely than they had been in the habit of doing; they discovered that spiders were the enemies of mosquitoes, for example, and found that enmity a comparatively rare thing.

To complete the board of directors of the new Central Mortgage Bank the government appointed Philip J. Chester, general manager of the Hudson's Bay Company, Winnipeg; F. W. Wegenast, K.C., of Toronto and Brampton, Ont., and J. A. Brillant, president of the Lower St. Lawrence Power Company and other industrial enterprises, Rimouski, Que.

Large Executive.

Under the statute the Central Mortgage Bank will automatically have on the Board the governor and deputy-governor of the Bank of Canada and the deputy minister of finance, with three additional directors to be appointed. The executive committee will now consist of Graham Ford Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, who will also be governor of the Central Mortgage Bank; Deputy Governor Donald Gordon who will have the same position in the mortgage bank; W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance, and one of the appointed directors to be selected shortly.

For the Salt Fish Board, which has been appointed to encourage and stimulate that industry largely in the Maritime Provinces with government assistance, the government appointed Dr. D. B. Finn, director of the Atlantic Fisheries Experimental Station, as chairman; Captain William Deal, master of a Lunenburg fishing schooner, and Burke McInerney, Halifax, secretary treasurer of the United Maritime Fishermen, as members.

New C.N.R. Director.

Mr. Mackenzie King also announced following yesterday's long cabinet council, that James A. Richardson, president of the Northey Printing Company, Toronto, had been appointed director of the Canadian National Railways succeeding J. W. Murdock of Toronto who resigned early this year.

With these appointments, which were completed at the weekly session of the government, a long step was taken toward disposing of the numerous positions created by new legislation or made vacant through death or retirements.

The Defence Purchasing Board, which will have power to supervise contracts already let as well as future defence business, will be directly responsible to Finance Minister Dunning. It will meet at once for organization purposes. A royal proclamation will bring the act into force July 14 also the Central Mortgage Bank Act.

Mr. Vaughan will bring his long experience as purchasing agent for the Canadian National to his new task for which he has been temporarily loaned to the government. Once the board is efficiently launched a permanent chairman will be appointed and Mr. Vaughan will resume his railway duties. He will not receive salary from the government as chairman of the board, but the permanent chairman will be on full time salary. Other members of the board will be compensated for their services but will not draw salaries.

Head Office in Ottawa.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Central Mortgage Bank will be held for organization purposes Friday, the day the act comes into force. Head offices of the bank will be in the Bank of Canada, at Ottawa.

Purpose of the mortgage bank is to adjust and recondition mortgages on all farm properties, and on urban properties up to a total value of $12,000 for a two-family house and to reduce interest rates to five per cent for farm properties and 5½ on urban properties.

Mortgage companies will be invited to join the Central Mortgage Bank, will have access at low interest rates to a minimum fund of $200,000,000 for mortgage purposes, and will share on a 50-50 basis the cost of writing off interest arrears of two years or more, and reducing principal mortgage amounts to not more than 80 per cent of assessed value of properties concerned. The bank will be government owned.

LABOR MINISTER DEFENDS GOV'T

Hon. Norman Rogers Says Gov't. Will Build on "Solid" Experience

Halifax, July 13.—(CP)— Labor Minister Rogers said in an address at a banquet here last night that the Mackenzie King Government is building "upon solid experience, with some regard to prudence and economy," has made great strides in dealing with the problem of unemployed youth.

In answer to "the vague promises" of Conservative Leader R. J. Manion of a program "designed as a sort of parallel to the civilian conservation corps in the United States", Liberal speakers could present a record of what has been done, Mr. Rogers said.

That proposal "has been the one practical suggestion by Dr. Manion of what he may do in the future", the Labor Minister added. "It seems strange, however, that the C.C.C. was instituted in the United States in 1932 and yet the Bennett-Manion Administration failed to take any parallel action at that time."

Mr. Rogers spoke at a banquet marking the close of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association's 40th Century Liberal Club annual convention.

Send Boys to Camps

Mr. Rogers said that the only substantial contribution of "the Bennett-Manion administration" toward dealing with the problem of unemployed youth was "the sending of young men to relief camps where they were out of sight and, largely, out of mind". That was "not a policy—it was an escape from the problem."

Charges that the present Liberal administration in Ottawa is a "do nothing" government had been made "as a sort of prospective slogan, designed to sell and conceal the thread-bare poverty of the Conservatives."

"Success of our youth-training program after three years is no vague promise of things to be done but a definite achievement."

Relief camps were "a dead-end street for the men and an expensive luxury for the administration which sponsored them." The farm employment plan, along with the youth-training program had proved "a wise substitute for the relief camp system, particularly in the west with its large flow of transient labor."

CHATHAM DOCTOR

"Of course, if somebody makes me an offer, I might sell it," Dr. Smith ventured. "Or maybe I will give it to a museum. One thing I would like is to have some geologist look it over to see what the minerals in it are."

Dr. Smith got the meteorite yesterday from Dan Solomon, Dresden farmer, who was away from home Tuesday night when it plopped into his sugar-beet field. 200 yards from the Mrs. Solomon and their little daughter were standing.

The Biggest Remnant

So far Dr. Smith is sponsor of the biggest remnant of the meteor that fright ened hundreds of Southwestern Ontario residents as it hurtled earthwards, burning itself up miraculously. Many farmers in the Chatham-Dresden district found meteors from their fields yesterday but none could compare with Dr. Smith's.

Mrs. Solomon wouldn't let her husband venture into the beet field Tuesday night to see why smoke was pouring into the air. He went out the next morning and dug up the specimen from its resting place six feet below the surface. All the neighbors came over and helped Solomon get it out and Solomon was glad to take Dr. Smith's $4 to get rid of it.

Dr. Chant said he would pay $200 for the meteorite just on speculation. The largest one he ever heard of in Ontario weighed 27 pounds, though that couldn't compare with the 40-pounder found in Missouri, now on exhibition in the Field Museum at Chicago.

On Tuesday evening the girls of the Corbin Loan Co. gathered at the home of Miss Frances Scott for a farewell party in honour of Mrs. Ray Williams (nee Dorothy Lovibond) whose marriage took place in May. In the earlier part of the evening, games and dancing were enjoyed after which Miss Lillian Westaike delivered an address and presented on behalf of the employees, a beautiful electric clock as a token of remembrance of a happy association. Dorothy made a very suitable reply thanking everyone. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Hoch and at the close of a most enjoyable evening the girls all joined in giving a vote of thanks to their charming hostess.

Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Pardee, Lethbridge, Alta., were guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Taylor, Foster Avenue.

Mrs. Arthur Sills, Toronto, and Mrs. Marion Reddick, Belleville, are spending a week the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Lafferty.

Word was received recently by Mr. George J. Duffin, son of Mr. Roy B. Duffin, Stirling, formerly of Belleville, that he had been successful in his final examinations for a licensed Funeral Director and Embalmer in the Province of Ontario. His many friends are extending congratulations.

Miss Marion Bentley of the Ontario Hospital, London, is spending her holidays the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Bentley.

Miss Ruth Marsh, 37 Benjamin Street, underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Belleville General Hospital this morning.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY:

"Mexicali Rose"

Spine-tingling action — breath-taking stunts—heart-warming songs and replete with western thrills, Gene Autry's newest musical western "Mexicali Rose" opens first at the McCarthy Theatre.

A choice cast helps Gene in "Mexicali Rose", two famed veterans, Noah Beery and William Farnum, head the supporting players. Lucia Wallers, a lovely newcomer, does well as the feminine interest.

Smiley (Frog) Burnette, whose comedy roles are well known, is hilarious in this new production.

The story concerns the efforts of Gene and Smiley to protect a championship from the double-crossing plans of a "phony" oil-stock company headed by William Farnum and LeRoy Mason. William Farnum is the padre of the orphanage.

Noah Beery has a friendly role, that of a benevolent bandit, who comes to the aid of Autry because he likes to hear Gene sing.

"Mexicali Rose" is a picture that will please the entire family from top to bottom and Gene Autry is the only member one cowboy or the screen so plan now for a great show that you will see next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"To The Victor"

As a second feature attraction the McCarthy Theatre proudly announces the return engagement, by popular request, of "To the Victor" which tied them "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs" as the best movie of the year of 1938.

Gaumont British has done itself proud. Rarely, if ever, has a picture come from England, or any other country for that matter, with the unlimited, universal appeal of "To The Victor" a picture about a man and his dog — a gruff grumpy old Scotchman and his magnificent, shepherd, a killer—"To the Victor" tugs, but gently, away at your heart-strings, loosening up every so often to allow dry, human humor to turn pathos back to second place.

Will Fyfe, who portrays the part of the dour Scottish shepherd—who lived belligerently—an embattled existence in a little Highland village with every man's hand against him —and at last he could only turn to his faithful dog—gives a characterization that will stir you as profoundly as anything you have seen flashed on a motion picture screen. It is certain that a great many who saw "To The Victor" the first time will again see it now and it is hoped that if you missed it before you will without fail see it this time. In addition to both features a three very splendid cartoon "Mrs. O'Leary's Cow" will also be presented for your enjoyment at each performance.

"Made For Each Other"

Carole Lombard and James Stewart, who head the attractive cast of "Made for Each Other," which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre turn in the best performances of their careers and for an evening's perfect screen entertainment, please see "Made For Each Other" which has been given four stars by Liberty Magazine and truly is one of the best pictures so far produced in 1939.

AT THE BELLE

"Union Pacific"

Barbara Stanwyck, in a role completely different from any she has previously attempted, and Joel McCrea, in a character strongly reminiscent of the one he portrayed last season in "Wells Fargo" are co-starred in the romantic leads of "Union Pacific", Cecil B. De Mille's grand-scale interpretation of the building of America's first transcontinental railroad.

Although the popular Miss Stanwyck has played roles as varied as Middle Western farm-woman, New England factory wench and Park Avenue debutante, her Mollie Monahan in "Union Pacific" which is coming next to the Belle Theatre, marks something totally new in the Stanwyck repertoire. She is a daring warm-hearted, fiery girl of the West, the daughter of the U.P.'s first engineer, the postmistress of "End of Track" and little sister of the husky railroad-builder. She is equally at home outwitting Western sharpers, comforting the homesick Irish laborers, battling Indians on the warpath or engaging in high-powered romance.

Mollie's romantic interest in "Union Pacific" is one Jeff Butler (played by the handsome McCrea), a brave and reckless trouble-shooter whom the Washington government has assigned to help keep order along the right-of-way. The two meet at "End of Track", a gaudy, brawling settlement that moves ever Westward with the railroad, and their romance moves as swiftly forward as the phenomenal railroad itself.

Although Indian attacks, corrupt officials and hostile nature can all be dealt with, Mollie and Jeff meet a real difficulty in Dick Allen (Robert Preston), a smooth young Western adventurer who has teamed up with a crowd of sharpers to sabotage the railroad. In love with Mollie, Dick has the double incentive of ruining Jeff's work and stealing his sweetheart at the same time.

When the irresponsible Dick goes so far as to help rob a pay train, upon which the "U.P." vitally depends, the good-hearted Mollie marries him to save him from the law. But before the railroad is finished Dick's own crimes remove him from the scene, leaving the track to romance clear for Jeff.

A dozen other popular Hollywood players will be seen in equally unusual roles in De Mille's production. Akim Tamiroff, the roistering Russian sailor in "Pirate", a rowdy Mexican railroad cop who brings his own brand of law and order to the West at the point of a bull-whip, Lynne Overman holds up the comedy end of the picture as a hard-as-nails fur-trapper and pioneer. Brian Donlevy is the sharpie who is hired by financiers to sabotage the project.

"Lone Ranger"

Born and bred in the tradition of the American Indian was Chief Thunder Cloud, who portrays the familiar role of "Tonto" in "The Lone Ranger Rides Again," Republic serial, whose first episode will be shown over the week-end at the Belle. Bob Livingston plays the Lone Ranger.

Chief Thunder Cloud is the son of Dark Cloud and Morning Star, aristocrats of the Muskogee tribe. He was brought up on a ranch in Arizona, where he absorbed the lore of the desert and acquired the wisdom cherished by centuries of his people—especially the stars and the hills which bounded his little domain.

With this thirst for knowledge strong in his make-up, he attended the University of Arizona at Tucson, where he built up a reputation for himself in scholastic pursuits, as well as in football and boxing. He trained, meanwhile, to be a singer, and still hasn't relinquished the hope of some day achieving the goal of his ambition: singing beautiful native folk songs on the concert stage.

Chief Thunder Cloud is happily married and lives on a ranch near Hollywood with his wife and their two children. While Rain and Lone Star. These children have no theatrical aspirations, but Thunder Cloud is going to see that they have every opportunity to develop their possibilities in their chosen fields.

He has found no discrimination whatsoever against a minority race, and he expresses profound satisfaction that his native land—and the land of his ancestors—provides equality for every race and color.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Ten Rules For Brides

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"Several years ago, when I was still in grade school, my mother saw in your column a piece called 'Ten Rules for Brides.'

"She cut it out intending to give it to me at the time of my marriage. Now it can't be found, and I'm writing you this to ask if you have a copy of your ten rules for brides.

M. A. T."

Looking through my files, I see that from time to time I have written various rules for brides. I don't know whether this is the one to which your mother refers or not. The rules seem pretty safe for any girl about to be married, to follow.

1—Learn to cook. Many persons would say this is the one indispensable foundation stone of married happiness. In any case, it's highly important. And it means not merely being able to cook a chop, but have the skill to cook at least two meals a day for a week, and on Sundays three, all palatable and nourishing.

2—Take care of your personal appearance. Try to stay young, pretty and becomingly dressed. Many girls won't need this advice, but it should be set down, nevertheless.

3—Study how to create a pleasant home. However small it is. It can be kept orderly, clean, uncluttered. It can show that it is the abode of happiness.

4—Don't be extravagant. Study prices and your own actual needs and don't waste your husband's none too large salary by careless buying, which is sure to mean trouble sooner or later.

5—Don't be jealous. Of course your husband goes women at his office. Of course there are girls he might have married and didn't. You must be aware of all these, and you must not pester your husband with suspicions.

6—Don't give him cause for jealousy. Don't flirt and insist upon having a good time which will arouse his suspicions and make him discontented.

7—Be cheerful. Don't complain to your husband, especially about small domestic matters. Handle these yourself and say nothing about them. Don't repeat unpleasant gossip to him. Tell him things that will make him laugh instead.

8—Be tactful about relatives. Be sure to be nice and tactful in regard to all your in-laws. Don't "feature" your own relatives at the expense of your husband's, and don't overfill the house with them.

9—Learn to share your husband's amusements. Whatever these may be, quiet ones like bridge, chess or reading aloud. Athletic ones, like golf, or hiking. Learn to cook out of doors if he enjoys camping. Semi-frivolous, like dancing or going to shows.

10—Cultivate a certain number of outside interests. Don't get lazy, fat and sloppy, or allow yourself to become completely a creature of the beauty shop and the movies. Be sure that your capacity for life expands instead of shrinks. In this way you will be much sure to keep your husband's love.

11—Don't nag. And while you have read about the seven rules, here it is, and perhaps the most important of them all. Don't nag. Remember it takes two to make a quarrel.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DeCaile Procedure Attends Registration at Hotel

The hotel doorman will greet you when you arrive at the hotel. Then either he, a porter or a bellboy will take your luggage into the lobby and wait with it near the registry desk. You go to the desk, give your name the room clerk locates your reservation, assigns your room. If you wish, you may talk over with him the room-assignment, to see if it is the type of room you desire.

The clerk will turn toward you, for your signature, either the hotel registry book, or as is the more general custom now, a leather frame containing individual registration cards. On this card is a space for the street-address, as well as for the city, convenient for the hotel files and for forwarding mail that may arrive for you after you have gone.

You Register

A man signs for his wife and himself:

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Atwater, 234 Park Street, Home, Ohio

He should not sign his name and add "and wife" (or "and family").

A married woman or widow signs Mrs. Waller Brownson . . . and the address.

An unmarried woman signs Miss Florence North

A man client signs James Elliott

In other words, except in the case of a man traveling alone, the form of your signature on the hotel register should be the form you would correctly use on your visiting-card; that is, the formal name with the title, Mr., Mrs., or Mr. and Mrs., as on a joint visiting-card.

Other members of the family if they are over five or six years, should be registered. The small daughter's name should be prefixed by Miss.

Or, if preferred, the travelling family may be registered—

Mr. and Mrs. George Foster, 3 children. Or 2 children, nurse.

After you have registered, the clerk hands the room key to the bellboy, who, carrying your luggage, leads the way to the elevator. In the room, the bellboy switches on the light, if necessary draws the shades, opens the windows if necessary, turns on the water if you wish . . . receives his tip and departs.

Asks About Entertainment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I—Would you suggest what kind of entertainment we could plan for the guests at a wedding reception to be held in a hotel? A number of the guests could not do dance, and so we cannot fill in the evening in this manner.

2—Is it permissible for the bride to remove her veil after the dinner?

1—It isn't a bit necessary to plan to have any special entertainment for the guests at a wedding reception. You might, however, have music for those guests who wish to dance.

2—The bride usually does not take off her wedding veil after she leaves the reception to change to her travelling clothes. Naturally she should take advantage of her "hour of glory" to wear her bridal finery!

Courtesy Tip

Don't talk to one of two persons and ignore the other. Sometime you may find yourself in the position of "the other person," and you won't like being "left out".

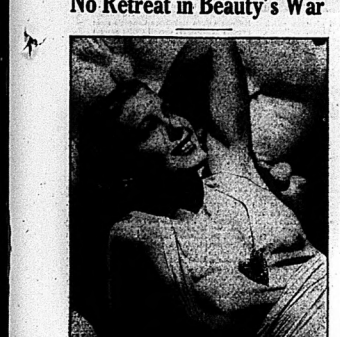
No Retreat in Beauty's War



ELLEN DREW . . . . keeps right in step with the beauty parade

By HELEN FOLLETT

Whatever you do lady don't let yourself down. Keep in step with the beauty parade. You can't stand still. If you don't step forward, you'll slip back and those wrinkles will get you; and grey hair, maybe. Terrible. Keep young, keep; sunny and you'll be swinging the world by its tail.

Trot—not to your dentist—shop twice a year; while, polished teeth are a grand beauty asset. Do your exercises like a good girl, so a life preserver roll of adipose tissue won't appear upon your svelt torso. Be mindful of good eating habits; stick to simple foods and learn all you can about the balanced diet which is a factor in retaining youthful, clear complexion.

Don't drive yourself. Have work to do, but get play, as well. Individuals who are always serious, who don't know how to play, are dull company, soon get to be fireside sitters. Learn to relax. Go flop on a bed, let every muscle be limp. Do that when life is chasing you along too fast.

Brush your hair every night, don't be afraid to experiment with a new coiffure. The family may guy you at first, but they'll get used to it. Read good books; they make your conversation more interesting. Get to bed every night at a respectable hour.

The girl with little yallery polka dots on her saucy nose may as well know the truth; even if she whisked every one of them away, they will come back upon exposure to the rays of the sun. She can keep them faint by using creams generously, especially before going out-of-doors and directly after coming in.

Use powder freely. It makes it more difficult for the strong rays of the sun to get to a sensitive skin surface.

AIKEN'S W.M.S.

Jesus said: "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven", was the thought in the opening worship service of the Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society held at the home of Mrs. William Hamilton on Tuesday afternoon. A hymn was sung as a prayer followed by the Lord's prayer.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Fred Moon. A fine program was presented by members of the Baby Band and Mission Band with recitations by Margaret Kells and Barbara Hamilton. Interesting missionary stories were given by memory by the Misses Prudent McNair and Vivian Woods.

A short play, "The Good Samaritan", with Doris Grills, Carl Moon, Ivy Scott, Betty Cole and George Cole taking parts, was acted by Miss Vivian Woods was enjoyed by all.

A presentation of cards was made by Mrs. Perry Hamilton, the Baby Band superintendent, to the following members: Joan Jeffrey, Marjorie Jean Conlin, Gerald Grills, Larry Aiken and James Jones.

Mrs. Hamilton voiced appreciation to the children and to the mothers for their help. She told of the increase throughout the presbyterial in interest in money raised.

Two contributions for parents was read in unison.

A donation was gratefully accepted, that had been sent the society by the honorary president, Mrs. A. Finkle, who now resides in Belleville.

The president, Mrs. Thos. Irwin and Mrs. E. J. Hubble were appointed as representatives to attend the conference to be held in Bridge Street church Sept. 20.

Quill blocks were distributed to the members.

The missionary program that had been prepared by Mrs. Spafford and Mrs. Hamilton was brought to a close with singing of a hymn followed by the watch-word.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Doctor Should be Called to Check Unusual or Fussy Baby

All you parents have seen children who had a pale look about them. A hard look to describe, it cannot be dismissed with the observation that the child is very pale. Blondeness doesn't describe it.

When a child is unnaturally pale, a doctor should check on this from time to time to find the reason for this pallor, for it is unnatural, often the result of anemia. If the child's diet is adequate we must look for some other cause. Often this cause will be discovered to be an underlying infection which may have been working for months, even years, and may be a sign of chronic fever and heart disease.

The parents of such a child often feel safe in ignoring his condition even though they have taken him to a doctor who has told them there is nothing wrong. The child has to be watched carefully and should be examined regularly; pallor is a danger signal which cannot be disregarded with safety. If the doctor cannot discover what is wrong at the first examination, he will want to look the child over again in a few months. It may take repeated examinations to discover the clue to his condition.

Very often parents bring a child in for examination, with the story that he has been perfectly well and normal until a few weeks before, when they noticed that he seemed to lose interest in playing. He just didn't have the energy to keep up with the other children in strenuous games and seemed anxious to lie down and rest. This is an unusual condition, for so long as the child can keep going, he would rather play than rest.

That is a very common case and those are the cases in which that lead us to suspect some chronic infection. Often the child loses his appetite and his personality changes so that a bright, happy youngster becomes a cranky, irritable child.

When this child goes to the doctor for examination, he must be thoroughly investigated, for though the cause of the change may not be apparent, there certainly are reasons. If the child has his tonsils, they should come out. Often the doctor will find that although the child has had the tonsils out, there is a large tag remaining which is diseased and which should be removed.

Often the tonsils are perfectly normal but there is some swollen adenoid tissue at the back of the throat which must be removed. At times we find a case where the throat is completely normal, but, the parents tell the doctor, for some time the child's nose has been running. He will then suspect the sinuses. If these are infected, he may if he is an expert, wash them out and give the child treatment or he may call in a nose and throat specialist. I have found cases where an infection in the ear has been the cause of the trouble. In such cases this infection must be cleared up as quickly as possible.

Fashion Flashes

Take a rest, then slip into a cool, pretty house coat. A charming model is in blush pink organdie with white embroidered daisies appliqued in bowknot design in the skirt. The same applique is used down the front of the coat, for the wide hem and around the waist.

Dramatic entrance is inevitable when a woman wears one of Molyneux's siren numbers. A black mesh fabric tightly sheathed to the figure has the slim skirt covered with black sequins, while the bodice with square neckline, short sleeves and high waist, is covered with large black cabochon stones.

The first thought for a Fair-going costume is for cool comfort, but there are good looks as well in a handsome suit of plaided cotton tweed. The collarless jacket is worn over a cotton mesh blouse. Black, white and red are the plaid colors.

Plenty of interest in light-weight felt hats. A casual model dons on fedora lines is chartreuse felt with a bronze brown ribbon and brown feather fancy.

Feathers wave on many smart hats. An ideal mother-of-the-bride hat was noted at a recent smart wedding. A conservative brimmed model, the medium crown was trimmed in front with three thick upstanding ostrich plumes in purple, a contrast to the white of the satiny straw.

HEINZ

ENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

by PETER BENEDICT

It was all a little like a dream, though Catherine did not know it. It was as if she could not remember ever having come to that house at all, but had simply been flung into it by some upheaval. She had always known that there were slums; she could have described them in detail, out of the specialist knowledge of half-seen inquisitive people; but to be actually there, picking her way between the sprawling children between filthy gutters, knocking on the bay, blistered doors, sitting into the damp, draughty living-room for a cup of tea as good as any rabbi made for her at home—that was a very different thing. The people mentioned so glibly as slum-dwellers were suddenly real people, with individualities of their own.

It was Mrs. Garland, now, who caressed her by living in the desirable place; it was Mrs. Garland who sat in the midst of unceasing draughts, and whose wallpaper was peeling from the walls and the corners of the front face of her living-room; it was Mrs. Garland who, at her guest's slight start of disgust, put out a swift look and squashed the scuttling thing, and scooped him with the shovel into the fire.

She looked up guiltedly into Catherine's face, and said placidly and with a hint of laughter, too: "I bet you don't see many of them."

Catherine shuddering, said: "No, thank heaven!"

"Oh, bless you. I've got quite fond of the little things. It's no use being anything else. I can't get rid of them, there's no hope short of pulling the walls down; the place is riddled with them. All this road is, too, for that matter. Ah, well, I don't mind so much, now Nancy and her husband and the baby are out of it."

She felt, rather than saw, Catherine start again, and know that this time the prick was in her own words.

"Yes," she said, smiling, "they lived here with me until they got this house they're moved into now. They didn't mind; between us we managed all right; but it was the baby. We didn't want her to grow up in that, and we could help it. She had nearly eighteen months of it, poor mite. Nancy and Harry want me to go to them, but I don't better. I work here, and keep myself by my own work, and it suits me that way; besides, that's their home, not mine. Young folks are best let alone. Lucky young folks they are too, to get such a change. Tell me what sort of house they've got."

Catherine said, what she had not until then realized to be true: "A very nice one." The words rose in her throat of their own volition and sprang from her lips with passionate fervour. She looked round the room, round even this gallantly tended room, and remembered the decent little home in Court Brandon as a sort of paradise. "You haven't seen it, then?"

"Not yet," said Mrs. Garland comfortably, reaching for the tea-pot across the subdued glow of the fire. "No, I haven't been there yet, but they want me to go soon. May be I'll take this little frock when it's finished, and have a look at them all again. Maybe I'll even get a little house there myself some day; you never know. They say he's having some bungalows built, as well."

"Yes, he is," agreed Catherine; and nothing in the reference, nothing in that unquestioning "he" as if there were but one man in the world, struck her as at all strange either from her own mouth or Mrs. Garland's. "There are some almost ready, I should think. And more houses planned, too."

"It's a good thing somebody remembers us poor folks," said Mrs. Garland, with satisfaction. Nancy's got a garden!"

"Yes, quite a respectable one, but of course it will be hard work getting it into shape. It was meadow land six months ago, Does she like flowers?"

"Loves them, always did. She was always hankering for a garden, but nobody's got a garden in Howard's Pleasance. Will she—" and then her face was suddenly grave and as suddenly despondent again. "I suppose she won't have room for it."

"It depends what kind. She could easily grow shrubs—the kind that will survive, and golden flowers; or there's room for some of those little dwarf cypresses with the yellow-edged leaves. I could give her some cuttings from my barberries, if she'd like those—"

"I'm sure she would. Mrs. Court-and thank you; but she was always so fond of a real big tree—"

Suddenly Catherine remembered in her eye, heart low and sore, the Court Brandon still had, even now that the limes were cut down, and only the holly hedges torn out by the roots. There were still armies of trees wherever the dwellers in that valley cared to turn her eyes. She said very gently: "She'll have them in thousands—trees and brooks everywhere—wherever she looks from her windows she'll see them."

Said Mrs. Garland, wistfully, and half to herself: "It must be a beautiful place."

"It is a beautiful place."

She was still remembering that within her own mind when she rose to leave the little house in Howard's Pleasance. It is a beautiful place; not it was, but it is. It had taken the shock of Lydon Shields Road and its environs to show her how true that was.

"Mrs. Garland," she said impulsively, "may I come and see you sometimes, when I'm in Howard's?"

"Why, if you can stand the Pleasance, I shall be glad, I don't have many visitors, as you can guess, but you'll always be welcome, my dear."

Not many people called Catherine Court 'my dear,' these days; and she was not sure, at this moment, that she was the same Catherine who had lunched with Lydon Jennings that day.

Something had changed in her, and broadened and deepened, and she did not know why, for she had seen only what she had known, existed, in the doorway she turned, one foot poised above the rickety step, and looked back at Mrs. Garland standing placid and gallant and capable in her cramped little living room; and something stirred in her admirably controlled and guarded heart, so that she went back as candidly as a child, and stooped, and kissed the older woman's warm cheek.

Then she ran down the steps without a word, and was away like a hare along the greasy bricks of Howard's Pleasance.

CHAPTER XIII

PROBERT IS ORDERED OFF

In the darkness of the late September night there was a sound, a sound nor form in anything; no sense but feeling assigned for her the slur of the ferns against her thighs, and the turf under her feet, and the knotty bole of the tree on which she leaned. Only through the whine of the wind could Catherine catch, faintly as the grey cobweb, the sheen of the pool. There was no moon in all the light, to silver the little waves which stirred in its surface even when it seemed most nearly still; it was only a dim grey, a faint luminous and a very faint music, a song so grateful to her ears that she could hardly distinguish the moments when she heard it from the moments when she seemed to be lost in the universal silence.

She was calmer now; she had things in focus again. No one would ever know that she had been tempted, there by the lake and under the crook of the willow, like the women in the play; weeping angrily and desolately for her beloved mind and her conscience which would not rest.

Why her conscience should enter into the struggle she did not know. What was there in the wrongs of the slum-dwellers of Blanchester to make this desecration of Court Brandon rightly nothing; and her belief that God cried out that there could be nothing; that her divided heart trembled. And what was there in the fact that Mrs. Dunning's new-found happiness, in her gratitude for the house she had acquired, to build a pedestal under the feet of Adam Probert? Nothing. Nothing. Nothing! Nancy's blessedness was none of her designing; nothing to do with it.

What were the tenants to him, so long as they paid his rents? Did he even know their names? Had he felt for even one of them the fierce indignation she had felt for the people of Howard's Pleasance? And her own offering had been little enough, and soon to be removed now as the moon out of sight. She knew and admitted that. It was the terrible part of it that was that it was quite clear to her mind what Adam Probert was, a perfectly ordinary housing speculator doing bold and profitable business, with no other benefit in prospect but his own; but she could not persuade her heart into ease.

Here in her own glade she felt the old wrath in her despoiled soil more keenly; and the faces of Mrs. Dunning, of Mrs. Garland, of the dirty children playing in the gutter—all these faded and were lost in the wilderness of her bereaved trees. Here she could hate Adam as she would, and desire for his downfall with all her former fervour. That was some satisfaction.

The fight was still to win or lose; but at least she still had her weapons clear. So she told herself she should go down fighting for his dismissal. Why should the happiness of a young couple in the new houses affect the issue at all? He could turn it in a valley less lovely, and they would still have been happy, and he would have had his profits just the same.

But still the unease of her heart remained, an argument against which there was no appeal. She stirred miserably against the rough bole of the tree, and drew her hands from the crotch of it, and went forward slowly under the trailing branches towards the edge of the water, where she had walked with Geoffrey ten years and more ago.

She had scarcely been old enough then, to know what she was doing to him and to herself when she married him out of pity; but she thought, she prayed, that he had been happy; for he was not the man to be eternally questioning her affection; and she thought, too, that by now he must have understood and forgiven her for not loving him.

But could she forgive herself for marrying again, and for such reasons, even than pity? Could she ever forgive, even Court Brandon and Geoffrey's memory rolled in one, the presence of Lydon Strang's ring upon her finger? She dragged her fingers through and through the long, silvering leaves, and her heart was full of unfathomable distresses for none of which could she find relief.

She parted the trailing twigs before her, and saw the water darkly clear; and to her right, and not far away along the shore, she saw what appeared to be a small scarlet star, fading and glowing in and out as she watched it, during her several moments to realise what it was, the lighted end of a cigarette between a man's lips, a man who drew at it with the steady contemplative breath of a philosopher. She went nearer, treading stealthily in the soft grass along the edge of the narrow shore; and presently she had him in profile against the water, dimly discernible clearly. At first she had thought that he could be no one but Perry; but now she saw that he had neither Perry's height nor his bulk; nor was he young. For all his athletic soul, in the habit of coming out late at night to admire the full but invisible beauties of her glen, Perry was a white-hot arrow men were accustomed to the dark and then she knew him. Adam Probert!

Even there she could not escape from him, nor close her mind to his thoughts of her.

She stood staring at him intently, for it was the first time she had had such a chance to observe, and in all things he puzzled her. Catherine had liked to stare at him as frankly as he stared at her; and now was the only chance she had to do so. But she saw no more, though a mist of cold and troubled anger, which made him a monster, tie stood there so calmly, on her forbidden territory, gazing out over the serie grey of the pool like one already upon fore-conquered country. She was in fact

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfast and we could hear the garage being fixed next door, and ma said, O dear is that going to keep up all day, do carpenters have to work as loud as that?

They're really supposed to work louder, I believe, but when the boss isn't around they're apt to take a little of the strain off, pop said, and ma said, I dont know what will become of me if I have to listen to that pandemonium the whole livelong day. "I'll just go frantic."

Why dont you go out for the day, waring the carpenters a devil may care goodbye as you leave? pop said, and ma said, I only wish I could, but it just happens to be a day when the house would lose without me, so dont be surprised to find a nervous utter wreck when you come home.

Meaning her, and pop said, Dont worry my dear, I'll fix it. I'll give those fellows a talking to they'll remember to their last nail. Believe me I'll pipe them down for you. Now look here, you lantern jawed chuck, going to say to them, you may be able to bully a few poor thin slices of lumber but

I'm not going to take any of your nonsense, I dont care how big your muscles are. Nine tents of that racket is absilutely unnecessarry, so sort peddle that totalitarian ruff stuff, see, I'm going to tell them.

Now Willyum I wont have you saying anything wreckless to big hulking men like that, so dont you dare, ma said, I'll promise to be philosophical, I'll shut my mental ears and I wont hear a thing, she said, and pop said, Well, I'd enjoy telling them a few things just for the good of their soles, but all right, if that's a way you feel.

And he folded up his paper and left, ma looking after him to make sure he wouldn't say anything, with he didn't.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Romping Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been shut off from the blood. Just as surely you are slowly smothering to death if you have a "lead" feeling in the legs, nervousness, poor concentration. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets sallow, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves are "on edge"—you tire quickly and feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. They build worn-out blood cells, make more red, better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills from any druggist. See for yourself how quickly the tingle-and-glow of health will take after. Buck 2 PINK PILLS. Copr. 1938, G. T. Pocket Co., Ltd.

DIGS FOR WORMS FOUND A BANK TOKEN

Peterborough, Ont., July 13 (CP) —Nell Harder, 13, started digging for worms in his garden and found a Bank of Montreal halfpenny bank token issued in 1844. Now he digs for more of mine, but all he can uncover is worms.

South African Viewpoint

Seen as he arrived by air in England from South Africa is Mr. G. M. Huggins, prime minister of Southern Rhodesia, who proclaimed the readiness of his country to unite with the empire in the event of any conflict, but who warned that with Southern Rhodesia's industries developed greatly since the great war, contributions of man power might be less.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, July 14

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN ACTIVE day with surprising developments may be expected, judging by the planetary aspects. There may be a sudden upswing for change, for travel, for and association, accompanied by romantic adventure, but severe tests and also angles make the opposition hazardous. There are loopholes for fraud, trickery and sinister dealing, with papers of contracts imperilled. The exercise of generosity and judgment, and acceptance of the advice of old friends may help.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for unusual events, new surroundings and contacts, although there are subtle indications of danger incident to such opportunity. Writings or contracts are in jeopardy, and there may be treacherous plots or intrigues. However, seniors and elders may offer wise counsel to point out hazards and turn affairs into profitable channels, for happy romantic adventures.

A child born on this day may be exceptionally clever, with much originality, but with a tendency to dependence in thought and action. It may be extravagant in its quest for pleasure and adventure.

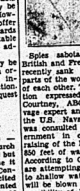
Says Sabotage Caused Recent Sub Disasters



Spies sabotaged the American, British and French submarines that recently sank in widely scattered parts of the world, Emilio Scarpa, one of each other. That was the conclusion expressed by Charles H. Courtney, ABOVE, undersea salvage expert and former naval officer of the U.S. Naval Intelligence, who was consulted by the French government in connection with the raising of the Phoenix, that sank in 1,850 feet of water near Indo-China. According to Courtney the French are attempting to float the Phoenix by hollow steel tanks filling which she will be blown up to preclude any possibility of Japan effecting a salvage.

Mass band recitals and sports programs added to the excitement of drums and pipes at many centres. There is contrast to serious addresses by prominent Canadians on topics of national interest and solemn ceremonies at war memorials, where members were ordered to silence by the war dead.

Cecil W. Armstrong, Grand Master for Ontario West, was one of several speakers who warned that the Orange Order would die if its members allowed it to become a "pseudo non-combatant, social body with no public program and no plan for Protestant action." He addressed a throng of 2,000 at Barrie.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same day. Use the doctor's prescription. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning for proper treatment which should be secured at once. For this purpose we offer Dr. J. S. Hemroid's Prescription and Ointment. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when such a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Special Trains

Special trains brought a large influx to Port Hope for a 50-minute parade of Orangemen from more than 100 lodges in all parts of Central Ontario. Rev. K. H. Palmer of Palmerston told a near-record Dominion Day crowd that the teaching of the Order never was more needed than now.

"Where would men such as Hitler and Mussolini be today had we men of the stamp and character and deep resolve of William of Orange to be found of the Empire?" he asked the assembly in an appeal for greater tolerance by all who loved freedom and justice.

Twenty local organizations joined with 5,000 Orangemen of Southwestern Ontario and many more from the international border in a parade at St. Thomas, before their 4,000 tent at Presten's celebration program.

Other demonstrations at Forest, Uxbridge, Maxville, Morrisburg, Carleton Place, Almonte, Smiths Falls, Owen Sound attracted large crowds with their numbers. Rifes and smiles to join in the Province-wide festival and share with fellow members in elaborate programs prepared at each point.

HON. F. RINFRET

Native of Montreal

Mr. Rinfret, a native of Montreal where he received his early education, abandoned his early business life to try a hand in the newspaper field. He gained a wide reputation in Quebec for his sketches on French-Canadian literature, and then he left his brief calling in 1905 to become private secretary to Hon. Rodmond Prefontaine, Canadian Minister of Marine. He retained that post for three years and then returned to the newspaper field as parliamentary correspondent for Montreal Le Canada.

Toured Western Front

Meanwhile his association with the Liberal party becoming closer and in 1920 he was elected to the House of Commons as Member for St. James, in the heart of Montreal. In the House, his "speech-making" reputation that he established in school was renewed. He spoke with facility in English and French.

From then on more honors came his way. In 1925 the Canadian Government awarded him the red ribbon of the Chevalier d'Honneur. The following year he was taken into the Cabinet of Prime Minister Mackenzie King after the 1926 election and remained as Secretary of State until the Government's defeat by the Conservative party in 1930.

But Rinfret achieved a personal victory and remained in the House of which, he used to say, "by a combination of unusual circumstances I was elected six times in 12 years."

Not in Favor of Dole

So popular was he in Montreal that two years after the defeat of his government, Rinfret became Mayor of Montreal, ousting the present mayor, Camillien Houde. Newspaper files of that time show the problems that confronted him upon his election as mayor. They record the view he took on unemployment and relief in what phrases which quoted him as saying:

"We may have to resort to direct relief on account of the exceptional gravity of the situation, but to me the ideal plan is not direct relief. Cities should get some work for their money." He was not in favor of the "dole."

Son of Francois Rinfret and Albina Pominville, he is survived only by his brother, Thibaudeau. His other brother, Charles, died about four years ago.

Los Angeles, July 13.—(AP)— Fernand Rinfret, 56, Canadian Secretary of State and former mayor of Montreal, died shortly before midnight last night in an ambulance removing him to the hospital.

The coronary and death apparently was caused by a heart attack. Attaches of the (Biltmore) hotel, where he lived, said Monday said Mr Rinfrets complained of illness and asked that a physician be called. A police ambulance was summoned, but doctors pronounced him dead on arrival at the hospital.

ELEPHANT SENDS 4th VICTIM TO HOSPITAL

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Rosie, the "bad" elephant of the Barnum and Bailey Circus, went on a rampage again today and sent her fourth victim of the year to hospital. Ed Lawes of Herkimer, N.Y., an assistant animal trainer, with the circus which opened here today, was caught in Rosie's trunk, thrown to the ground and trampled on.

Rosie has put three other men in hospital in different parts of the United States and has gained a reputation around the circus of being a "bad actor."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Toronto market was firm to strong from the opening today but failed to approximate the New York gains or reflect the sharp pick up in the volume of trading on the big board. Only 139,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours. All except a change indices were narrowly higher at noon.

Trading was concentrated in the secondary golds and higher prices were boarded by Aunor, Kirkland Lake, McKenzie Red Lake, Pamour, Powell Rouyn and a few others. Most of the seniors of the gold and base metal list were higher by fractions. Waite-Amulet and Coast Copper were the strongest of the cheaper base metal list.

Steel and food stocks were higher at early afternoon and the utilities were off narrowly. Calgary-Edmonton, Okalia and Home Oil were all gainers in the western oil list.

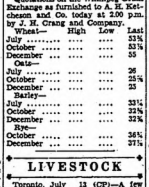
WALL STREET

New York, July 13 (AP)—The recovery swing continued in today's stock market with gains of fractions to three points in Wednesday's upturn.

Overnight buying orders piled up sufficiently to make the early proceedings the fastest since last April. A subsequent slow-down accomplished light profit taking and, near the fourth hour, prices were a shade under the best.

Among stocks, Loft was one of the liveliest performers, edging into new high territory for the year. Others in the forward jaunt included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, American Can, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Santa Fe, Great Northern and National Dyeing.

Dome and McIntyre Porcupine inched forward in the Canadian group but most others, including Dominion 4's in the bond market, were unchanged.



Facing Deportation Trial

Harry Bridges, storm centre of Pacific coast labor ranks for many months and alleged by his enemies to be a "dangerous alien undesirable," is pictured as he boarded the liner Angel Island in San Francisco Bay to defend himself against deportation proceedings. Bridges, Australian-born, has long been a power in west coast dockyard and shipping labor unions. His opponents sought recently to impeach Labor Secretary Francis Perkins for alleged dereliction of duty in failing to have him deported.

Diamond Drilling At Smada Lead Mines Limited

First Drill Hole to Go to Depth for Geological Information

Lawrence L. Adams, vice-president and managing director of the Smada Lead Mines, formerly the Kalmerton Mines, announced that a diamond drilling program has been undertaken for the past week or more at the mines, which are situated 18 miles north of Madoc and three miles from Millbridge. "If results of drilling are satisfactory," said Mr. Adams, "arrangements have been made with private interests to bring the property into production."

This, Mr. Adams said, is the first diamond drilling done on the property and the first hole, being put down, will be continued to a depth of 600 feet for geological information.

The diamond drilling campaign is to prove up the various veins on the property and be sufficient both to approve the possibilities of the ground to the north.

It is said that Smada Lead Mines were worked in the early part of the present century and while no records are available, it is reported that quite a large tonnage of galena was shipped out.

The mines comprise 137 acres and the property is completely equipped. It has a shaft down 100 feet, a set of cages for 2½ tons.

4 Youths Arrested At Revolver Point

Brockbridge, Ont., July 13 (CP)—Four Toronto youths, arrested at gun point by Constable Victor Woodcock in the bush around Hunstville yesterday, will appear in court here today on charges of carrying offensive weapons, theft of a car here and theft of five gallons of gasoline near Huntsville, 25 miles north of here in the Muskoka district.

Woodcock said the four—Duffy Tinsleck, 17; Laurie Tinsleck, 18; Howard Hall, 18, and Joseph Bowley, 17—were armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a revolver and had enough ammunition in their pockets to start "a small war." Woodcock said the two guns were pointed at him as he came upon the youths but that the guns were dropped after two warnings to the youths.

GIRL LIVES THOUGH BREATHING CEASED FOR FIVE MINUTES

Chicago, July 13 (AP)—Dr. D. H. Werden of San Diego, Calif., reported today the saving of a five-year-old girl's life after breathing had ceased for 40 minutes, by removing a brain tumor.

Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the physician stated that now, 18 months after the operation, the patient's speech is diminutively near normal. The only apparent after effects are that she walks some difficulty in walking.

The tumor, paralysis, Dr. Werden wrote, was compensated for by artificial respiration. There was a prolonged period of unconsciousness which he ascribed to insufficient oxygen in the brain tissues. He said the condition was sufficient to cause blindness and non-mental impairment.

Dr. Werden said that respiratory failure frequently caused death unless the tumors were removed.

POLICE COURT

Two operators of a dance hall at Oak Lake, Harold Carruthers and Bill Samuels, were fined, appeared in County Police Court before Magistrate R. J. Beatty, K.C., today charged with violation of the Lord's Day Alliance Act. The pair readily admitted the operation, the evidence being that the admission charge was nominal.

"Frankly speaking I believe this was only a technical mistake. These young men operated the week-end dance on daylight saving time, while in Sidney Township they do not accept this time," pleaded Charles A. Payne, K.C., as his clients pleaded guilty.

Another Plain Warning

There seemed to be no doubt, however, that this was another plain warning to the Axis powers not to rely on Britain declining to honor her commitments in Europe.

The announcement followed flights of bombing planes over France—not only to show Anglo-French solidarity but to demonstrate to the German people Britain's expanding air strength.

In addition to these object lessons [illegible] army and air force, Britain has thousands of troops in training [illegible] the country, with anti-aircraft batteries manned day and night.

The Naval reservists will be required to join their stations July 31 the Prime Minister said, and the manoeuvres will begin early in August and last until the third week in September.

The reservists will be permitted to return home at the end of September.

Advance Summer Leaves

Several hundred reservists already had advanced all summer leaves from August to July to prepare for "autumn manoeuvres". Celebration of Navy Week, which usually is held in the first week in August, also had been cancelled.

In making the announcement the Prime Minister said—

"In order to obtain the fullest possible advantage from the combined fleet and air exercises in August, it is necessary to complete in advance the degree of efficiency of the fleet, arrangements are being made under which it will be easy to serve will take part in the exercises for which, as already announced, vessels of the home fleet are already being detailed.

"This decision will entail calling up of an additional 12,000 retired naval officers, reservists and pensioners under the reserve auxiliary forces act of 1939.

Training in July 31st

"Officers and men concerned will be required to join their depots on July 31. An individual summons will be sent to each one affected.

"I am glad to be able to announce that His Majesty the King has graciously consented to review vessels of the reserve fleet in Weymouth Bay on Aug. 5. Subsequent to the review the ships will leave Weymouth before the exercises.

"It is anticipated that the exercises will last approximately to the third week in September and that the reservists will be free to return to their homes after the ships have been reduced to reserve at the end of that month."

He was asked by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Conservative, how many ships were likely to take part in the Weymouth review.

"I understand," Mr. Chamberlain replied, "that the ships in question will give a great deal in size from battleships to very small craft but I believe there will be about 130 ships in all."

More Money For Air Force

Sir Kingsley Wood's statement followed the announcement that Britain was to provide additional £60,000,000 ($187,200,000) for her rapidly expanding air force this year.

This sum, contained in new supplementary estimates, brought the total aggregate for the year to £360,000,000 ($1,216,800,000). Army appropriations were increased £12,000,000 yesterday to £227,361,100. The navy's increase boosted the total 40 arms budget—Britain's largest since the Great War and her largest expenditure in peace—to a total of $842,564,481.

The Air Council explained that one reason for the supplementary estimates was the speeding up of aircraft and other equipment and supplies, which were being handled more quickly than was expected when the original estimate was prepared. An increase of 20,000 in personnel of the Royal Air Force, from 118,000 to 150,000, also made more money necessary.

Today's supplementary estimates —the third modification this year—ask of additional rearmament expenditures totalling £44,000,000 ($148,720,000) the new suppy ministry. Of this amount, £35,000,000 will go to purchase munitions, and £12,000,000 for raw materials and reserve. The new ministry will employ a staff of 7,000.

BYRD PLANS NEW SOUTH POLE TRIP

BOY NOW STRONG AND HEALTHY

Condition Keeps Improving He May Live Out Normal Life

New Rochelle, N.Y., July 13.—(AP)—His legs no longer pitifully shrunken, his body now strong and healthy, two-year-old Harold Holt faced a new and possibly normal-length life today— nearly four months after physicians said he would die.

Harold was described by attaches at the New Rochelle Hospital as a far different child than the "doomed" baby flown from his Monongahela, Pa., home on March 16.

Although not yet entirely free from the diaphragmatic paralysis which doctors in a Pittsburgh Hospital said would soon choke out his life—an affliction known as Wilm's tumor —Harold is slowly responding to Dr. Joseph Kenny's therapy.

Hospital attaches said he was impressed by the baby's attitude and health and that the growth which necessitated removal of one of Harold's kidneys has apparently been definitely checked by x-rays.

No Burglar-Proof Safe Says Dealer

"There never was a safe manufactured that is burglar-proof," Frank Domenico told the Ontario Intelligencer today as he answered complaints regarding the news report of yesterday's $511.00 safe-blowing robbery at the Belleville Dyeing Company, of which he is general manager.

"When I purchased that large 2,500 pound safe from manufacturers told me there was no such a thing as a burglar-proof safe, but that by including the inner steel vault compartment it would take much longer to burglarize it, but given enough time burglars can open any safe," Mr. Domenico said. He had been informed by large safe manufacturing concerns.

Mr. Domenico's objection to the news story of yesterday was in reference to a comment made by Mr. C. J. Floyd, Toronto safe company representative, who was reported as saying that the inner cash compartment of a safe, the type blown open at the Belleville Fruit, was burglar-proof. Both Mr. Floyd and police admit, however, it would be difficult to use the explosive on the inner compartment, if it were locked.

Mace Brown Does Fine Relief Work to Hand Dodgers Shutout

ONLY GAME PLAYED

Second Half of Schedule Opens in Both Leagues Today

By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

It is a pleasure to report that fireman Mace Brown is still as good as ever at putting out those four-alarm blazes.

The pittsburgh smoke-eater didn't have a chance to run his hook and ladder cure and control out on the all-star field at Yankee stadium Tuesday, but he did in the Cincinnati last year, but he made up for it last night as the Pirates knocked off Brooklyn Dodgers with a 3-0 cost of whitewashing before a crowd of 30,461 in the only game in the Major League program.

Fireman Brown's latest job of answering the alarm was to put the chill, incidentally and completely, on Whitey Wyatt, who has been just about the hottest newcomer to come into the National League since Vander Meer.

Wyatt had won eight straight up to last night and hadn't been beaten in the National League campaigning. So t...e fireman, who was famous for that sort of thing football opponents of Tulsa U. may be interested to learn it has just changed a 12-pound guard from Smackover, Ark.

Tweed Team Assured Of Play-Off Position In Softball League

Tweed, July 13 (Special)—Tweed softball team is assured of a berth in the playoffs by virtue of defeating Madoc 11-8 at the local park on Monday night by a score of 13 to 7, to give them their seventh consecutive win in the league and keep sustained in the first three games. The locals are tied with the Madoc mens entry for second place, with Havelock in first spot. Madoc, Tweed and Tweed will engage in a series to determine Havelock's opponents in the finals.

In the game played here on Monday night Madoc started the scoring in the second inning pushing over three runs on three hits and six hits. Whytock, McCaw, Caswell, Naylor and Alzey were the batters.

Merow tightened up and for the next three innings did not permit a run to score, although in the fifth Madoc filled the bases with two down. Wagar in centre field made a beautiful catch off the bat of Jim Grant, ending the fifth. Merow in the fifth and pitched in the sixth and seventh innings, allowing the visitors to pick up their final tallies in the seventh inning.

Merow and Whytock and Naylor with three were the leading hitters for Tweed, each getting two for two runs.

Tweed opened the scoring in the second inning picking up two runs. They went into the lead in the third inning as the side batted round and scored four runs. From this point to the end of the game the issue was never in doubt. Three runs were added in the fourth inning and a like number in the sixth. Madoc scored the final scorer with three runs. Merow, Ellsbury, Wagar, Orr and Thomson each scored.

The lineups:

Madoc: Orr, Alexander, Dingman, Whytock, Caswell, Keller, Phillips, Hutchison.

TECHNICAL CHANGE IN SMITH'S GAME BRINGS RESULTS

New York, July 13 (AP)—The adage that you can't teach an old dog a new trick or two just doesn't hold in golf.

Take the case of Horton Smith, the blond Chicagoan, who in 12 years of competition has never won a major golf championship.

Wednesday he went to Albany on last spring and they probed Horton's game—which had been good enough to win for the North-South, the Masters at Augusta twice, the Pinehurst title and a lot of others—to find out why it didn't click when the chips were down.

They found out, and as a result Horton Smith, 31-year-old member of the current professional Golfers Association tournament, IIs a highly improved golfer. He will describe, but its effects are immediately apparent in the play of Smithen.

Horton entered the 36-hole qualifier-final round at the Pennoncle Country Club, yesterday with a well-turned 69 to his credit and a story over Clarence Doser, who rode by upon Ralph Guldahl the day before.

Mounting along with, but many of the mighty Smith is today's lower bracket were Emerick Kocsis, the slugging Cleveland first baseman, and open champion Byron Nelson.

In the upper sector defending champion Paul Runyan, who celebrated his 37th birthday anniversary by handing young Ben Hogan a two and one licking, found himself meeting and a like number in the quarter-finals today, the latter scoring a 67 with three runs. Merow, Ellsbury, Wagar, Orr and Thomson each scored.

The lineups:

Madoc: Orr, Alexander, Dingman, Whytock, Caswell, Keller, Phillips, Hutchison.

Umpire: Joe Mann.

TORONTO LEAFS OUT OF CELLAR FOR FIRST TIME

BISONS WIN 10th

Three-Hit Pitching by Bob Kline Too Much for Orioles

Let Rochester Red Wings and the Jersey City Giants wrangle over first place, ignore the 10 game winning streak of the Buffalo Bisons. Such things are only of secondary importance in Toronto today.

At long last, the Maple Leafs have climbed out of the International League cellar.

The Leafs have been playing well over .500 ball since Tony Lazzeri took charge in Buffalo, and have been aided in their drive toward seventh place by a slump on the part of Baltimore Orioles.

While Toronto was winning 16 games in all since May 16, the Orioles were winning only eight and dropping 17. Toronto's double victory over Newark Bears last night enabled the Leafs to pull into seventh place, three percentage points ahead of the Orioles, who lost to Buffalo, 7-6.

The Leafs we nibe seven inning twilight twin bill from the fine hurling of Walter Lanfranconi, and came back to take the nightcap 17 to 0.

Single by Mansch Helps

George Washburn gave only five hits for Newark in the opener but was victim of a single inning that third scored Fiez Clifton and settled the game. Toronto scored single runs in the first inning of the second game, driving Hank Borowy, Newark starter, to the showers. Frank Redher was the big gun in the Leaf attack, driving in four runs on a triple and two singles.

The Bisons extended their winning streak to 10 games by downing the Orioles behind the three hit pitching of Bob Kline. The veteran got past first base, and he struck out seven batters. Kline retired 14 batters in a row before Baltimore singled with two down in the fifth. The victory advanced the Herd to within one and one half games of the second place Rochester Red Wings, who lost ground by a 6-5 defeat at the hands of Syracuse Chiefs.

Wings Rally

The Wings rallied in the ninth to score three runs but fell just short as did The Kilmaster, who put up his 10th triumph of the season.

The defeat prevented the Wings from stepping into first place as Jersey City dropped a third game of the current series to Montreal, 3-1.

BILLY CONN FAVORITE TO BEAT BETTINA IN N. Y. TONIGHT

New York, July 13 (AP)— Billy Conn of Pittsburgh and Mello Bettina of Bayonne, N.J., two youngsters who fully expect to be plump in the middle of the money division, collide in a year from now, clash in a 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Bettina already has been recognized as light heavyweight champion by the New York State Athletic Commission and the winner of tonight's tussle will get an official nod from the National Boxing Association, making it unanimous.

Conn, reigning favorite of New York fistic followers, has left town blasted out two victories over Fred Apostoli and another over Solly Krieger, has been made a firm choice in the betting.

FOXBORO DROPS CLOSE DECISION

Cannifton Wins 5-4 in Seven Frames in Connjunction With Celebration

Foxboro, July 13 (Special) —Foxboro's chances of staining a clean sheet forth in the South Hastings League this season dwindled almost to the vanishing point yesterday afternoon when playing in conjunction with the Twelfth of July celebration at Cannifton, they dropped a close 5-4 decision to the Cannifton lads. Four big runs scored in the last half of the first inning by the visitors proved too much of a margin for the losers to overcome and despite the fact that they held the winners to five runs over the seven inning route, their only scoring splurge of the game, the sixth, lacked just one run of tieing it up.

The only chance Foxboro now has of getting into the playoffs lies in their taking their two remaining games with Latta and Shannonville, while at the same time, either Latta or Shannonville loses one of all of three games which they have yet to play. It seems altogether too much to hope, that this will happen and if Foxboro are left out of the playoffs this year it will be the first time that they have missed the playoffs in the South Hastings League back in 1932. Not only have they been in the playoffs every year but they have advanced to the finals upon every occasion and have failed to take the silverware only twice when they lost out to the Latta club in '36 and '37 after extending the five game series to the limit.

Score Four in First

Cannifton practically won the game in the first inning yesterday afternoon, when one had tieing run on the part of the losers permitted them to go four runs ahead. Johnston led off with a single and Collins sacrificed him to second to be followed by Jarrell, Jarrell and a double by Bleekman scoring Johnston. Bleekman walked and stole second to be followed by E. Jarrell's single scoring two more. Fielding in the opening frame was an item Cannon was safe on an error and subsequently scored as Parkman got his second hit of the afternoon. Foxboro failed to get a man around but Foxboro got one in their half of the second on Bleekman's walk and two hits by Jarrell and Wilson, but his scoring Peacock struck out to end the frame. Foxboro got three more in the sixth, coming within an ace of tieing the ball game as two errors and a walk filled the bases by two hits and another walk, pushed three runs across the plate, with Collins base running costing them the run they needed to tie up the ball game. Peacock tossed out on an attempted steal of second.

It is told the Foxboro lads were able to collect only four hits off the offerings of Parkman, who was hurling for the winners while the losers failed to get to Peacock for six with four of them coming in the disastrous first inning. Loucks struck out five and walked four while Peacock struck out nine, walked three. Bleekman, for the winners, was the only batter to get more than one hit off the latter, collected out three for three for a perfect batting average. Box score follows:

GLEN ROSS WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat Bethel 13-10 in Third and Final Game of Series

Proving their right to hold the 1939 championship of the Rawdon Softball League, Glen Ross again claims the honor for 1939, outing Mount Pleasant after a three game semi-final series and also the snappy Bethel squad which forced them into a third game also.

R. Fryar for Glen Ross and Reynold for Bethel opposing each other throughout the season gave fine exhibitions of twirling and matched each other well throughout the three games. With one game in the seventh Glen Ross nipped the game and the series on a smart double play. Martin to Fryer to Hagerman, catching Woods on a steal from third for the final out of the game which ended with the Riverside boys leading 13-10. So great has been the interest in this rural league during the past season that many fans have expressed a desire for more games and negotiations are now under way for a similar post-season affair to be sponsored by the Stirling Agricultural Society being responsible for the initial steps.

Inter-Township Tournament.

Although league officials have not been completely satisfied in the manner conducted at a recent meeting of the directors of the Stirling Agricultural Society this fall they will willingly sponsor such a tournament and a committee appointed to secure information from the various leagues in the township, Rawdon, Sidney and Huntingdon.

During the past few years no summer sport has created more widespread interest than these rural baseball leagues and their popularity seems to lie in the fact that they are largely made up of locally interested in the pastime and willing to abide by the rules set up with little or no friction between the players familiar.

Just what method of selection will be made if such an inter-township tournament is held is not definite but it is believed that only teams or players who have played in these leagues will be eligible. Arrangements are being completed for their fortnight in seeing the admission charge to be collected going to the benefit to the sporting youth of the district. Further information on the matter will be given at a publication when negotiations are closer to completion.

Centenary Softballers Go Through Season Without a Defeat

Foxboro, July 13, (Special)—Going through their entire playing season from the first scheduled game right to the last game of the finals without suffering a single setback, the Centenary softballers proved beyond all shadow of a doubt their superiority in Belleville softball circles on Tuesday evening when they defeated the Wing's Rangers 16-6 to win the Stirling softball championship in three straight games, Friday evening carrying the Centenary lads coming closest to defeat that they have been ...t season when in playing the third game of the finals the Marsh Hill nine batted them to an eight all tie but, with darkness creeping in on the contestants they had gone the required seven innings, the game was called no contest and thus the champions remained their unbeaten and mighty record.

It was a different story when the two teams met again on Tuesday evening, however, and the homesters made no mistake as they started out right in the first inning to make things interesting for the Marsh Hill nine. After spotting the losers one run in their half of th: first, they jumped on Wright who started the game for the visitors for four runs and by their heavy hitting and timely base running settled Peacock pitched the entire game for the winners and after a "owing four runs in the first three innings settled away to limit the visitors to four more for the remainder of the game. During the latter part of the game Peacock was literally had the Marsh Hill nine lashed to the mast as with sweeping control and outstanding pitching he had the opposition baffled.

Three Led Way

Ray, Cassidy and Thrasher led the way at the plate for the winners with Thrasher doubling and homer in the fifth with two aboard as these three lads really went to town to score twelve of the sixteen runs. Finkle and Campbell were the only two players on the losing side to have any luck with "Shortty's" slants as both got two safeties apiece out five hits between them to score four of the visitors runs.

Following the game the boys picked out an all-star cast from the four teams in the Marsh Hill ball League and the resultant lineup will consist of Wright, Peacock at the Junior Farmers' picnic being held this year on the 19th of July at St. Madoc. The Sidney boys have somewhat of a record to uphold at this event and will be right in there in an effort to again take the silverware.

The lineups:

Reviewing back over the years in his reminiscing style, which actually doesn't go back too far, the Peterborough sports scribe lined up the various managers of the Peterboro team of the time of Jake Solomon until the present-day Eddie Murphy, the former cannot make up his mind, who was the most colorful pilot to head the Stars, Jake Solomon or Knotty Lee. "Possibly the former is, but the fiery Knotty Lee might add that Kerr Corset's Littlock City scribe. In our humble way of thinking there was really no comparison, when it came to color, Jake Solomon was so far ahead of Knotty Lee in that department, that it wasn't even close. Solomon actually drew the pictures into the various parks around the old Central League, which was more than ever could be said of Lee, who is now at the helm of the Oydensburg club in the Canadian-American loop. As far as color was concerned Joe Daly of Kingston was just as colorful as ever Lee was, but there was only one Jake Solomon.

With the 'Oilers' at Napanee.—It was necessary to stage some kind of a tilt at the Flats so Corbys A.C. and Kingston Frontenacs with the Dracup Trex, much to the former's disappointment. Dracups may not be up to snuff with consistency during their regular playing schedule, but Neal Kemp's crowd repeats its exhibition game schedule clean sweep with a 6-5 win over Corbys. "Coun" Dracup hurled for the winners, while Eddie Schriefer of the latter, and Harris shared 'th loser's mound effort.

What price exhibition games—one of the folly of playing for glory—was exemplified in the Major League All-Star game when Yval Goodman, dislocated his shoulder while trying to make a diving stab at Selkirk's drive. Goodman will be out for the Cincinnati Reds lineup for at least two weeks, a serious loss indeed.

RANK AND FILE PARTY WORKERS TO GIVE BANQUET

National Liberal Dinner to be Held in Toronto on August 8th

WILL HONOR LEADER

Ottawa, July 13 (CP)—Representatives of rank and file of party workers from every province will be in Toronto August 8th next for the national Liberal dinner and presentation to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, marking his completion of 20 years as leader.

Efforts are being made to have the gathering display a complete cross-section of the party in Canada. Invitations have been sent to more than 1,000 local Liberal clubs expressing the desire that those attending will be from every walk of life. The "tux" will be "strictly party". Invitations advise that dress will be informal.

Mr. Mackenzie King was chosen leader of the Liberal party at a national convention Aug. 7, 1919, after three ballots. Other candidates for the leadership at that time were the late Hon. Sir Wilfrid Fielding, Rt. Hon. George P. Graham of Brockville, Ont., now in the Senate, and the late Hon. D. D. Mackenzie.

Lapointe to Preside

Justice Minister Lapointe, close friend of the Prime Minister, will preside at the banquet. Names of those who will speak have not been announced. Main features will be a presentation to Mr. Mackenzie King and his reply.

Frank Malcolm Ryder, member of the Ontario representatives in the Cabinet, is honorary chairman of the banquet committee and Senator Norman Lambert of Ottawa is honorary treasurer.

In some quarters it is believed Mr. Mackenzie King will choose this occasion to make an announcement about the next general election. Whether he does or not the gathering will afford an opportunity for many members of the party to confer on plans for the contests.

Hitler Visits Italy

At the head table will be seated the honored guests from Canada and the Dominion including the entire Dominion Cabinet, premiers of provinces and members of the House of Commons, Provincial Liberal Premiers and members of provincial cabinets and leading business and professional men.

A committee of Members of Parliament, and from every province are assisting in organization. They are: A. E. McLean, Prince Edward Island; J. J. Cockburn, Nova Scotia; Burton Hill, New Brunswick; C. Grosse Fiset, Quebec; W. G. Weir, Manitoba; Fred Johnston, Saskatchewan; Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, Alberta, and Clar Hanson, British Columbia.

Since taking the leadership Mr. Mackenzie King has served 12 years as Prime Minister and eight years as Opposition leader. Of all the major party leaders in the empire who were in office 20 years ago only Hon. J. B. M. Herzog of South Africa has a longer record. Mackenzie King's record of continuous service.

The Federal Conservative party has had four leaders since Mackenzie King's tenure as Liberal leader. They are: the late Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, and Hon. R. J. Manion, the present leader.

In his 65th year, Mr. Mackenzie King is robust and energetic and to a general belief he will contest the next general election. If his party is given a majority it will be the fourth time he has been called upon to form and head a Canadian government.

IL DUCE ORDERS FOREIGNERS OUT

Rome, July 13.—(AP)—The Italian government announced today that Premier Mussolini himself has ordered all foreigners cleared out of Bolzano province as "politically and military" measure directed against Anti-Fascists.

A communique said Il Duce as Minister of the Interior had ordered the expulsions from the northern frontier Tyrolean province which Italy gained from Austria in the Great War.

It said the action was taken in conjunction with the Orvi, Italy's organization for the suppression of Anti-Fascism, because "the activity of some elements from Western Italians and residents in the province of Bolzano."

When representatives of Great Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands made inquiries yesterday, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said it was dictated by "Military necessity and political reasons."

Reports of German Troops

Some observers believed Rome may merely be trying to safeguard the security of any future movement of troops and war materials in the border area, which is highly industrialized and of obvious strategic importance.

During recent weeks reports circulated that German troops contingents had gone through the Passo Dei Italy en route to Libya, Italian North Africa, for military operations of an undisclosed character. The present orders may presage additional operations of this type, it was believed.

Tea Into Cocktails

By DARRAGH ALDRICH

I found that the quaint old tearoom Yo Green Parrot had become one of those modernistic semi-bars; where chromium lighting, signags across, an inky sky.

The place was all but empty.

The lone occupied hour, rather—was not yet.

I followed the slithering figure of the animated poster-in-charge, sat in the chair she pulled out for me and drew off my gloves.

Thank God I could be alone!

Then I looked up and met hagcard eyes staring directly into mine.

For an instant I did not recognize her.

Though of course I had had the sneaking feeling all along that she would come.

I nodded at her and said: "Hi, old dear! So you came after all. Well, just to cheer you I'll tell you that you're looking so much better than the last time I saw you that I honestly didn't know you first off."

"Sure enough, anyway."

Last time I had seen her she had been sallow-skinned and old, with desperate lines about the mouth.

Considering everything — and I mean everything—she now looked far more like the petted mistress of a millionaire than the pitied wife of a clever young physician who had just been pictured in all the tabloids as a profligate to the court of correspondent. Maybe it was the slip of the linen hat.

She smiled bitterly at my remark.

Bitterness was not becoming so I took another tack.

I offered r./ cigarette case.

"Why, I don't look one either."

I was the only friend she had who knew all about the thing she had been through and neither pitied nor blamed her.

Everybody has to go through a few hells and I saw no reason why she should consider herself the exception.

All of her life she had been so damn' smug that a jolt like this might do her good. Even if it came hard.

"As long as you're bound to take it that way," I accused her, "why did you come here when there were hundreds r' other places to go?"

"Why shouldn't I?"

"Because it's sentimental." I sneered. "You are dramatizing yourself again. You came here to come dolefully with memories of the dear, dead days beyond recall—and all that."

She flashed into anger.

"Why if I did! I certainly ought to rate that at least as salvage of a life."

I snorted.

"This is the time for you to cut the sentimentality and face up. First place you had no business to come here to mope just because it was the place that you and Jerry used to come in that year before you were married, ecstatically spine tea instead of cocktails."

There was a beam look in her eyes —but she had to get the truth.

The waiter had placed something poisonous-looking in front of me.

I supposed I must have ordered it.

Here's hoping it would be a potent enough brandy.

I stabbed at my cigarette on the chromium and black ashtray. Then I went at her like dynamite.

"You got only what was coming to you, you know."

I saw her cheeks flush hotly.

"You're insinuating that my playing around with the Community Players group is to blame for Jerry's being named co-respondent in the Wilson divorce case?"

I shrugged.

"You knew when you went into that that he hated it—and he has certainly left you very little time to play around with him in his few leisure moments."

"I suppose I have no right to express myself in any way!"

"But you know in your heartache you're right when he said that messing around with an arty bunch of people in a lot of decadent plays was not entertaining any of the selves you are...And Lord knows you were on 2h of them!"

Brooding eyes rested in brooding eyes.

"By that token," she muttered, "you admit I'm an actress."

"You're a darned good actress. That's what's the matter with you right now. You're acting. Coming here to moon over his dead love. Not! You have no love for you is as live as it ever was. Despite the way you have neglected it for your fling."

"But you heard what those lawyers said this morning in court."

Again I snorted—healthily.

"Paid private detectives! George Wilson is an old bounder himself and having run through his wife's money, now wants to be rid of her...."

She flared: "You can't deny that Nelda is crazy over Jerry. Can't keep her eyes off him or her hands when he is near enough."

"Just about as much as Jerry hates mush."

"Might like Nelda's brand."

"It is so bitter that I couldn't say anything for a minute.

At last I suggested: "And what about your own private rehearsals with the handsome leading man?"

She knew I had been holding that for my trump card as she was prepared: "Entirely casual."

"Would Jerry call it casual—if he knew everything?"

"Absurd! Just because Barry and I had a—"

"Reunion in Vienna?"

"...a flirtation that didn't mean a darn thing, it doesn't give Jerry an excuse for ...." (I refused to help her out "and I am certainly not going to take him back—if that is what you are trying to make me do." (I said nothing) "I won't be weak-kneed, I won't! Shut up!"

Both of us shut up.

Suddenly, Just at my shoulder I heard a voice that made my heart do a goiter stunt in my throat.

There was Jerry looking straight into the eyes of the girl who sat opposite me.

He said: "Hello: Certainly never expected—"

I felt sort of sick. On her past words hung all of the rest of her life. She lifted her chin and met his eyes with the hint of a smile.

"Neither did I. Hardly recognized the place. Green Parrot gone futuristic, they call it—"

He said: "I don't care what they call it as long as you're here." Even though she smiled, she didn't weaken. Not so that he would notice, anyhow. She was as casual as if she had not been in court all morning listening to his name—and hers —being dragged through the mire. "Pal," he went on regardly. (He has nice eyes. Fine, honest eyes.) "Let's take it up again just where we left off at Ye Green Parrot. It's gone dasmit modern, of course, but it's contains better of tea but it's the same old joint. Same old corner—and you here. Only I never dared hope old times would come again."

She laughed at him out of the corners of her eyes.

They hadn't, but until you take that place opposite me and shut off my reflection in that fool mirror. A place lined with mirrors gives me the jitters."

Church Interior Damaged by Youths

Kitchener, Ont., July 12.—(CP)—Nine young vandals virtually wrecked the interior of first English Lutheran Church at some time during the past week, it was reported to police today.

The church, closed for some time since the congregation erected a new edifice elsewhere in the city, was entered through a broken basement window. She emphasized that if the members failed in their duty it weakened the spokes. The other poster was of a tree the roots the local work and the fruits the foreign fields.

All enjoyed this talk very much. The meeting closed with prayer after which lunch was served by the ladies in charge. A vote of thanks was moved to the hostess.

Trieste Leaved by Italy to Germany for 10 Years Reported

Exodus From Tyrol Linked by Some with Trieste Rumor

Germans Engaged in Immense Works at Port of Trieste, Including Docks, Air Base, Naval Ship Yards and Warehouses, Says One Newspaper

TRIESTE PORT RUINED

'Is Germany Not Already Mediterranean Power?' Asked by Zurich Newspaper—So Many Lies' Declares Berlin Newspaper

Paris, July 14 (CP)—French newspapers today discussed reports that Trieste, the Adriatic port Austria-Hungary ceded to Italy after the Great War, had been leased to Germany.

The Zurich correspondent of Publicator (independent) sent a dispatch to his paper that Italy "is said" to have ceded the port of Trieste to Germany for a 10-year period.

(In Berlin the official News Agency called the reports 'so many lies'. In Rome the newspaper Il Messaggero said the story was nonsense.)

In the newspaper L'Oeuvre (Radical Socialist), the political writer Genevieve Tabouis linked the Trieste report with the Italo-German agreement for the repatriation of Germans in the South Tyrol.

She described the movement of the German population from northern Italy as a loss of prestige for Germany and said Trieste, which suffered a sharp drop in business after Germany absorbed Austria,

Bisley Camp, England, July 14 (CP)—Lieut. A. Eccles of the Seaforth Highlanders, a consistent winner at the big imperial meeting of the National Rifle Association, today won the silver medal for best score in the second stage of the classic King's grize.

Lieut. Eccles posted highest possible score at 200 yards and 500 yards and at the third range of the big match had 46 out of a possible 50, winding up with a total of 146 out of a possible 150 to head the way into the final stage of the premier event tomorrow.

Six Canadians In.

Six Canadians qualified for the final stage tomorrow and three more still have a change to get into the final through the tie-shoot. Scores of 138 and better qualified, and 32 marksmen with scores of 137 will shoot-off tonight for the remaining places. Last year only five Canadians were in the final, won by Capt. J. A. The only woman who ever won the King's prize, Miss M. E. Foster of England qualified for the final. She had a score of 145 out of a possible 150 in the second stage.

CANADA NEEDS ECONOMIC PLAN MANION STATES

Declares at Gaspe There is No Long-Range Economic Planning Here

CARE OF BOYS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Gaspe, Que., July 14 (CP)—Canada needs long-range economic planning, according to Conservative Leader R. J. Manion. This was necessary, he told an audience here last night, so that the population could be built up, resources developed efficiently and work with wages and security could be offered to all Canadians.

"We have had no planning in the past," Dr. Manion said as the last of Eastern Quebec neared an end. "We had no planning under Mr. Bennett (former Premier R. B. Bennett) and we have none under Mr. King." (Prime Minister Mackenzie King).

"I believe no country can prosper in these modern days without planning any more than any business can succeed. What would happen to a commercial enterprise which just drifted along from day to day and did not plan for even a year ahead."

At Famed Gaspe

Dr. Manion came to Gaspe, near the historic cairn where Jacques Cartier first landed in the New World, from Chandler where he said that in proposing adoption in Canada of the United States' Civilian Conservation Corps plan of Youth Training he had no idea of setting up a military establishment.

Dr. Manion told his Chandler audience that the purpose of the C. C. C. camps in the United States was to train young men for civilian life and that the camps had no

BRITISH EMBASSY AT TOKYO SCENE OF DEMONSTRATION

50,000 Japanese Storm About Embassy Hurling Taunts at British

POSTERS FLAUNTED

Tokyo, July 14 (AP)—More than 50,000 excited, yelling and gesticulating Japanese demonstrated for two hours in front of the British Embassy today in what observers described as one of the greatest exhibitions of feeling against any foreign nation in Japan's history.

Women and children, old and young, took part. Some 1,000 policemen encircled the embassy's expansive grounds, massing three deep in front of the heavy iron gates at the main entrance.

At the height of the demonstration the crowd parted and a three-wheeled motorcycle carrying four men was driven toward the gates. Spectators in an attempt to injure them, but the police stood fast. Scuffling broke out as leaders of the crowd tried to climb over the shoulders of the police. They were arrested and hustled away.

GOEBBELS AND HIS PRESS RIDICULE BRITISH LETTERS

Propaganda Minister Says Germans Glad Some Englishmen Had Hitler

KING-HALL LETTERS

Berlin, July 14 (AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels set the entire German press to ridiculing the "pious hypocrisy" of British propaganda today and contributed a bitter essay of his own in which he said Germans were proud that some Englishmen hated Chancellor Hitler.

The outburst was occasioned by the recent arrival in Germany of letters signed by Commander Stephen King-Hall of London. The letters, it was said, were designed to give the German people a "defeatist attitude" and create disaffection for the Fuehrer.

Answer to England.

Some newspapers devoted their entire first pages to a commentary of the Official News Agency and Goebbels six-column "answer to England". Both charged Commander King-Hall sent the letters under sponsorship of Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

Million Cheer at Bastille Day Fete As Allies Parade

French Throngs Swept by Enthusiasm for New 12-Men Tanks of French Army — Attaches Attend

NATIVE RULERS THERE

French Public Roars Approval of Smart British Units in Colorful Uniforms—People Cry 'Long Live the English—Our Allies'—Scene a Riot of Color

Paris, July 14 (AP)—Two of the huge 12-man tanks in the Paris Bastille Day parade today bore names which sent Frenchmen into wild outbursts of cheering.

The names were Tunisia and Jibuti — both parts of the French Empire which have been involved in Fascist agitation against France.

Paris, July 14 (AP)—France and British staged their first joint display of combined military might since the Great War, today, before throngs numbering more than 1,000,000 in the heart of Paris.

Planes, tanks, big and little guns, motorized equipment and a crack section of the finest troops of both nations, 30,000 strong, paraded before a reviewing stand.

The President, Lebrun, Premier Edouard Daladier, and War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha of Great Britain stood with the high command of France's and Britain's air, land and sea forces and the native rulers of the French Colonial Empire.

Marching together toward an uncertain future, the two nations joined in observance of the 150th anniversary of the French Revolution. The huge demonstration of unity commemorated the day in 1789 when Paris mobs crashed into Bastille Prison to liberate political offenders.

National Preparedness

It was designed to show the national preparedness of the two allies in the face of the Italian-German military combine. Mingled dates more recent than Bastille Day, 1789, occupied the minds of many. The Champs Elysee was flaming the military pageant.

It was also to show since German troops occupied the Rhineland nine months since Germany four months since disruption of Czechoslovakia and three months since Italy invaded Albania.

French troops of all colors and parts of the empire—Moroccans, Spahis, Algerians, Tunisians, Senegalese, Zouaves and Foreign Legion marched with 450 picked British soldiers.

The great military show opened with the roar of 152 planes—52 of them British—overhead, and a 21-squadron formation over the tomb of the unknown soldier where the President, Premier and Cabinet. Some were bombers, some fighters.

German, Italian Attaches Attend

In special grandstands and reserved areas along the Champs Elysees were the smartly uniformed military attaches of all nations, including representatives of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Premier Daladier and Daladier stood such French Empire native rulers as the Sultan of Morocco, Beikes from Tunisia, and a delegation of Arab Chieftains of French Africa, resplendent in their formal native dress.

Lunge are Successfully Reared And 1,000 will be Liberated this Week

Toronto, July 14 (CP)—Officials of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, particularly Hon. Harry Nixon, the minister, and J. D. Taylor, his deputy, are going around with broad smiles on their faces these days for they have done battle with, and defeated, Mother Nature.

As proof of the victory, more than 1,000 three to five-inch lunge will be liberated from the new Peterborough hatchery this week, and thousands upon thousands—an uncounted horde—will be held in the hatchery ponds until they reach the length of ten inches.

There is nothing new in the propagation of young fish as far as other types of game and commercial fish are concerned, but it certainly is news when muskies have been reared in the five-inch stage, let alone the 14-inch stage which, with care, will certainly follow.

Evidence of the 1,000 young fighters in eastern Ontario waters this week will mark the first occasion on which this type of game fish has been successfully reared to the "fish" stage. To New York State goes the honor of having reared 1,700 of the fish to date, but the cost was prohibitive and it was not attempted again. Ontario has successfully combatted the problem and the lunge upon liberation will be of the greatest fishers have relished as part of the ordinary procedure of the hatcheries.

MANY FALLEN TREES

London, Ont., July 14 (CP)—Western Ontario today surveyed widespread damage left in the path of a storm which struck early a two-mile path of death and destruction through six counties.

Minister and Boy Scouts Wonder How They Escaped Death in Storm

Kateaville, Ont., July 14 (CP)—Rev. Bernard Reilly and a dozen Boy Scouts today found time to wonder how they escaped death last night in a fierce storm that swept over them. They were, taken to their homes at Kateaville, where Rev. Reily is rector of the Church of England Church.

"First thing we knew the storm snapped the steel ridge pole and the tent began to collapse," Mr. Reily said. "My whole mind was filled with the thought of the safety of the youngsters. They were rather young to be out in the worst cyclone we have ever had around here.

"I determined to keep the tent over their heads if I could, grabbed the tent and attempted to hold the broken section of the metal ridge pole together.

"Suddenly there was a terrific streak of lightning. The charge struck the pole I was holding. I was knocked to the ground unconscious.

Prayed and Acted at Same Time.

"I found time to wonder how I hadn't been killed by that stroke of lightning. I prayed and acted at the same time. The Cubs bore up wonderfully, like the little men that they are. There wasn't any panic though anyone could have excused the boys for breaking down."

Mr. Reily said he gave up any hope of keeping the children together under the tent and herded them toward the cars.

"Just as we drove off a huge tree crashed down, right on the spot where our tent had been standing. We had only gone a short distance when a huge maple crashed down in front of us, not twenty feet ahead of us. It was our third close call within a few minutes."

POLICE COURT

"This man is not worthy of the court's consideration. It can assure you, sir," stated B. C. Donnan, K. C., in addressing His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., after Joseph Lynch, transient, had pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and revealed he could not pay the assessed fine.

"Would you date my jail term back to the day of my arrest, sir?" asked Lynch as he was given 14 days in default of the payment of the fine. It was at this point, that Mr. Donnan rose and made his statement. The request was not granted.

Jud Mallory, Trenton, appeared on a charge of obtaining credit by the issuance of a worthless cheque. After the evidence had been adduced the charge was dismissed with costs assessed the accused, and upon the payment of the sum admittedly owed, $10.

Mallory admitted giving a local taxi driver a cheque for two dollars in payment of a bill. The cheque came back marked "not sufficient funds," but Mallory stated he had asked the taxi man to withhold the cheque for a few days. The matter was settled amicably after Charles A. Payne K.C., appearing for the accused, and Mr. Donnan agreed the money should be paid.

"Was there any injury or damage?" asked Crown Attorney Anderson upon being informed there was neither, he asked the accused if he wanted to employ a lawyer, Regan stated he thought it advisable and his case was enlarged until Monday.

"May I have the car, it's my brother's you know, to drive home?" asked Regan of the court.

"I'm sorry, we have no jurisdiction over that car. It will be impounded until your case comes up Monday," replied His Worship.

"How am I going to get home?" lamented Regan, but he received no suggestions.

FALL WHEAT CUT AT SHANNONVILLE

A sample of Fall Wheat cut yesterday on the farm of J. E. Embury, rural route No. 1 Shannonville, was shown to the Ontario Intelligencer office, the grains being very plump.

The entire crop on the ten acres which Mr. Embury has had wheat, this year was well filled out and the cut is a splendid one.

The wheat was cut yesterday and is possibly the first crop to be cut in this county of the first to be harvested in this part of the country.

Mr. Embury also has cut four acres of rye which was a good crop.

In many parts of this section the dry weather does not appear to have damaged crops, Mr. Embury's hay crop this year was a good one.

Rainfall of last night was welcomed for the pasture and for later crops.

SEVERE ELECTRIC STORM SWEEPS ACROSS DISTRICT

Rainfall is Quite Heavy and Cooler Weather Follows Hurricanelike Disturbance

HUMIDITY DISSIPATED

Branches Broken Off Trees — Electrical Effects of Storm Are Awe-Inspiring

Thunder, lightning and wind of almost hurricane proportions combined late last evening to produce one of the most severe storms felt in this section in some time. Damage was fortunately light in the immediate Belleville area, but through Prince Edward County has through fire, and damage to barns by wind was reported. At Cherry Valley a large barn owned by Hilton Wood was struck by a jagged bolt of lightning and fire which followed consumed thirty loads of hay and some farm machinery. Loss of $2,500 is estimated.

Branches were twisted and torn from trees in other sections of the County of Prince Edward, and patches of ground soaked from the barns. At Massassaga considerable damage to wooded sections occurred as a miniature "twister" which accompanied the storm cut a damaging swath.

In the Belleville area a heavy downpour of rain accompanied the flashing lightning and thunder which rumbled from the south. Parched ground soaked up the downpour greedily, though the fall was not of sufficient duration to make up for the extreme dryness of past weeks, district agriculturists reported this morning.

The storm dissipated the muggy humidity which has been a feature of the closeness during the earlier part of the evening, and cleared before dawn with cooler weather and bright sunshine on Friday.

MONTREAL YOUTHS ON LONG JOURNEY

With bicycles piled high with tents, camping supplies and cooking equipment which permits them to live off the land as they go, two Montreal youths tarried briefly in the city this morning on their way west to an undisclosed location. The holiday trip by bike is expected to extend over a period of some weeks, it was reported by the youths. During their stay in the city they secured autographs of members of the No. 1 Firehall and inspected the equipment of the station.

party intended to leave the island that night but so far have been unable to do so. Mr. Howe recently purchased the island and is making extensive repairs to the house situated thereon. At times before persons have been marooned on the island for days at a time due to the current which sweeps in off Lake Ontario. People looking at the party through glasses are convinced the men are all right but it is known they only had a lunch with them on the day they left the mainland. A boat is being brought up from Picton and it will try to make a landing on the island some time today.

Residents in the home of Thomas Tripp, Picton, were rudely awakened early today, when a large truck ran into the Prince Edward Dairy crashed in the front porch, when the driver was overcome by a fainting spell. The front of the house was damaged but the driver only received a bad shaking up. One hundred quarts of milk were splattered over the roadway.

DIVER STRIKES HEAD ON PIECE OF CEMENT

A narrow escape from serious injury was experienced by youthful Frank Mutmon, twelve-year-old resident who while diving from the cement pier of the old Institute Dock west of the city slipped in his running plunge and struck a projecting nub of concrete just under the water. A severe laceration of the head and a badly skinned nose were suffered by the youth who was assisted to his West Moira Street home by playmates.

Undergrowth Removed From Vacant Land

Combined efforts of several men working for the past week have resulted in a decided improvement of the area of land adjacent to the Front Street in the vicinity of the government wharf, where a one of the most impenetrable section of tangled undergrowth and trees has been removed to make way for level filling in, which work will later be carried on under the direction of the Fire Chief Lynch to remove the fire hazard there.

FIRE EQUIPMENT BEING OVERHAULED

Fire equipment and fire extinguishers of all kinds are receiving a thorough overhauling and renewal when necessary this week by members of the city fire department under the direction of Chief Lynch. WORKERS AT BUREAU HAVING BUSY SEASON

Officials and workers of the local Dominion Entomological and Parasitical Bureau are experiencing their busiest season at the present time preparing an estimated 200,000,000 freight winged parasites for shipment to all the east and west coasts of the Dominion and the fruit sections of the province of Ontario.

The parasites will be used in this year's unremitting fight against the spruce sawfly on the border stands of the Maritime Provinces, and the wheat stem saw-fly of the prairies of the west; the codling moth of Niagara fruit district and the pea maggot of the central counties.

The majority of the parasites have been bred in Belleville during the past winter, and will be shipped from the east Dundas Street laboratories by express in carefully insulated boxes in which the insects remain dormant until needed.

Boys' Camp Groups At Lake Moira Present Program

With hundreds of cottagers from around the shores of Moira Lake as guests, the Belleville Boys' Camp groups presented an "Indian Council Program," in all its pomp and glorification on the Moira Camp grounds on Wednesday evening.

Changing the true spirit of the "Indian Council" in its ancient coloring, the presentation was picturesque and carried a true North American Indian atmosphere amid flaming camp fires and Indian teepees. Camp Director Joe Shortt was in charge assisted by the various camp leaders, all of whom were equally responsible for the splendid and colorful production.

MILLION CHEER

Before the march began police estimated the crowd inside the parade area at "more than 1,000,000".

The public roared frantic approval of the Grenadier, Coldstream, Scots, Irish and Welsh Guards. British sailors followed them to cries of "Long live the English-speaking allies!"

The British units had a place of honor immediately behind students of military schools; including St. Cyr. They came the cream of the French army, led by the Republican guard with shining breast-plates and flowing plumes.

Alpine Streets.

Alpine troops wore dark blue berets and carried sits slung across their shoulders in the brilliant July sunshine. Then came the tough fortress troops who man the Maginot Line.

In the midst of the regular troops marched Zouaves in full red pantaloons. Algerians, Tunisians, Moroccans and Senegalese all wore brilliant desert dress.

Cries of "La Legion! La Legion!" came from the crowd. For the first time in French history the famed desert fighting of the Foreign Legion, recruited from every land, marched in a Bastille Day parade.

After the bearded Legionaries came detachments of the navy and the air force with their heels rumbled motorized artillery, led by anti-aircraft guns with their muzzles tipped skyward and three batteries of new French short-barrelled 105's and long-barrelled 155's.

The last section of the military demonstration was motorized equipment. The units ranged from motorcycles with sidecars, carrying machine guns, to "moving forts" — huge tanks with crews of twelve. They rolled down the avenue at about 30 miles an hour.

IDENTITY TRACED THROUGH A LABEL

Body of Wealthy Jewish Traveller, Abe Ash, Will be Sent to States

London, Ont., July 14 (CP)—Instructions from relatives were awaited today, before sending the body of 72-year-old Abe Ash to Dallas, Texas, for burial.

Identity of the Jewish traveller, suppose to have a $5 00 passport and means, was traced through a label on the coat he wore when found wandering London streets in a semi-coma Thursday night. He died Sunday.

Plans were completed here for Ash's burial in a Jewish cemetery, but a United States Consular official, Charles E. Payne, said last night he had communicated with the elderly man's attorney, Nelson Phillips of Dallas.

Through the attorney, a cousin of Ash, Mrs. Walter Felton, Dallas, was located. Payne said he believed Phillips would act for relatives and instruct the body be sent to Dallas for burial. Crown Attorney Norman Newman has given consent to transfer of the body.

Papers in Ash's baggage, which had gone to Detroit with the man, fatally ill, wandered off a train here, indicated he was a diabetic. One bundle of recently-cashed cheques, it was reported, drawn over his signature in various transactions, totalled $72,000.

One report described Ash as a world traveller and a retired miner of St. Louis, Mo. Thomas R. Madden, Public Administrator of St. Louis, telephoned Dr. A. B. Routledge, Middlesex chief coroner, asking that the body be shipped there.

VICTIM DRIVING ON WRONG SIDE

Coroner's Jury Enquires Into Death of Two Near Tweed

Investigating the death of Frank Lamm, 58, and Charles A. Holt, 54, of Buffalo, a coroner's jury Thursday afternoon placed the blame for the accident on the fact that they were driving on the wrong side of the highway.

Lamm died on July 7, and Holt on July 12, as result of injuries received when Holt's car, going west on Highway No. 37, collided on the top of a hill with a car driven by Ralph Hollefriend. The jury found that the car driven by Hollefriend was on the right side of the road and the Holt car was on the wrong side. No blame was attached to Hollefriend.

Lamm and Holt had been fishing at Long Lake, in the northern section of Hastings County. E. P. Stettenbens was also with the two men. The three men were returning to Buffalo when the accident occurred, about 22 miles north of this city.

Traffic Officer S. Irvine of this city, who forwarded the inquest, stated that there was no doubt as to the cause of the accident.

"The American car, driven by Mr. Holt, was proceeding westerly on Highway No. 37 on the wrong side of the road. The actual collision took place on the top of a small hill neither driver was able to see the other until within a few feet of each other. Hollefriend was driving on his right side of the road."

The cars collided with such force that the motors of both cars were driven back into the front seats. Mr. Stettebens was released from the hospital three days ago.

Ciger Counter Used To Locate Radium

Peterborough, Ont., July 14 (CP) —A giger counter, a device sensitive to the influence of radium, was brought into use today in an effort to locate $3,100 worth of the precious metal missing from the offices of the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic here.

The radium was contained in nine needles holding 250 milligrams of the metal. The needles were missed Wednesday when a nurse went to the vault in which they are kept. Clinic officials said they had disappeared some time between July 3, when they were last seen for a treatment, and Wednesday.

The nurse whose duty it was to look after the radium recalled locking the needles in a metal container box after the last treatment but could not be sure she had placed the box in its vault. No signs were found of the vault having been tampered with and officials feared the strong box may have been carried off by a sneak thief who mistook it for a cash box.

They said the thief may have thrown the box and its contents away after discovering that it contained a seemingly valueless lot of five lead containers in which the radium needles were protected.

Police Blotter

Provincial Police at Gananoque asked city and Provincial police of this city to be on the lookout for two negros, said to be travelling in a large sedan motor car, bearing New York State licence plates, number 2P 110. The vehicle is said to be a stolen one. The two hunted negroes are wanted in Gananoque for breaking and entering.

While patrolling his beat yesterday, a city police board the crash of two motor cars in collision. Glancing in the direction of the scene of the crash Detect. the officer saw a car speeding away. He immediately commandeered a passing motor car and gave chase.

The fleeing vehicle was soon overtaken and the driver, Robt. Paul of Toronto, taken to the police station for questioning. Detect. Mr. Paul and a passenger in the car were detained at length for questioning. Charges of violations of the Liquor Control Act are pending further investigation. Chief Kidd stated today. Constable Wright reported the vehicle struck by Mr. Paul's car is the property of Louis Hirsch of this city and had been parked by the owner.

Visitor Impressed With Hastings Co.

Mr. Charles Odell, manufacturer of 130 Ackley Avenue, Johnston City, New York, was a visitor to the local Chamber of Commerce yesterday in company with Mr. John Dean, a native of Moira district, who at present is proprietor of a summer camp in Arden vicinity.

Mr. Odell has followed with considerable interest the activity of the Bata Shoe Company in this district due to his close relationship with this end of the manufacturing business in Johnston City, which is the headquarters of the Endicott-Johnston Shoe Company, largest independent manufacturers.

The visitor expressed delight at the natural scenery through this section of Ontario describing it as one of the most beautiful and interesting trips experienced. The contrast with his native New York area which is hemmed in by the Catskill Mountains is a striking one he reported.

So impressed is Mr. Odell with Hastings and Provincial Counties and the facilities they afford for a perfect summer honeymoon, he has declared his intention of making regular summer visits to this district in future.

AT THE BELLE

"UNION PACIFIC"

Cecil B. De Mille's reputation as the most lavish producer in Hollywood increases with everyBuccaneer picture he makes. Those who saw the library of research, the carloads of costumes, the city of settings and the army of players he assembled a season ago for "The Buccaneer", thought he could never top this for splendor and openhandedness.

But they didn't know De Mille! His latest epic, "Union Pacific," the story of the first transcontinental railroad, which comes next to the Belle Theatre with Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea starred, dwarfs anything the famed producer-director has previously filmed.

In the case of "Union Pacific" De Mille sent writers and researchers to work for weeks in the museums at Omaha, where they opened stacks of historical correspondence that had lain bundled and forgotten for almost seventy years and learned things about the building of the first transcontinental railroad which had never been known before. It is DeMille's argument that dates are not important outside of the schoolbook but that a producer must recreate an era when he undertakes to do a historical picture—and that DeMille is that everything seen on the screen from the Indians set to the driving spike button must contribute to the recreation.

Dan Sayre Groesbeck, whose pictures hang in the Louvre and other museums, painted his visualizations of major scenes in the script, which De Mille later used as a guide for composition, lighting and wardrobe. The best available talent in 62 studio departments was loaned to De Mille for the picture.

A 150-page booklet of research notes was compiled by Frank Cullen, Irvin and Waldo Twitchell research experts. It contains chapters under such headings as "Forage Caps", "Construction Schools", "Bull-whackers", such little known facts as these.

1. Lincoln signed his full name "Abraham Lincoln", to all the railroad bills due to his interest in the railroads. As a rule he used the signature "A. Lincoln."

2. In 1867-68 Camels were used on the Nevada, California, and Arizona deserts to transport mail and supplies.

3. In order to teach the Indians to fear and respect the telegraph lines, so that they would not destroy them, some of the more intelligent chiefs were taken to Fort Laramie, and some to Fort Kearney, 300 miles apart. Messages were then sent by the two groups to each other. Then the chiefs were taken to a meeting place halfway between and the messages checked. This convinced them that the telegraph was Big Medicine and should be left alone. At about the same time, some Indians were riding along holding a piece of wire which, if stolen, when a thunder storm came up, lightning struck the wire and killed those holding it. This further convinced the savages of the magic powers of the telegraph.

4. In one day, eight Irish rail layers handled, by hand, 1,970,000 pounds of rails, or over 122 tons per man.

The reason that the railroads had so much trouble with the buffalo herds was that they liked to scratch their backs on the telegraph poles, and herds would come from miles around to scratch, often destroying the poles.

6. The band that played at the railroads completion ceremonies on May 10, 1869, was resplendent in new uniforms which it had obtained from London at a cost of $1200.

AT THE McCARTHY

"TO THE VICTOR"

The McCarthy Theatre proudly again presents "To the Victor" which is now playing with the companion feature "Mexicali Rose." "To The Victor", is the only motion picture made in 1938 to be with "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" as being the best made in 1938, when first seen several months ago at the McCarthy Theatre, the patrons' praise of this great production was so great since having had so many request to again show "To The Victor" that at last the management has for the very first time brought back a picture, Do not miss it.

The picture is exciting and deeply affecting without any false sentiment and splendidly produced and acted. Will Fyffe, who has the principal role turns in one of the finest characterization roles, ever seen on the screen and Margaret Lockwood, recently featured in Alfred Hitchcock's greatest hit—"The Lady Vanishes" is the romantic interest of "To The Victor" is cowritten with John Loder, who also deserves high praise for his excellent acting. Everyone should see "To The Victor". It is more than just a motion picture, it is a great emotional experience. The companion feature presents the screen's greatest cowboy star, Gene Autry, in his finest musical, action packed, outdoor production, "Mexicali Rose", a splendid story of the old frontier days in Arizona California, which everybody will also enjoy as it is clean wholesome entertainment and like "To The Victor" suitable for the entire family. In support to Gene Autry, the large cast of "Mexicali Rose" includes such screen favorites as, Smiley (Frog) Burnette, Noah Beery, William Farnum, Lionel Walters, William Royal and Kathleen Fryer who all can and do make the old frontier days live again in their portrayals of the old type of hard riding, fast shooting cowboy riders of the range. In addition to this, a splendid cartoon entitled "Mrs. O'Leary's Cow" also adds still more pleasing enjoyment to this programme which is second to none that has already been seen at the McCarthy Theatre.

STANDING THE TEST

Britain is showing the test of her might in financing great defence undertakings. Parliament was told yesterday that a new public loan of about $1,638,000,000 probably would be necessary to meet Britain's mounting armament costs this year.

If the new loan of this amount is needed it will be raised, for Britons have not held back when they find that duty calls their money in the great scheme to protect their heritage.

This amount seems a staggering sum, but the resources of the Empire are great.

It is proof to the world of the wearing and enduring power of the nation and empire which desire most of all to preserve peace.

There are stories of possible dangerous weeks in August and September, but the British are showing their strength for all the world to see.

It was very interesting to read in last evening's paper about the electric eye on guard over London. Science has been blamed for many things, for destruction by war, but it can do as much for peace and happiness if the world will allow it.

Fortunately the laws of science are open to those who seek means of protection and means of saving life as well as those who destroy it. It all amounts to this: "Let there be a good Sir Galahad in charge of each of the nations, with intentions which have been made for destruction can be turned into pruning hooks for the benefit of all humanity. The electric eye is a symbol of what science can do. It will protect millions and to do so must destroy would-be destroyers.

THESE COOLER DAYS

The first heat wave of the season with a maximum temperature of 92 on one day ended nearly a week ago. It falls short of the season about three years ago when there were two intensely hot waves, the first late in May and the second in the early part of July, the latter one of course being more severe. At that time the maximum temperature in many places went beyond one hundred degrees. One or two days on that occasion heat rolled across the country in waves. Occupants of motor-cars had to close the windows to keep out the billows of air heated as if it had passed from a furnace.

In heat waves there is always someone who tries out the ancient trick of frying eggs on a hot pavement. But there are other tests, more dramatic. Everyone knows it is hot and why heat oneself up trying to get the egg fried on the pavement? As is known no one was foolish enough to waste an egg on a pavement in Belleville, or soil the pavement with an egg.

The pleasant interlude which began with the break in the heat wave reached its peak of discomfort last Saturday, has been enjoyed by everyone, much as people may cry for summer and warm weather, for no one wants a heat wave, so distressing to those who are not well and even to those who are rugged and are anxious to make efforts and do not wish to be restricted into inactivity by reason of too great heat.

LIVING UP TO OUR REPUTATION

The tourist traffic is being well maintained this year, while the appeal of the New York World's Fair which has attracted many from all parts of the United States and many from Canada continues.

The Windsor Star points out that there is a good reason that tourist traffic should exceed that of other years— the excellent advertising Canada and its parts have received not only at home, and in the United States, but in other parts of the world. The Star points out "There are doubtless countless thousands who would like to see the places which King George and Queen Elizabeth have recently visited." That speaks for Canadians as well as for visitors from the United States. The Windsor paper goes on "But more than that, they have learned the warm welcome that Canada gave to her royal visitors. True, no tourist can expect a similar acclaim. But all have learned that Canadians are a hospitable and a friendly people, anxious to have all who come among us enjoy themselves. If this has been the effect of the royal tour, it has been benefit by it. But it also places a responsibility upon us. Those who come to spend their vacation here will expect to meet friendly courteous citizens. They will expect to be treated fairly in the matter of meals, prices, accommodation, etc. We must not fail them. While the welcome extended to their Majesties was a special one, reserved only for them, we can, in a similar spirit, contribute to the enjoyment of each individual tourist. It is up to us."

WALT MASON, PROSE POET, had a homely philosophy, which made his brief prose poems very popular, and gave Walt a comfortable living while the vogue lasted, with a bit put by for a rainy day. Walt Mason was a wandering printer, native of Canada, and his feet carried him many miles, when he wasn't taking free advantage of railway services, rods, empty box cars, blind baggage, etc. Walt liked the life of the rover, and liked the convivality especially, down where the Wurzburger flows. At 48 Walt wandered into the newspaper office of William Allen White, famous writer. Here he made a stand on the advice of Editor White, cut out the booze and the wandering and showed just what a good hand he was to set type. To amuse himself between times Walt used to set up those homespun prose poems, and they found their way into the paper, attracting favorable attention, and finally arrangements were made to syndicate one Walt Mason prose poem every day in a number of daily newspapers. George Ade called Walt Mason "Priest of horse-sense." Walt was able to retire to California to spend his declining years in sunshine and comfort. Recently Death came to Walt Mason and wrapped in his homespun philosophy he answered the call gladly.

"I STOOD ON THE BRIDGE AT MIDNIGHT, the clocks were striking the hour, and the moon rose o'er the city, behind the dark church tower" sang the poet Longfellow—but you can stand on the bridge at midnight, or any old hour, and listen in vain to hear the clock strike the hour—in Belleville—for the old Town Clock which has faithfully chronicled the time for more than fifty years, audibly and inaudibly has lost its voice, and no longer records time as recorded last year. Folks miss the voice of our Big Ben, being accustomed more or less to regulate household duties by its voice—and the silence of the Town Clock brings out another complaint, that the clocks of Belleville are few, if any, striking clocks left. Electric clocks have come into popularity for household use and few modern clocks have striking attachments. So what are we going to do about it?

FIVE BLACK CROWS SAT ON A FENCE, Billy Magee Magaw—five, or four, or three, or more, but some crows sat on a fence according to the old song, brought back to recollection by the sight of five young crows striding along the sidewalk in front of a West Hill residence, following the man of the house about and keeping up a constant chattering. The man of the house says that the crows all but talk and one of them seems to be succeeding in forming words in an effort to strike up conversation. The five young crows display no fear and are as saucy and perky as they make them. They were born and brought up in a tree near by and certainly make themselves at home and pay little or no attention to inquisitive visitors.

PICTON CITIZENS CERTAINLY KEEP THEIR TOWN ON THE MAP. The recent speed boat and sailing races held there, an annual event, amply attest that. Expense did not frighten the Pictonites as the grand prize, the Gold Cup, vauled at $500 attests. Picton has always been prominent in all branches of sport, and though a bit off the beaten path of main highways, has always maintained front place in events calling for national attention, besides sending many Pictonites out into the world where they attained outstanding success and fame. Picton regatta draws attention to the International Speed Boat Regatta to be held at Belleville Civic Holiday, first Monday in August, official races of the American Power Boat Association, participated in by the foremost speedboat champions of the world. This will be the biggest aquatic event of the year and will bring thousands to Belleville for the occasion.

NOT FOR NOTHING

A rather fussy old gentleman who could not see eye to eye with the taxi driver on the question of fare finally remarked:

"Don't you try to tell me anything, my good fellow. I haven't been riding in the taxis for twelve years for nothing."

The driver sniffed.

"No," he replied; "but I bet you had a blooming good try."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

That Hot Bath Can Be Helpful or Harmful

I am a great believed in hot tub baths under certain conditions. The heat to the surface of the skin opens up the blood vessels and draws the blood away from congested parts and internal joints and elsewhere. These wastes are carried away by the increased circulation and thrown out of the system by skins, lungs, and kidneys. After severe exercise or exertion, a hot bath removes the waste products in half the usual time.

When the individual has had a severe emotional disturbance, the drawing of the blood away from the surface causes a "slackening" or nerve tension. This relaxation usually (but not always) induces sleep. Thus in mental hospitals the use of the hot bath to relax or quiet down a violent patient is routine treatment. In many cases tranquilizing drugs are necessary.

However, like other good things in life, the very hot bath, if prolonged, or taken too often, may slacken, relax or "let down" too much, and the individual not only feels weak, but is weaker.

Dr. Geoffrey Holmes, London, in The Practitioner, states that very hot baths if prolonged exert considerable strain on the heart due to the great increase in the pulse rate. Tachycardia (very rapid pulse rate—130 to 160 beats per minute), general "tiredness" and fatigue, set in if the hot baths are given too frequently or over too long a period.

For the average healthy individual, a hot tub bath of three to four minutes, or a hot shower, will cleanse and soothe and cause no particular rise in heart rate or blood pressure. The rate of the circulation of blood is slightly increased, but not to the point of injury—has been proven in hospitals and in the handling of athletes in all forms of sport.

HEROISM SECURES YOUTH A JOB

Becomes Mine Worker After Saving Five From Drowning

Vancouver, July 14 (CP)—A young unemployed miner whose struggle for work was interrupted last Tuesday when he plunged from the burning car in which he had taken five women and two little children from drowning in Howe Sound, today had the work he sought.

"I've got a fine new job," said Alexander Bland, happily. "I start Monday."

Bland was enroute to Britannia Mine, 30 miles north of Vancouver on the Sound when a launch taking Britannia workers from Vancouver to nearby Anvil Island heeled over and plunged them into the Sound. The young miner dived 40 feet from the Upper Deck of the launch Alexander and held up several of the women until rescue boats pulled them to safety. He returned here.

A Vancouver representative of Britannia mines got in touch with him here Wednesday and gave him employment.

New News for the Newspapers

During the past three weeks dozens of readers have said to The Tribune, "What a relief it is to have joyous news all over the front page in place of gloomy stuff about Hitler and such"; or, "Well, thank Heaven the visit of the King and Queen drove Hitler from the front pages for a time." More than one reader has compared this with the statement that Canadian newspapers might permanently banish "Hitler and such" from their front pages.

A section of the public sometimes gets the impression that newspapers positively enjoy presenting "scares", "alarmist headlines", and the forth. A few weeks' work around a newspaper office would correct this in the mind of any unbiased observer.

If the public only knew how little newspaper men like handling day in and day out, the gloomy sort of reports which have come from Europe during the past year.

If it only knew with what eagerness the men at the copy desk pounce upon the bright, happy story and with what joy editors seize upon the constructive as against the destructive development. If the public from time to time wearied of gloom, war, threats of war and destruction, how about the men whose daily diet these are the principal items in their working hours?

If the Belleville Ontario was a relief to the public, fed up on a diet of gloom, it was a delight to the news rooom and editorial rooms, in spite of the immense burden involved—because it gave us all the chance to look upon a brighter side of life.

Occasionally newspapers are blamed for the gloominess of the news they print as if they were responsible for making the news itself rather than merely for the reporting of it. Some frequently complained is made of emphasis on serious news as being "bad for business." At times the question is made that the press of North America—Canada, as well as the United States—is more "alarmist" than that of Great Britain. There is no good ground for such a charge against Canadian press. It may be pointed out that Canada has been at war with China, and that the devastation of Spain was only lately completed, while the butchery in Abyssinia is still a fresh memory. Does anyone think all this wholesale slaughter

The Hot Dog Enters Society

The American hot dog, a habit-forming sausage, received the name by which it is known to all clean-minded, right-thinking Americans during the British King and Queen and their subjects from the late Tsar Dorgan, the sport page editorial and humorist of the Hearst papers, at the time of the Tsar's visit in 1906. This delicacy up to that time was known variously as the Wiener-wurst, the Frankfurter, and the Coney Island Red Hot.

Tsar Dorgan's generous superstition that the Coney Island Red Hot contained a large amount of dog entered, and that whose humor was often unexplainable, as in the case of the Tsar's visit, "Yes, he have no bananas", introduced a family, or litter, of animated sausages into the comics with which he was lampooning the legal farce then in progress in the Federal Courts Building.

Those little sausages would be seen in queer antics, holding conversation in tail balloons, while little fox terriers, fraking through the disconnected scenario, tossed off remarks which identified them as departed relatives. Tad called them hot dogs, and the day he died Tsar Dorgan presented the late Harry Stevens, the New York ball yard and race track caterer, the original drawing of the first of the series in which the name "hot dog" appeared. The drawing now hangs on the wall of the Stevens office from which the late Harry's sons direct a business extending geographically from Maine to Portland, and, culinarily, if such a word there be, from caviar and champagne to hot dogs.

The Stevens dog is prepared according to a house formula by John Brahl in New York and the Zajac Company in Maryland and is boiled, not fried or grilled, and served in a long roll also made to private specifications. The Stevens firm has delivered thousands of miles of these dogs, but does not sell them in bulk or'off the premises of the ball yards and horse yards for which it holds concessions.

In the east hot dogs vary greatly in content; some containing cereal and some being composed entirely of meat, but eastern dogs, generally, are not highly spiced. West of the Alleghenies the popular taste demands more tang, and the so-called dog that is sold in some western ball parks is not only highly seasoned but is starter and fatter—a veritable German breakfast sausage—and usually is grilled on a gas plate.

The notion that the dog is vulgar and that therefore it was socially unseemly to serve the same to Their Britannic Majesties vanishes when it is known that practically all of the richest and therefore, of course, the very best, Americans eat hot dogs. At the races the aristocracy take them from the hands of the counter men, smear them with mustard and wander off with yellow gobs dripping down their fronts, and one glimpse of a Vanderbilt in this activity, or one taste of a good dog, is enough to convince the most skeptical that food is not a patronizing effectation of the quality.

Babe Ruth, incidentally, sometimes would eat four or five on the bench in the course of a ball game and nonchalance once made him ill and laid him up for several days. A dozen, however, is too many. Eight, maybe, or, at the outside, nine, but twelve is excess.—Westbrook Pegler in New York World-Telegram.

GOVT PROVIDES 300,000 BEDS

Will be Used for Civilian Casualties from Air Raids

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 14 (CP Cable)—The British Government expects to complete during the next five years 12,000,000 ($38,880,000) scheme to provide 300,000 hospital beds for civilian casualties from air raids in the event of war.

Details of the scheme were disclosed today in a white paper published by Walter Elliot, Health Minister. It provides for a large number of base hospitals in the rural areas and use of existing institutions inside cities as casualty clearing stations.

The Government already has under 181 hospitals and public institutions in various parts of the country and is spending millions of dollars to prepare and equip them to handle civilian casualties.

Two million 250 sites have been selected for construction of "new hospitals and the first one will be completed at the end of this month.

Plans for the scheme has been perfected down to the last detail, including arrangements for the distribution into ambulances and to purchase 400,000 blankets and 220,000 stretchers.

In England, Scotland and Wales there are 1,400 first aid posts established and 783 mobile units trained.

Do not allow tea to stand before adding cold water, or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

INVITES FATHER DIVINE

After remodelling her home into a hotel and restaurant and then being refused a license to sell beer, Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, ABOVE, brought the wrath of swanky Newport, Rhode Island, where her hotel is located, cascading down upon her head by offering the $100,000 mansion to Father Divine, Negro leader of the cult that reverses him as "god." Hoping cash on the situation, the rotund religious leader accepted the offer, and refusing to the Newport "400" said: "Through my condescension, I am willing to redeem them."

"More Please!"

Bridal Couple Feted By District Friends

Foxboro, July 13. — (Special) — Coming as an appropriate and delightful follow-up to the recent Wilson-Scott nuptials, about fifty young friends of the groom from the Foxboro district were entertained at a reception on Saturday evening, July 8th, when Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilson of Foxboro, opened their spacious home and staged a get-acquainted party for the newly-weds.

Clifford Wilson, mother of the groom, dressed in navy blue sheer over a flowered pringess slip, with Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wilson received at the door with the bride being dressed in her wedding gown for the occasion.

Promptly at nine o'clock the guests congregated on the lawn in front of the house and as their names were called out took their places at tables arranged on the wide verandall. There they were served a delicious plate supper with accessade and ice cream.

Seated at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. William Scott, Jean Scott and Miss Olive Howes. Mrs. (Rev.) Mercer in a few well chosen words encouraged the work of the Women's Institute and the establishment of the Girl Guides. It was decided to hold a Tea Garden on Mrs. Hotchkiss's on Tuesday afternoon, July 18, for the purpose of examining the Girl Guides' work. Mrs. Fred Aikens showed pictures and gave an interesting report on conventions including the Royal visit.

The contest was given, the prize being won by Mrs. C. Ketcheson and Mrs. William Keys. Vote of thanks was moved on behalf of Mrs. Valeman for opening her home on this occasion and also to those who helped in the program.

A goodly number was present including many visitors and two new members, Mrs. Hetterer, Jr., and (Rev.) Mercer. The collection amounted to $2.30. The meeting was closed by repeating the Mizpah benediction.

Fashion Flashes

A good choice for all-day wear at the Fair and for dinner at a smart spot later, is a suit of black and navy light weight tropical with elbow length sleeves. Jacket is fitted, skirt medium width. Cuffs and collar are bound in silk braid. Worn with white or pink lingerie blouse.

Dressed right for a busy day when the sun shines, a good choice would be a short-sleeved sports suit in black, brown, yellow, blue and green plaided gingham. Worn with a white silk jersey blouse and a bright red cummerbund. Skirt has wide pleats.

Just one all-white hat is sure to be followed by others, for a white hat is flattering. A charming one is a loque of stitched white fabric trimmed all around with small white lace flowers.

Out of a picture comes a lovely evening gown in white organza. The silk organdie is posed over a crisp white pique petticoat. White moire ribbon in rich sky blue makes the front part of the molded bodice and continues as a sash. With long wide ends trimmed with pink organza roses. A knotted fichu of organza covers the shoulders.

A fresh note is obvious in many printed fabric evening frocks. An elbow length sleeved model of silk chiffon with a large white flower print on a navy field forms bands. The hem of the flared skirt is stiffened by a band of black horsehair. Crinoline edges the bustle drapery, there are shoestring shoulder straps.

Breakfast in bed, once in a while, and wear a pretty little bed jacket. A delightful model is white and blue striped silk chiffon the shirred shoulder and yoke marked by narrow rolled bands of white chiffon that tie in little bows in front.

Union Services are Held in Stirling

Stirling—A large congregation attended the first of the series of union services for the congregations of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The first service took place in St. Andrew's and through the next two months they alternate between the two churches with Rev. W. H. V. Walker, conducting the first four and Rev. W. J. Scott, in charge of the remaining services.

With the two choirs combining their efforts in the leadership of song, special piano and organ numbers were given by Mrs. W. R. Williams and Miss Grace Pitman. During the service a pleasing vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. Roy Eggleton and Mrs. Walker. An impressive message was presented by the minister, Rev. W. H. V. Walker under the title, "Telegroms of Hope." Next Sabbath morning service will be held in St. Paul's United Church and again the choirs will unite in effort under the direction of Mr. O. L. Clute.

New Band Stand Erected in Village

Workmen have been busy this week working at the erection of a fine municipal bandstand in the heart of the business section of the village. Stirling is justly proud of its Citizens' Band which is becoming widely known throughout the district. Under the capable leadership of Bandmaster Charles Bell they have gained rapid headway since the first rehearsal. The erection of the bandstand is something sadly needed for many years. Stirling's Citizens' Band will now have a suitable place wherein to give concerts and the residents of the district will enjoy many it is hoped.

Horticultural Society Meeting

A meeting of the Stirling Agricultural Society was held in the Agricultural Department Office on Tuesday evening, July 11th. President J. E. Thompson presided over the meeting and the following members were in attendance—President, J. B. Thompson, Secretary F. R. Mallory, H. R. Tompkins, E. Lee, Mrs. Lee, E. Carlisle, Wm. Pitchett, A. E. Duncan, Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. Patterson. Secretary Patterson presented his report of the last meeting and also the communications received. One of the matters brought before the meeting was the question of holding an Old Boys and Old Girls Reunion in 1940. The dates were selected for the possible reunion but very likely to be accepted as the same days used in 1938 when the last re-union was held, June 29th, 30th and July 1st, 1940. Committees were appointed to interview the Municipal Council, Stirling Business Men's Association and other organizations and a meeting of all groups was called for Friday, July 21st, at 8 p.m. to make further arrangements. One of the most successful re-unions ever held in the district was held in Stirling in 1930 and it is believed that early arrangements at this time should even add to that success.

Another matter placed before the meeting was a request that the Society sponsor an inter Township Softball Tournament with a suitable reward to the winner as a climax to a most successful season of rural softball. The suggestion was advanced that it should be kept strictly rural by seeking the cooperation of the three rural leagues, Rawdon, Sidney and Huntingdon. A committee was appointed to present the matter to the program committee for consideration after the idea was endorsed by the meeting.

With the distance about equal from Stirling to both Frankford and Madoc, Stirling residents divided themselves between these two centres for the celebrations on the glorious twelfth. Stirling Citizens' Band was one of the most colorful organisations in the fine parade at Canniffon and the Stirling contingent attended the celebration at Madoc along with the ladies of the L.O.B.A. Good weather favoured all celebrations which were largely attended.

ENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

by PETER BENEDICT

She could not see the eagle eyes, but she had the rest spread before her, the spare and insignificant form poised with the simple innocence of a Napoleon, the square head lifted, the square jaw set, everything even in the outline of him as hard and positive as rock. Once again she knew beyond doubt that though she admired him much, she hated him more.

She made an involuntary movement, as if shaking him off from her shoulders; and the leaves in which she stood rustled like silk, and his heard, and sprang round towards the spot where she was.

"Hullo, who's there?"

Catherine went forward down the slope of grass, parting the leaves before her. She stood face to face with him, and felt him straining to know her in the dark; and knew and could tell how she knew, that the straining was for only a fraction of a minute, for he knew her before she spoke.

"Good evening, Mr. Probert. You take your exercise rather late, it seems."

"And you, too, Mrs. Court," he said pleasantly, though his thought was he was smiling, the remotely amused smile she knew.

"But on my own ground; which should be some assurance of safety —and privacy."

"I beg your pardon. I should not be here, I know; but I had no idea I should be interfering with your enjoyment. I'll go. I'm sorry you came late in the day."

He laughed; she heard the sound and the sense of it, infinitely gentle.

"In about two minutes more the moon will be rising; did you know that?"he continued. "If you hadn't come I should soon be seen to come over the trees across the water there, in a clear sky after rain. There's no moment quite like it. Do you think, if I keep on talking very steadily, you may forget in order me off for another two minutes?"

Catherine felt her heart within her cold as ice. She said: "How often do you come here?"

"As often as I can, and whenever you're not about."

"Please don't come here again—wherever I am. Need you walk on every grave I care about? Isn't it enough that you can take every other corner of my earth away from me, but you must put your hands on this, too? Do you think this place will ever be the same to me again, now I know that you've been in it?"

Her throat shook; she had never felt such anger.

"Get out! Do you hear? Get out and never come here again. And be satisfied; you've soiled everything in this world I love—even this—even this!"

Through the storm of her tears she knew that he was gone, silently and suddenly, for once awed out of his calm, and for once without an answer. She stood trembling where he had left her, and wept into her hands; and presently the moon came up as he had said it would come, like a scarlet lantern above the trees, and shed a flood of light over the waters of the pool, and made her hands red and her tears upon them like blood.

She went home slowly through the ocean of that light as it paled, and the monstrous source of it shrank and blanched to white in the night sky. She was very tired, and still did not know her way, nor what she wanted, nor what she ought to do. But when she reached her cottage in the hills she found that the question was decided for her.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come," said Mabel, meeting her in the hall. Mr. Maxingham has been ringing, off and on, ever since six o'clock. I told him you'd ring him up as soon as you came in."

"But I saw him as late as twelve this morning," said Catherine, startled out of her weariness. "Something must have happened since then. I'll call him at once."

She tried his home number, wisely, for he came to the telephone with an alacrity which suggested that he had been waiting for her to ring.

"Hullo, is that you, Mrs. Court? Listen, we've lost a round. I had to warn you tonight; and besides, I want you to come over and talk to Ronnie Beresford tomorrow, if possible. We've got to hurry after all, the case is up for hearing early in the Assizes next term."

"Is that his doing?" asked Catherine grimly.

"Altogether; it couldn't be. It's purely luck, though I daresay he entered a plea on the grounds of monetary loss in the delay. Can you come down during the morning? I'll send a car to the bourne; he can't?"

"I'll be at your office by ten o'clock" said Catherine, and rang off abruptly upon his gratified farewells.

But as she drew off her gloves and smoothed her hair she was still wondering miserably what the end of it would be; for her mood had not ceased to reproach her with the memories of Howard's Pleasance, Gallowshields Road.

CHAPTER XIV.

Catherine Enters the Box

Court v. Probert opened in the middle of November, in an atmosphere of complete indifference. London had never heard of either of the parties. The case was merely one of property, and none of the people concerned appeared particularly interesting. So the court in which Catherine found herself fighting her battle was scarcely filled, and almost every face in it revealed no hope of anything much better than boredom. In the Strand the temperature was round about forty; in court it was more like eighty. Some who had wandered in wished that they had not; a few retired; those who had no choice in the matter, like the bored reporters at the press table, groaned and suffered with what patience they could muster.

Said one reporter to his neighbour: "What is this case all about, anyway?"

"Oh, some silly squabble over property—the usual tale."

"But the two brightened somewhat when Catherine rose and took the stand, and at the judge's intervention took off her coat. The next touch which had dressed her so perfectly for Court Brandon had not lost its cunning when catering for this occasion. She wore a dress of red cloth, neutral blue, severely plain, but with a cut to it which made her appearance a deed of arms in court at a glance; and against its austere dimness her own rich colouring blazed, the sting of excitement kindling it to a pitch of radiance, adding rose to her cheeks, and fire to her eyes.

"She's not bad-looking," said the press reporter. He was the only man in court who realised the fact in that moment. Adam Probert's placid eyes were upon her also, and no less intently, for all his seeming indifference. He smiled, and said to himself something which Cleeton on the other side of Peril; the conceit pleased him still.

"Where did you obtain this document?" Ronald Beresford was asking Catherine, as he held up a book of Joseph Green in his hand. The judge and jury had already had it in their hands. It was Adam Hart's map of the district.

"From the Vicar of Court Brandon."

"You went to him because you thought it was in his house might exist?"

"Yes, or reference to it."

"And why did you go to the vicar to ask about it?"

"Because he was a recognised authority on the history of the valley during the last century."

"I see. This book was in his possession, and the pencilled agreement at the end was found by you in his presence.

"Yes."

"Did he share your opinion of its significance?"

"Yes."

"He accepted it at once as genuine, and as being conclusive proof of Richard Poole's purchase of this strip of ground?"

"Yes. Pending verification of the signatures, and so on, of course. But we saw several other signatures of Joseph Green among his papers, and it was easy to find some examples of Richard Poole's."

"What steps did you take next to establish the proof in your own minds?"

"I wrote to Mrs. Dunstan, and asked if she still had in her possession the letter my husband had written to her, in which he had mentioned what he called the family joke about this field."

"Was she able to produce the letter?"

"No, but she found the letter which followed, in which he explained it. She had forgotten the joke, and of course had not understood his reference."

"Is this the letter in question?" He produced it from the litter of papers before him, and it was passed to her.

"Yes."

The letter passed from hand to hand along the jury as Joan Dunstan's letter had passed; and a murmur, as yet dutiful but not excited, went with it, and returned with it to Ronald Beresford's place. So far, so good. But the plaintiff looked too much of an Amazon, rather adventurous than pathetic. Still, he had ample time to upset that impression before the case ended.

"Now, Mrs. Court, assuming that the field, or the part of it in question, did belong to Richard Poole, to whom does it belong now?"

"To me. My husband was his great-grandson."

"Richard Poole had only one daughter, I believe, to whom he left his entire property?"

"Yes. His wife was dead before him; he had no other near relatives."

"And how did Mrs. Court leave her property on her decease in 1899?"

"To her only son, Roger Court, without condition."

"Ah! Now, Roger Court, I believe, was killed in action in 1915. According to the terms of his will, made some days before his leave ended in August 1915, a certain sum of money was set apart for his son, Geoffrey? Is that right?"

Catherine inclined her head.

"I believe I am also right in saying that your husband, Captain Geoffrey Court, was killed eighteen months ago. Did he make a will?"

"Yes. He wished to make provision for me in case of—such a thing happening as—did happen." Her voice was steady enough; the pauses were merely a hesitation of words; but Ronald Beresford thanked heaven for an effect whose economy a more demonstrative client could not have matched. He looked up at the judge.

"Captain Court was killed in a motoring accident, my lord—in which Mrs. Court herself was seriously injured." He turned back to Catherine. "In this will he left everything to you?"

"Yes." She smiled. "There was very little to leave."

"Therefore, though no mention of this strip of land has been made in any of those successive wills, and though no member of your family has taken the possession of it seriously, the actual title to it has passed from Richard Poole direct to you?"

"That is the position as I see it," said Catherine steadily.

"Why, in your opinion, had no attempt ever been made to obtain possession of it, or to regain the price paid for it?"

"In the first place, because my husband and all his family, like Richard Poole himself, lacked all interest in the value of money; a hundred guineas lost was nothing to them, even when they had nothing left. Also because they reckoned the matter as a joke against themselves, and most of all, of course, because the land was of no value to them unless the conditions imposed, and the money could not have been regained. Therefore, adding one to her cheeks, and fire to her eyes.

"She's not bad-looking," said the press reporter. He was the only man in court who realised the fact in that moment. Adam Probert's placid eyes were upon her also, and no less intently, for all his seeming indifference. Also because they reckoned the matter as a joke against themselves, and most of all, of course, because the land was of no value to them unless the conditions imposed, and the money could not have been regained. Therefore, adding one to her count with one brief, comprehensive glance and a smile comprehended her lips—without expensive legal procedure."

The court smiled too. And Ronald Beresford, feeling his way through the unexpected mists into the minds and moods of the jury, smiled most fervently of all.

"Now, to continue with events, then, I gather that you would have respected the land—the hedge—remaining as it was. The lane was beautiful, and I had as much enjoyment out of it as Roger else. But when I found that it had been sold to be used for profit, and was to become a building site, I did not see why I should not assert my right to share in the profit. The hedge was torn up, the clump of bushes at the end cut down and sold, and the whole stretch of the lane turned from a beauty spot into an eyesore. Why should I let that sore of thing happen, and say nothing?"

"It was not solely the money, then, that you wanted?"

Her mouth curled in that oddly scornful smile whose sincerity no one could doubt, not even the seasoned veteran on the press bench who had seen many acts put on for this court. "No, but money is the only recompense anyone can offer me. It seems. I would give a great deal of money to have the holbies back in their place again."

Sloppiest Baseball of Season Seen in American League As Teams Simply Fell Apart

Yankees' Lead Cut to 5½ Games as They Were Defeated by Tigers

REDS SMACK GIANTS

Cincinnati Has 6½ Game Margin in National and Going Strong

By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

A week or two ago it would have been almost too fantastic to believe, but today the National League leader has a bigger margin than the first place team in the American League.

Cincinnati Reds, opening their eastern assault with a 7-0 shutout of the second place New York Giants yesterday, extended their lead to 6 1-2 games while the collapsing New York Yankees saw their dwindle to 5 1-2 over Boston in the American League.

There was a time late in June when the world champions had a margin of more games between them and second place than they had lost, but this is a circumstance which never will be repeated this season. They fell apart at Detroit yesterday and they went straight to trimming, 10-6.

Boston Red Sox took advantage of this opportunity by downing Cleveland Indians, 6-5 in 10 innings.

Sloppy Baseball

The whole baseball world at the American League yesterday presented some of the sloppiest baseball of the season.

There were 18 bases on balls and 21 hits in the Yankees' melee. With the Yankees leading 4-1 going into the last half of the eighth Atley Donald, the undefeated rookie and ace champion, passed three men and was yanked. Then, with two out, three relief hurlers let in nine runs and let out the ball game.

Boston belted Bobby Feller out of the box with a five-run flurry in the fourth inning of their night game, they gave all five runs back to the Indians in the ninth. The Indians refused to accept the proposition, however, and in the 10th Mel Harder walked three men and then gave a single to Lou Finney.

Chicago White Sox ripped out an eight-run lead in the first three innings against Philadelphia Athletics and then lost 12-10 to a belated 23-hit bombardment by the A's.

Similarly Washington Senators took a three-run lift on St. Louis Browns in the second inning and then were knocked out 4-3 as Vernon Kennedy settled down to an eight-hit pitching performance.

No Monkeyshining

There were no such monkeyshines in the staid senior circuit.

Cincinnati's important victory was achieved on the five-hit pitching of Bucky Walters. Despite the heavy hitting and flawless support he never gave the Giants a chance —allowing only one hit in the first seven innings.

It was the 14th victory of the season for Walters, against six defeats.

The Phillies made it four out of five by Gabby Hartnett and his Chicago Cubs as they didn't like the slight he gave Morrie Arnovich in the all-star game, when the National League leading hitter was not used. Ever-time Hartnett moved out of the dugout last night Philadelphia 10,000 fans hooted and early in the game Claude Passeau and Hugh Mulcahy got into a fight which caused their banishment.

With Billy Herman hitting for .400 and a triple, Homer and Ookie Oshs finally forged from behind to win 7-5.

St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Bees divided a doubleheader, the Redbirds snatching the first, 5-3 and the Bees bagging the second, 3-1, on the six-hit pitching of Danny MacFayden.

Brooklyn and Pittsburgh were idle.

SMART BASEBALL

Sammy Ellis Southpawed Picton Into Submission in the Pinches

Sammy Ellis pitched the Belleville intermediates back into the Bay of Quinte League last evening, when the local sportsmen defeated six Picton hits in a masterful manner as the locals staged a rousing eighth inning rally to score two runs and win the old ball game by a 4 to 3 count.

For eight innings it was a dingdong affair with each team having scored in the initial frame, Picton taking the lead with a run in the sixth, and Belleville knotting the count by virtue of hits by Mc-Quaid and Barrage in the seventh. Picton was held scoreless in their half of the eighth, but Belleville began to happen as the Wilkinites moved to the offensive in this frame.

Weeks was safe on Wright's bobble and moved up on Ellis' single, both advanced a base on a wild pitch and Gordon Wright drove a swinging, Riggs stepped to the plate and the Picton infield moved in to choke off the runner at third. Riggs promptly poked a hard bounder to Bell to left of the keystone and both Weeks and Ellis raced ready for the plate and were safe on Riggs' good placement.

Plenty of Excitement

The excitement was far from over at this point, however, as Picton rallied in the ninth to score and make matters too interesting. Albert opened the inning by driving a single and stole second. Ellis retired the side, by striking out Wright, but Collins bobbled Dainard's grounder and Albert raced home, Abbott going to third. Church poked a single over the infield scoring Abbott and sending the tying run to second

Naval Shipyards.

Excelsior's dispatch said Germany had been authorized to construct warehouses, docks, an air base and naval shipyards at Trieste.

"It is a certainty that the Germans are engaged in immense works at Trieste," the dispatch said, "Since the anschluss (between Germany and Austria) the port, as is known, has been completely ruined. Trade lived from the Austrian trade brought it by the Vienna-Trieste line. After the Austrian annexation by the Reich, all Austrian commerce was routed by Hamburg, and the Adriatic port lost 1,200,000 tons of its traffic.

"The question which arises is whether Trieste's future is not already a Mediterranean power."

GRANDI RECALLED

Count Dino Grandi, one of Fascist Italy's leading diplomats and ambassador to England for the past seven years, has been recalled to Rome to become Minister of Justice in Premier Mussolini's cabinet. Although the post is a minor one, it is believed that Grandi is destined for an important place in Il Duce's future councils. His successor in London has not been named.

BRITISH EMBASSY

The embassy staff worked coolly through the demonstration. The only precaution was to move away from windows. A delegation of five persons was admitted to the embassy and presented an anti-British resolution to H. M. Brain, a secretary.

Posters Bore Slogans.

A majority of the demonstrators were members of the Ex-Servicemen's Association, women's patriotic societies and similar organizations. Posters and handbills bearing such slogans as "Punch the British nose" and "Let's all knock down the British", dotted Tokyo.

The foreign office spokesman said the manifestations were spontaneous and that the police would not prevent them so long as the participants broke no law.

The demonstration began at Hibiya Park where 100,000 persons heard orators demand that British guilt helping General Chiang Kai-Shek and "withdraw from the Far East".

At the park a column formed and marched, singing, through the main business district and past the imperial palace to the embassy. The police before the embassy locked arms and barred entrance to the embassy grounds. Some sticks and stones were hurled but no windows were broken.

Tom Banners Over Walls.

Some demonstrators near the gates tossed banners over the wall. These bore such slogans as "Bomb Britain, enemy of justice and humanity" and "No compromise in the Tokyo parley", the latter referring to forthcoming talks to settle the Anglo-Japanese dispute at Tientsin.

Today manifestations coincided with an invitation from Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita to the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, to discuss the order of business for the impending conference to settle the Tientsin controversy. The conference probably will start tomorrow.

No General Assembly.

It was reported there would be no general assembly of the delegates but that Arita and Sir Robert Craigie would attempt to put any general agreement into concrete terms applying to Tientsin.

The British Embassy has been informed of this plan and would not say whether it would be acceptable.

(British officials have insisted upon confining the discussion to the friction at Tientsin which arose from British refusal to surrender four Chinese accused of terrorism and Japanese retaliation in the form of blockade of the British and French concessions. The Japanese wanted the conference to deal with the broader issue of British "anti-Japanism" and assistance to the Central Chinese Government).

COOLING WINDS BRING RELIEF

Middle West of United States Seared Under Three Days of Heat Wave

Chicago, July 14 (AP)—A mass of cool air moved over most of the United States middle west today, bringing relief from three days of searing heat that was blamed for at least ten deaths and caused many prostrations.

The west central states bore the brunt of the heat wave although temperatures in the high eighties were reported from widely scattered portions of the country.

The mercury climbed to the 100 degree mark or beyond in Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa and Indiana in the grain belt, Arizona in the southwest and Utah and Washington in the west.

Yuma, Ariz. was the hottest town spot in the southwest and Utah and Washington in the west.

Yuma, Ariz. was the hottest town spot in the southwest and Utah with a temperature of 115.

Lack of rain and continued heat threatened destruction to cattle ranges in the southwest. Water was hauled from newly drilled wells and supplemental feeding of livestock was required in Arizona where the drought conditions were the worst in eleven years.

RATHER definite progress may be made in old affairs, mainly through diligence, persistence and application, according to leading planetary configurations. Financial expansion may not be notable; in fact, with strong social, romantic and luxurious urges there may be extravagance and unusual indulgence in entertainment or good fellowship. Pireside celebrations seem paramount.

Those whose birthday it is may make steady advancement in their work by application and good judgment, with old matters especially progressing. Proportionate financial increase may be lacking. Nevertheless, there may be urges to out-of-the-ordinary expenditures in social, domestic or romantic indulgences. Merriment and romance mark the year.

A child born on this day, while steady, fair-seeing and trustworthy, should be affectionate, congenial and generous, with strong inclinations to social and romantic pastimes and indulgences. Strong ties in home and friendships make for happiness and popularity.

Do You Know Your Dogs?

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and ma said, Just fancy, Willyum, Harold Twinkins is a grandfather.

Who are you talking about, that curly headed goof that used to bor.

That was my objection to him, pop said, and ma said I just received the announcement about his daughter having a little girl, I must send the baby something.

Send her a nice greeting card with an appropriate verse on it such as, Welcome to this vale of tears, you'll have brats of your own before many years. Can she read? he said, and ma said, Certainly not, she's only a newborn baby, silly.

Send her a card anyway, it will be an incentive for her to learn to read, pop said. She'll wonder what the pretty printing means, and she'll work day and night at her spelling blocks till she knows enough words to make it out for herself. Pick out a nice little motto like, Rock a bye, baby, on the tree top, if you look like your grandad I advise you to drop, pop said.

Ma said, My daughter will receive so many rattles and bibs and silver cups she'll have the presents and the givers all mixed up in a week, so I want to send something she'll remember me by, something orginal, and please keep quiet about greeting cards, ma said, and pop said, How about a little embroidered set consisting of a little gas mask and a little parachoot, you never know these days.

O hush, I'll find something distinctive ma said.

With she proberly will, such as a rattle.

He nearly had heart failure at what he saw. The store was empty of other customers!

His heart leaped, and his fingers fumbled the change until it jingled to the floor.

He stooped to pick it up.

And—heavenly dream of dreams —she stooped with him. Her hair brushed his face! Her subtle perfume sent his senses reeling! And her eyes limpid blue pools of enchantment, gazed innocently into his! He saw stars, constellating stars, and they were tinted with a golden sheen!

She dropped a retrieved dime into his palsied palm and his ecstasy soared to dizzying heights.

He knew it was too wonderful to be just the ordinary world. It felt positive this was heaven.

"You—you ...," he gasped faintly, both of them still kneeling.

"Will you—this is, have you any—"

"Yes?" Her dazzling smile made him giddy, and her glowing eyes seemed to have become a bit wistful and eager.

Henry touched her hand.

Into his soul leaped new courage.

"Will you marr—" And that was as far as he got.

The air filled suddenly with a terrific din.

The windows in the little store rattled, and the floor trembled.

Henry impulsively hugged her close, and he was alone in his hugging. Her arms were about his neck, and they were squeezing so tightly that, had he been in any other condition, he would have noticed that his wind was shut off. Henry was aware of but one thing: that what was going on was the nicest thing he'd ever experienced.

When the noise ceased, Henry found himself sitting upon the floor, with the girl sitting in his lap, her arms still clutched tightly about his neck. Henry didn't like it—he loved it!

The girl found her voice.

"What was that?" she cried, or rather, screamed.

Henry didn't know, nor did he care.

Had they only known that all the racket was caused by a slipping lever in a garbage truck's body, the truck tipping suddenly and catapulting it garbage into the street, the situation might have turned out differently.

But Henry realized instantly that opportunity knocks but once, and that the present time was ripe for a bit of strategy.

He hugged her tighter.

She didn't seem to mind.

"I—will you—" he stammered, forcing all his will power to the top, "m-marry me?"

A minute or so later a gray-whiskered customer stepped into the store. A single glance and he stepped out, obligingly snapping the lock behind him.

"Well, well, well," he said to himself with a great big grin, "I guess that's funny dory, 'cause Melinda tepled me 'neath a overturned load of hay. Them young folks ain't a bit diff'rent than us old ones was."

TWO ATTEMPTS TO ROB WOMEN

Hamilton Police Probe Incidents Which Occurred Last Night

Hamilton, July 13.—(CP)— Two attempts to rob women last night were investigated by police today.

In one of the incidents Mrs. Nora Wren was attacked as she walked along the mountainside near Ottawa street last night.

In the other a prominent Bay Street South resident, whose name is being withheld by authorities during investigation of the case, said she was driving her auto east on Main Street and stopped at the traffic light at Bay Street.

A burly young man opened the right hand door of her auto as it came to a stop and, jumping into the machine, demanded her purse. In other youth opened the left door and also menaced her.

When she refused to give up her purse, containing a substantial sum of money, the first assailant asked her if she "wanted to get a bullet" for refusing.

He brandished something in his hand that looked like a revolver so she shut off the ignition and was about to scream for help when the youth ran away.

An even younger lad was reported to have participated in the attack on Mrs. Wren who was stunned by a sharp blow from a heavy stick. Suffering lacerations across the back of the head and loss of considerable blood, she was removed to Mount Hamilton Hospital where her condition is reported to be satisfactory.

Henry Hops To It

By OSCAR C. KASTMAN

Henry Allen was in a hurry. There were just three minutes left of his noon hour. Those minutes meant the parking of his car, dashing into a cigar store for cigarettes, and then to work.

He rushed into the store like a person demented, jingled a quarter upon the glass showcase, and to the delightfully curved back turned to-ward him, muttered:

"Gimme pack cigarettes!"

The delightfully curved back turned away. She faced him.

"Beg pardon?"

And that was all for Henry!

He stared fixedly.

His eyes popped.

He couldn't talk.

All he did was stare.

A rosy hue crept across the girl's face to the roots of her golden-brome hair.

"I beg your pardon!"

Henry heard nothing.

He felt nothing.

And he saw nothing—except visions of a cozy cottage in the country, flowers all around; steaming home-cooked meals—

"What is it, please?"

Henry awakened.

That dulcet voice brushed away his dreams.

He blinked and gulped.

"I'll take a can of peaches."

He was not yet fully conscious.

"I'm sorry," her face crinkled into a smile simply devastating to Henry's flickering reason, "this is a tobacco shop."

"Er—unlp, that is, what time—?"

His eyes quickly found a pink and lavender clock directly above and behind the girl's shimmering tresses.

Again he gulped.

This time it was not love.

The hands on the clock pointed accusingly to two minutes after 1.

He hadn't heard the shrieking one o'clock whistle.

He snapped into action.

"Cigarettes—matches—anything," he cried. "I'm late!"

Her fingers trembled as she gave Henry his change.

Her fingers touched his.

Then his heart nearly steady and healthy pump—the same organ that doctors had pronounced perfect—began pounding until it would be heard way out in the street.

His sanity partly returned.

A last lingering touch of her fingers—as Henry mumbled thanks at the pink and lavender clock, and Henry fled. Fled like the wind.

That was the end of Henry's normal life.

From that moment on he had but one aim: To place a ring upon the shining finger of the girl in the tobacco shop. There was no other way back to sanity.

He had to marry her.

Then began a saga of that cigar store such as had happened never before. He went there for everything but a loaf of bread.

It did not take him long to find a good

Every time he set foot in the store, he was frustrated by the presence of a customer.

His quest was beginning to appear hopeless.

And Henry was becoming jealous! Jealous of the girl's customers.

Why, he asked himself, couldn't that bunch of yokels patronize some other place? There were scores of tobacco shops in town. Yet they had to go there!

Six months passed. To Henry, two million years.

Then it happened!

One sunny afternoon he ambled into the store for his usual pack of smokes. He reached into his pocket for the price, absently glancing about.

come to see you before I chased him out of the picture? pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum I know you never liked him for reasons of private jellisy, but he was a sweet

WALL STREET

New York, July 14 (AP)—Profit sellers took further small bites out of the stock market today although many issues were successful in contesting the nibblers.

Dealings were about one-third of those of Thursday and, near the fourth hour, prices were no worse than moderately mixed.

Recovery forces were not particularly perturbed by the waning of the buying appetite. It was argued that, after four consecutive climbing sessions, the list was entitled to a breathing spell.

Among stocks accorded support were Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Union Pacific, Celanese, Dodge, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, National Dairy and Columbia Radio.

Lagging were General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Douglas Aircraft and Union Carbide.

McAfee Porcupine let out around a point in the Canadian group and Hiram Walker a small fraction, Distillers, Lake Shore and Canadian Pacific. Dominion was under mild pressure in the bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 14—(CP)—Prices led downward and rallied but were decidedly slack on Toronto Exchange today. A few of the Golds, notably Preston, had a modicum of firmness to strong prices. Western Oils held firm.

Better prices for Copper failed to stimulate trading in the Base Metals. Hudson Bay had a slight gain and Nickel and Smelters were off narrowly. In the Golds Lake Shore was up and Preston sold up 8 cents to 1.80 on news of the discovery of a new body of ore.

In the Industrial section, Steels, Foods and Utilities held about steadily and the Utilities held about even. Calgary and Edmonton and Calmont were gainers in Western Oils.

Man Is Detained On Fraud Charge

Police Constable Taylor arrested a man on Chatham Street, when police charge as Gordon Stewart Smith obtained money by fraud. He was today remanded in custody for a week pending investigation.

The police had heard complaints about a man from a housewife on Donald Street and from another on Donald Avenue and Chief Kidd put Constable Taylor on the case, attired in civilian clothing. The officer's description of the suspect as man of whom complaints had been laid.

According to the story told to the police a man had been approaching home owners with a policy representing himself the commissioner of a city engineer. One said that the man completed and a story of the loss of surveying instruments and of his needing five dollars to get his bag out of pawn and out of a shop. On one occasion or more it is said the stranger secured a loan and did not return.

Considerable Optimism Seen in West Canada

Sections of Hastings County just previous to last night's welcome showers of rain were as parched as many districts of Western Canada during the most arid years, it was observed by Mr. J. W. Thompson, son, of Saskatoon, who with Mrs. Thompson is visiting relatives and brother Warden of Hastings County, Mr. C. Thompson, Bridge Street, Sprlngbrook.

Mr. Thompson, who for the past seventeen years has been a teacher in Saskatoon school reports considerable optimism in the west this year due to the presence of excellent crops which have followed plenty of early rains. He expressed surprise at the dryness of the central Ontario district, however, comparing it with parched land with that of the West during drought years.

REPORT IS FALSE

Mexico City, July 14.— (AP)— An official of the public welfare department said last night that published reports of the birth of quintuplets at Alvaro Obregon, Tabasco state, were "untrue".

The official, secretary of the department head, said the mayor of the town had been sent a telegram advising that the report was false. The report had been published by Mexican newspapers.

WELL KNOWN SLATER DIES

Toronto, July 14 (CP)—Peter S. Berwick, 80, native of Ottawa, died here today. He was a slater for half a century retiring nine years ago. Berwick slated the first tower of the present Toronto City Hall after coming to Toronto 53 years ago. He also worked on roofing of the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa.

Little Action In Produce Market

Toronto, July 14—Prices of butter, eggs and cheese declined yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Butter prices quoted were purely nominal as no actual sales were reported. The cheese market was also quiet, only the odd sale being recorded.

Eggs were quietly steady at the close of yesterday's session. Receipts were sufficient for the demand, but not moving slowly. Prices moved downward and a decline of 2c per dozen was registered in the ungraded section on all grades except A-extra-large. An easier trend was noted also in the graded groups, where A-large were selling at 22 1-2c to 23c. A-medium at 20 1-2c to 21c, B grades at 16c to 16 1-2c, and C grades at 14c. Selling prices to the retail trade was unchanged.

While butter receipts were light, buyers showed no interest in offerings. The department received not one report of an actual sale. Creamery solids were priced at 22c for No. 1 grade, while lower grades were offered at from 20 1-2c to 21 1-4c. Quotations to the retail trade remained unchanged.

Montreal Produce Weakens.

TORONTO SEA SCOUTS VISIT LOCAL HARBOR

Two groups of wind and sun scanned members of the 51st Toronto Sea Scouts called in Belleville harbor yesterday on a brief stop here during their return journey to Toronto after an extended hiloday on the Lake Ontario and eastern waters.

The boys dressed in regulation middies and sailor trousers and complete with pancake hats, were divided into two crews, sailing in schooner rigged dories which appeared safe, fast and comfortable craft.

During their visit at the government dock the boys were the guests of owner R. F. Hart on the yacht Edamena and were served lunch on the after deck.

DRUM EXPLODES WHILE BEING CUT AT FOUNDRIES

NO ONE HURT

With a shattering roar that alarmed neighbors for blocks around, a heavy steel drum once used for the storage of alcohol, exploded through the fumes of heavy vapor in the machine shop of the Belleville Foundries, Station Street, shortly before noon today, hurling pieces of its steel through windows and sash-s of the machine shop, and draping other sections on the rafters of the building.

The ground reverberated with the force of the explosion of the drum which was about to be welded by "Polly" Palmateer, welder, employed by the Foundries.

Narrowly escaping instant death when pieces of knife-edged steel flew through the air to lodge in various parts of the machine shop, Harry Hubbs, fitiller, owner of the drum, which had been purchased from a distillery a short time before, was almost knocked unconscious by the concussion and deafening blast. Palmateer also escaped injury though some mischievous steel, though he was standing directly in line with the full force of the explosion which occurred, when he applied a lighted welding tip to the drum.

The container, which had been purchased for farm use by Mr. Hubbs was brought to the foundries for some necessary alteration. Assured that it had been rinsed with water and that no fumes apparently had been left within it, Palmateer undertook the job of welding. At the instant the glowing torch touched the container it exploded with terrific force, alarming the entire neighborhood.

Windows Shattered.

The force of the explosion was so great that the concussion stopped the factory in an adjacent room, while all the windows on the ground floor of the machine shop were either shattered or cracked while two of the window sashes were completely blown out by the force of the impact, following the explosion.

James Craig, machine shop foreman, stated to The Ontario Intelligencer, that the explosion shook the entire building, while Mr. Palmateer added, that it was nothing short of a miracle that Mr. Hubbs was not instantly killed.

"I was about at the end of the drum-that came out in the explosion, the concussion was bad that I don't really know what happened," stated Mr. Hubbs as he viewed the wreckage around him.

Mr. Hubbs had purchased the drum from the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company at Corbyville this morning and had been informed at the time that the drum had been properly burned out, thus assuring safety of a welding explosion. Mr. Palmateer added that the acetylene flame had no more than penetrated the drum than the explosion happened.

"Fortunately I removed the bung cap before attempting to cut the drum," revealed Mr. Palmateer.

TEETH EXTRACTED AT V.O.N. CLINIC

Dr. Jack Marshall, Dentist, and Drs. Cronk, Gibson and Flynn Donate Services

With the V.O.N. Welfare Centre, Pinnacle Street, turned into a temporary hospital ward, twelve preschool age children, whose defective teeth required extraction with the use of an anaesthetic, were given dental treatment, medical service check-up held last week at the centre.

The tots, accompanied by their mothers, bravely submitted themselves for the ordeal without a murmur. Dr. Jack Marshall, gave the required dental service, and the anaesthetic was administered by Dr. G. S. Cronk, Dr. R. S. Gibson and Dr. R. A. Flynn, to all of whom the Welfare Centre Board and Miss Webster, are grateful for their kind co-operation in the interests of the health of the little ones of the community.

The work was held from ten o'clock until twelve this morning. Following the extraction of the necessary teeth the children rested for a while in the second clinic room where beds had been arranged to accommodate them.

Heavy Crops of Weeds Removed from Harbor

One of the heaviest crops of weeds yet cut by Harbor Board workers this year, was removed from the upper harbor, and boat owners have expressed signs of relief over the disappearance of the tangled mass which has meant considerable propeller fouling this tangling.

Each year an increasingly heavy growth of the weed is reported by workers, and the work of clearing this vegetation has become harder. During past years considerable soil has been washed into the upper harbor over the once bare rock, and this serves as an excellent bed for weed propagation.

PART OF NAZI PROPAGANDA IN DANZIG

There is no doubt expressed here by Nazi organizers. It shows as to where Danzig belongs. "Danzig ist Deutsh" (Danzig is German) says this red, gold and black poster underneath it. Two lions support the circulated throughout the Free City Danzig coat of arms.

Britain-Bound 'Plane Refuels at Buffalo, N. Y.

On its way to Felixstowe, England for delivery to the British air ministry, this 15-ton flying boat built in San Diego, Calif., is being refueled at Buffalo, N.Y. Original plans called for only a stop at Bottwood, Nfld., but heavy headwinds encountered in the transcontinental hop delayed the fliers and made the Buffalo stop necessary. After leaving Botwood, the machine will cross the Atlantic and fly over Ireland toward its destination. Pilot Russell R. Rogers is in charge.

CANADA NEEDS

connection with the military authorities. The men in these camps were given healthy outdoor work on useful projects and received $20 a month. A large part of this money was sent to their families if they were in need.

"I want you to understand it has nothing to do with military affairs," he said.

Care of Canadian Boys

Dr. Manion promised that the first thing he would "dedicate" himself to on becoming Prime Minister of Canada would be the care of Canadian boys. He would inaugurate measures to see that they have opportunities "to fulfill decent ambitions and are not forced to wander up and down the country or drift into lives of crime."

Dr. Manion told his Gaspe audience that the King Government had neglected the home market while seeking markets abroad, although 90 per cent of Canada's farm products, apart from wheat, were consumed in Canada.

If the 1,000,000 persons now on relief were given a chance to live by working and wages, their increased consumption alone would use up the farm products other than wheat, which were now exported.

Would Cut Spread

Consumption of cheese could be increased by advertising and laws could be enacted to force dealers to pay farmers a fair price and to cut down the spread between producer and consumer. Export boards could be set up to handle the products sold abroad in such a way as to prevent depressed prices outside Canada forcing down prices on the domestic market.

"Mr. King has often blamed us for raising antagonisms in different parts of Canada and had declared many times that it is always under a Conservative regime that a third political party appears," Dr. Manion said. "Never in history have there been so many political parties as at present."

Hon. Maurice Dupre of Quebec said that the Canadian tour of the King and Queen was a triumph for the unity of Canada.

"I have one objection, however," he said. "That is to the attitude of the British Press. When the King and Queen returned to England the newspapers there said 'Welcome'. I thought Their Majesties were at home all throughout Canada."

EXTENSIVE LOSS

Scott was hurled lifeless from the wagon while one of the team he was driving" fell dead and the hay burst into flames. His 10-year-old son, Donald, was unhurt. He summoned his grandfather who freed the horses from the burning wagon.

Other points along the storm's path of violence reported highways blocked and communications halted by fallen trees. Buildings were levelled like match-boxes, grain fields ruined and windows smashed by hail-stones as big as hen's eggs. Corn, barley, oats, wheat and bean crops were flattened and stripped of foliage. Only bare, broken stalks remained over luxuriant farm lands throughout the Clinton district.

Windows Shattered

In Adelaide every window of a schoolhouse was shattered by hail. At Watford the roof of a coal shed was wafted onto a railway track to be shattered by an oncoming train.

Tobacco farmers in the area between Strathroy and Mount Brydges saw the vicious onslaught of hail and rain wipe out their crops.

Nearly every centre in the storm-torn region was left without electricity and telephone communication. Volunteers joined forces with firemen to clear up the tangled refuse of trees, branches, hydro and telephone wires.

A transport driver leaving Strathroy as the gale struck was forced to a sudden halt as a tree crashed down in front of him. As he was about to back up and return another fell to block his retreat.

Buses Behind Schedule

Buses arrived at their destinations many hours behind schedule after fighting their way through a maze of fallen tree-trunks. Near Kerwood roofs of three buildings were reported blown away.

Many persons had narrow escapes for injury as the limbs of huge maples crashed down on houses, often breaking rooftops. Other falling trees felled hydro lines throughout the darkened district. In Kerwood several tourist cabins and one service station were hurled nearly 300 yards and dumped in wreckage.

Driving their automobile near Strathroy, where the full fury of the storm was felt, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Bodman of London reported it took them four hours to ply their way seven miles against the deluge of fast-blown hail and rain.

Barns Flattened

"As we drove along, we saw trees "Whole orchards were uprooted down in all directions," they said. We saw barns flattened and others with roofs torn away. Metal roofing from one was strewn for hundreds of yards across the fields.

"Trees blocked the highway every few yards. There must have been 65 big ones down in a short distance. Farmers were out with teams dragging them away, while other men used cross-cut saws to get through."

(Commander King-Hall has intercepted his letters addressed to a number of German individuals, set forth his own views on foreign affairs and were sent as a private citizen. He is a retired naval officer.)

"The Fuehrer has made the German nation great and powerful," Goebbels replied to King-Hall. "For that reason he is hated by Englishmen of our stamp from the depths of their hearts. We are only proud of that.

"This hate is not only extraordinarily honorable for the Fuehrer. It strengthens our love for him. For you, Herr Propaganda Protagoner, can love only those Germans who are traitors to their nation."

The propaganda minister said that "it depends entirely on England whether there is a war," adding:

"We have not received the impression that England has such excellent chances to come off victoriously in such a war. Perhaps you do not know it, but the German people is in a state in which it is determined to defend its national honor and existence to the last breath."

Meanwhile the Official News Agency told Germans for the first time of the "voluntary repatriation" of Germans in Italy's South Tyrol. The information was in a communique directed at the newspaper Le Temps of Paris, which it said "unravels stories of German troop movements on Italian soil, of limited cession of the harbor of Trieste to Germany and other accounts that are "so many lies".

DEATH CALLS TWO CANADIAN STATESMEN

HON. FERNAND RINFRET

HON. W. G. ERNST

Death came to two noted Canadian politicians, one a member of the present Dominion cabinet and the other a former cabinet minister, when Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Canada's secretary of state succumbed in Los Angeles, and Hon. W. G. Ernst, former minister of fisheries, died at his home in Bridgewater, N.S., both deaths occurred within 24 hours. Mr. Rinfret, one of French Canada's most distinguished sons, was 56. Mr. Ernst was 42. He was named to the Conservative cabinet of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett shortly before the 1935 election.

POLICE HALT BUSINESS AT "SLAVE MARKET"

This "human slave market" set up at Palisades, N.J., with the avowed object of offering marriageable subjects on the auction block, with the highest bidder getting his or her choice of mates, had hardly got under way before the police stepped in and stopped proceedings. They charged that the operators were "maintaining a nuisance." But before the bluecoats did their stuff a photographer had time to get this picture, as well as to hear a few of the early bids. Auctioneer Clem White is at the LEFT.

WEIGHTY SECTION OF ONTARIO'S METEORITE BRINGS $4.00

An 88-pound section of the meteorite which flashed across western Ontario on the night of July 11, terrifying many observers and sidetracking considerable interest among astronomers and scientists, was found on the Kent county farm of Daniel Solomon near Dresden, Ont. Solomon sold the mass of astral rock, largest piece yet found of the meteorite, to Dr. Luke Smith, of Chatham, for $4. It has been valued by experts at approximately $200 and is one of the largest meteorite sections ever found in North America. At LEFT Charles Ross, Dresden newspaper publisher, is pictured with the meteorite which he "borrowed" to exhibit in the window of his publishing establishment. A closeup of the blackened pitted fragment is shown at RIGHT.

KEEPER CRAWLS TO SAFETY AS ROSIE'S TEMPER FLARES

Rosie, bad actor of the elephant troupe in the Ringling Bros. circus now touring eastern Canada, didn't like the tasks assigned to her when the big tent was being pitched in Toronto. She seized an attendant in her trunk, tossed him to the ground and injured him so badly that he was rushed to hospital for attention. This picture, taken just as the pachyderm's temper flared, shows keepers driving back Rosie while the injured man crawls to safety (arrow). According to reports this is Rosie's fourth fling of temper resulting in injury to her keepers in the current season.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Dominion Service Meteorologist

Browning movements! This interesting phenomenon was first observed by Robert Brown a botanist, in 1827. He observed by aid of a microscope that very small particles (pollen of plants) in water moved about in a most amazing, jerky, haphazard fashion. It was explained fifty years later that these movements were caused by the invisible molecules of water bombarding the small visible particles of pollen. This some phenomenon has been observed in the air. Smoke or minute particles of oil suspended in the atmosphere are seen jumping about the same as pollen in water, but they are bombarded by the molecules of air whose energy is derived from heat. If air were at absolute zero, these movements would cease.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

DOG PROVES HE'S HARMLESS BY BITING TWO INVESTIGATES

Montreal, July 15 (CP)— Once bitten, twice shy meant nothing to constables Guillaume Grenier and Alfred Ouimet of the local force, who hurried to investigate last night when a small boy told them he had been bitten by a dog. The owner showed them the animal, claiming it was a well-behaved fellow who never harmed anyone. Just to prove it, the dog bit Grenier, then bit Ouimet, and both went to hospital for treatment.

FISHERIES BRIGHT SPOT IN INDUSTRY

Ottawa, July 15 (CP)—Business in fisheries products was one of the "bright spots" in Canada's export trade during the first five months of 1939, showing a gain of more than $90,000 over the total for the 1938 period, the Department of Fisheries reported today. Fisheries exports for the five-month period totalled approximately $18,686,000 compared with $9,581,249 for the corresponding period the previous year.

CONSCRIPT WOMEN, ADVICE OF THE EXPRESS

London, July 15 (CP) — Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express suggested today that conscription be extended to women—especially to women of London's fashionable West End.

"They could serve their country in the home, in the kitchen, the hospital and on the farm," the paper said. "Conscription of women is needed especially in the West End. Idle, useless young girls of so-called 'society' eat too much, drink too much and sleep too much."

NAZI PROPAGANDA REPORTED IN BRAIN

London, July 15.—(CP)— The Daily Express said today that Nazi propaganda such as has been uncovered in Canada is being carried out in Great Britain.

It said an important Nazi official and his wife directed the propaganda here, using German money to distribute, sometimes openly and sometimes secretly, newspapers and pamphlets in the ports of Scotland, where the home fleet was recently stationed.

DIES OF BULLET WOUND

St. Thomas, Ont., July 15—(CP) —Mrs. Jessie Rodgers, 67, of Port Stanley, Ont., died in hospital today from a rifle wound in the temple. Police said the injury was self-inflicted.

Lake Ontario "Too Cold" for Men But Woman Swims to the Rescue

Oakville, Ont., July 15 (CP)— Lake Ontario was "too cold" for several men who witnessed the near-drowning of 11-year-old Nat Ferguson, but Mrs. Alfred Barrett, the lad's neighbor, swam to his rescue and hauled him exhausted to shore.

Mrs. Brown braved the icy lake water last night, while male bathers stood by, saving the lad from possible drowning after he had swum 400 yards in deep water from a crude home-made raft, carried out to open water, by a stiff off-shore wind.

Eleven-year-old Bobbie Ormond, the lad's companion, remained on the helpless craft until police arrived by boat to take him off. Nat said he decided to attempt, to swim to shore to summon help rather than let the raft drift much farther from land.

Mrs. Brown was modest and said she "really didn't do anything extra special." But she had a few words to say about the hunky males who stood by inert.

"Those men—they stood there like a bunch of mannikins," she said. 'One of them started into the water and then hopped out again. 'Phew, it's too cold for me,' he said. Can you imagine that, with a poor lad trying to get to shore!"

CYCLONE SWEEPS SIX ONTARIO COUNTIES; ESTIMATE CROP LOSS AT $250,000

Farmers of western and southwestern Ontario estimated crop damage at $250,000 after a cyclone of unprecedented force cut a two-mile wide swath through the rich agriculture of counties of Perth, Huron, Middlesex, Lambton, Waterloo and Elgin. Rain, hail and lightning had combined to add to the toll. One man, Russell Scott of Egbert township, was killed. Trees were uprooted, barns, houses and other buildings levelled or wrecked by the wind and growing crops were either beaten into the ground or whipped to shreds by the twister. Three pictures from the storm-swept areas give an idea of the destruction that was wrought. TOP LEFT shows the wreckage of a barn piled atop a grain binder which was standing in the farmyard. At RIGHT is an interior view of the United Church at Kerwood, Ont., after lightning had struck the chimney sending it crashing through the roof and into the auditorium. At LOWER LEFT is shown one of the huge trees that were uprooted in the village of Strathroy with opposing blocks torn up as the tree crashed down. At LOWER RIGHT: the debris of a barn that felt the storm's fury is scattered over the neighboring fields.

MUNICIPALITIES CAN JOIN SCHEME UNDER CONDITIONS

Not Allowed to Enter Into Orgy of Spending Says Hepburn

TO MEET MAYORS

St. Thomas, Ont., July 15 (CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn is willing to let "financially sound" Ontario municipalities join with the Dominion Government in relief-works projects if they have budgetted for small items or if they have surpluses to cover their share of the cost.

But Mr. Hepburn warned last night that the Ontario Municipal Board can step in to block any extra expenditure which will increase the debt load of a municipality.

"We are not prepared to allow municipalities to enter into an orgy of spending money which would have to be raised by taxation," the Premier declared. "In that event, I

COMMON SENSE IS SUPREME NEED MANION STATES

Great Leaders Like Macdonald and Lincoln Among Greatest Humorists

PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

By FRANK FLAHERTY

Malane, Que., July 15 (CP)—Conservative Leader Manion lays no claim to being a superman but he does claim to have common sense. He told a meeting that here last night as he neared the end of a week-long tour of eastern Quebec.

Dr. Manion was scheduled to travel westward along the south shore of the St. Lawrence River today for a night meeting at Riviere Du Loup, last of the present tour.

"I am not a superman and I have not much use for supermen," he said. "In my experience, so-called supermen are often lacking in common sense and a political leader needs common sense."

Dr. Manion outlined the qualities he considered necessary in a political leader in present-day Canada. They were a broad national understanding of the points of view of the different provinces and sections of Canada, common sense, humanity or love of fellow men, a love of justice and fair dealing, a great love for Canada and a sense of humor.

It was worth while, he said, that the greatest political leaders in the history of both Canada and the United States — Sir John Macdonald and Abraham Lincoln — had been among the greatest humorists that their countries had produced.

Common sense was needed for the solution of Canadian problems. In the last nine years about $600,000,000 had been spent on relief and if the same amount of money were spent on useful work, such as road-building, land drainage and the elimination of level crossings Canada could support many more people in gainful employment.

CHURCHILL WILL NOT BE INCLUDED IN THE CABINET

Believe Inclusion Would Increase Friction Between London, Berlin and Rome

AN ABLE DEBATER

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 15 (CP Cable)— Prime Minister Chamberlain is apparently decided against having Winston Churchill as a cabinet colleague despite the most insistent press campaign in years to put him in the Government.

For the past two weeks a big section of the press has been agitating for the inclusion of Mr. Churchill, who is easily the most colorful personality and the ablest debater on the political stage.

The campaign is being dropped now in view of its obvious failure.

Mr. Churchill, who has occupied cabinet every important office except that of Prime Minister, would strengthen the Chamberlain Government appreciably, his friends say.

A Great Organiser

They argue that his appointment would show Chamberlain's faith in Premier Mussolini that Great Britain "means business" in its determination to resist further aggression in Europe. His friends emphasize his acknowledged talents as a organizer and his deep knowledge of military and naval strategy.

On the other hand some people believe that Mr. Churchill's inclusion in the Government at this time would increase the friction between London, Berlin and Rome, because of his outspoken criticism of Hitler and Mussolini and practically everything they have done.

As far as foreign policy is concerned there is little difference between Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill now that appeasement

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bisley Camp, England, July 15—(CP)—Captain T. S. Smith, formerly of the Fifth Stafford Regiment today won the classic King's Prize with a total of 282 points out of a possible 300.

Captain Smith had shared the lead with Lieut. A. Eccles at the 900 yard range of the final and came on to win at the last range, 1,000 yards, capturing the King's prize of £1,250 in cash, and the gold medal and gold badge of the National Rifle Association. The winner has been absent at Bisley since before the Great War and was in the King's final eight times previously.

Woman is Second

Miss M. E. Foster of England, the only woman who has ever won the King's Prize, came in second today to take the cash prize of $250 and the National Rifle Association's badge. Miss Foster won the classic in 1930. She is qualified for the shoot as a "pest or present member of His Majesty's forces" by having driven an ambulance during the Great War.

Miss Foster incidentally was announced winner of the King's medal for the best shot in the territorial army. This match had been fired earlier in the week.

Miss Foster's second-place aggregate was 278.

Leading the six Canadians in the final was Lieut. Steve Johnson of Calgary, who is making his first trip to Bisley. Johnson wound up with a total of 276 points.

Sgt. C. E. Moore of Ottawa finished with 271 points and Corp. M. M. Morgan of Winnipeg with 270. Capt. C. E. Kennedy of Hilden, N.S., and Company Sgt.-Major Harry Ross of Ottawa tallied 267. Sgt. Alex Parnell of Montreal was last of the Canadians with 266.

Hundred-Mile-an-Hour Highways Are Scientifically Possible

(By Howar! Blakeslee)
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, July 15—(AP)—Highways on which cars can do 100 miles an hour safely, while the driver, if he wishes, takes his hands off the steering wheel, are scientifically possible.

Such a road, as explained by Norman Bel Geddes, designer, would contain an axis, or perhaps slot, either of light or of magnetism. The beams of either would be picked up by automatic devices fitted under a car.

The effect would be the same as hitching cars to an endless rod, travelling 100 miles an hour, each being them uniformally spaced apart, safe from any kind of collision.

Mr. Geddes explained the future highway today in order to show that 100 mile speeds instead of being dangerous, may be safer than anything in the history of motoring.

"In present day traffic", he said, "the guidance of a car is entirely in the hands of the individual and that individual is prone to fatigue, to inattention, to reflexes and normal reactions and bull-headedness. As a result of these human factors traffic moves slowly and dangerously.

"This obstruction can be overcome only by providing for automatic guidance of the car on the highway. The car picked up at the door of a highway as well in the car itself.

Guide by Instrument

"In general, each car would be guided by receptive instruments within it by the impulses or impulses. These may be magno-electric, may be picked up through the

ANGLO-JAPANESE PARLEY DISCUSSES TIENSTIN ISSUE

Conference Lasts for Three Hours and Will Resume on Monday

DISCUSSIONS FRANK

Japanese Foreign Minister Reported to Have Requested British Co-operation

Tokyo, July 15—(AP)— The conference to negotiate the Anglo-Japanese dispute at the North China port of Tientsin opened here today against a background of anti-British sentiment fanned by patriotic societies.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, conferred for three hours in a first meeting in which, a Foreign Office statement said, discussions discussed "general questions forming the background of the situation which has arisen at Tientsin." They will meet again Monday.

Giant Demonstration

The conference opened less than 36 hours after a giant demonstration in which a throng of Japanese, mostly members of patriotic societies, marched upon the British Embassy and attempted to rush the gates.

Both men talked "frankly," authoritative quarters said. Arita was reported to have requested British co-operation after explaining Japan's view of war-induced changes in China, and Sir Robert was said to have stated the British attitude. The discussions centre immediately on the British and French concessions at Tientsin. On June 14 the Japanese Army imposed a blockade of these concessions in order to isolate 7 British and 4 French after British authorities had refused to surrender four alleged terrorists sought by the Japanese.

Two Attitudes

As the British Government offered to negotiate the case of the four men, Japanese military authorities increased their demands to a general request for British co-operation with Japanese activities in China. When the present conference was being arranged Sir Robert Craigie sought to keep it confined specifically to the Tientsin dispute, while the Japanese insisted upon including for discussion the general subject of British co-operation in Japan's program to establish "a new order in East Asia."

BELLEVILLE BAND TO GIVE CONCERT

The Belleville Municipal Band will open a series of band concerts on Tuesday evening next in Victoria Park, according to an announcement made today by Lieut. Fred Johnson, Band Master. It has been impossible to open the series earlier this season, said Mr. Johnson, on account of other work the members were engaged in. For the first concert it will be a popular number program with Bobby Young, saxophonist and recent gold medallist at the Waterloo Festival and Ted Hinchey, gold medallist on the clarinet, as soloists and artists. The concerts will continue through the series every second Tuesday night. These concerts have been very popular in past years and there is no doubt a large turnout will take advantage of the opportunity to hear the fine municipal band in a popular program.

WILD DOGS CONTINUE TO ATTACK SHEEP

Wild dogs continue to attack flocks of sheep in Tyendinaga Township at night and destroy lambs in the flocks, Provincial Police were notified yesterday. On Thursday night James Farrell, 5th Concession of Tyendinaga reported the loss of three lambs, while John Sing, 7th of Tyendinaga reported the loss of one lamb from his flock the same night. Farmers of that district have been confronted with several cases of dogs attacking their sheep at night and despite the fact that watches have been kept the destruction of flocks continues, Provincial Police were informed. Township officials reported an alarming increase in these attacks have been reported this summer and can give no account for the killings, as no ferocious dogs are seen about the countryside throughout the day.

ALCOHOL DRUM NOT BURNED OUT

"It would practically be impossible to burn out our used alcohol drums, but we clean them as thoroughly as possible before disposing of them," purchasers," stated Clarence Downey, assistant-manager of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, Corbyville, when discounting the statement made in yesterday's issue regarding the explosion of an alcohol drum at a local foundry.

"When we sold the drum to a Prince Edward farmer he said he wanted a drum car. They guaranteed the drum we sold him as being clean and free from rust, but no mention was made of having burned it out." Mr. Downey assured the Intelligencer following his morning.

MRS. M. OSTROM SERIOUSLY HURT

Accidentally Knocked Down by Car Driven by Rochester Resident

Mrs. Milissa Ostrom, 87, of R. R. No. 3, Belleville, and mother-in-law of Reeve George Bush, Sidney, was seriously injured and is in the Belleville General Hospital suffering from injuries sustained after walking into the path of a motor car in front of Mr. Bush's home on the Trent Road late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Ostrom sustained a fractured leg, fractured arm and fractured pelvis and is in a serious condition, Dr. G. S. Gross revealed this morning. The automobile into the path of which Mrs. Ostrom is said to have walked, was driven by William Murphy, of Rochester, N.Y.

According to investigating Provincial Police, Mrs. Ostrom had crossed Highway No. 2 to obtain the day's mail from the family mail box, that is situated on the north side of the highway. Eye-witnesses stated Mrs. Ostrom obtained the mail was in the act of turning to retrace her steps, when the Murphy car approached from the west. Mr. Murphy informed Provincial Police he saw the lady and endeavored to speed by applying his brakes and sounded his horn. When at the centre of the highway, however, Mrs. Ostrom is said to have turned about, as though to return to the north side of the road, which was the signal for Mr. Murphy to release the horn of his car.

Just as the vehicle came abreast of Mrs. Ostrom, however, she again turned and stepped soulsierly into the side of the slowly moving car. The force of the impact knocked her to the pavement where her serious injuries and shock, stated Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien stated today no charges were necessary in the case. "It was purely accidental" as we learned from Mr. that the elderly lady was quite deaf and undoubtedly became confused in the traffic," stated Constable McBrien at the conclusion of his investigations.

OBITUARY

HENRY MELVILLE

Marmora (Special)—Henry Melville, resident of Marmora for the past thirteen years, passed away rather suddenly in Kingston on Friday morning. He was 65 years of age and was the son of the late John Melville and Eliza-beth Macdonald, of Belmont township. After farming for a number of years in his native township he moved into Marmora to farm and later came to Marmora. While on the farm he also worked at the rock quarry at Crowetown where he sustained an accident which affected quite appreciably. He was later employed at Deloro for about a year before his death. He was an Anglican in religion and besides being a well read man possessed a variety with which made him popular with his acquaintances. His father was a school teacher, who taught at Marmora as well as in Belmont township. He was a staunch Conservative and until health interfered he was a member of the Club's Lacrosse Association. He is survived by his widow and seven children, who are: Mrs. Rawdon (wemaigh) Vernon, Campbellford, Orville, at home; Percy, Black Lake, Quebec; Randall, Fla-conbridge; Alex, Trenton; Sidney, at home; Mrs. Arthur Dowdell, of Toronto.

He is also survived by five sisters, Mrs. Geo. Bonney, Belleville; Mrs. Arthur Deroche,

Last Services in Old S.A. Citadel Will Be Held on Sunday, July 16th

Historic Structure Next Week to See Work of Demolition Begin to Make Way for Modern Citadel — List of Officers in Command of the Corps in 55 Years

The last Sunday services of worship for Salvationists and friends in the old citadel which brings happy memories to many Ontario residents and even to hundreds of Canadians in various parts of the Dominion and the United States, will be held Sunday, July 16th.

Services of thanksgiving and praise and reminiscence will be conducted by Major H. S. Alderman on Sunday. The public is invited to visit for the last time the historic old citadel and say farewell to that place of hallowed memories.

Major Alderman has come into possession of a brief historical chart of the Belleville citadel, showing that it was opened in 1884 by Major Moore. The hall accommodation is listed as 400.

Letters to the Editor

The Railways

Dear Sir:—

I want to quote a paragraph that appeared in a letter on July the first in the Globe and Mail over the signature of R. S. Winton, King, Ontario. It reads—"The one sure way to get rid of this increasing annual deficit is by amalgamation, and the opportunity to bring this about is by the election of representatives who will compel action in this matter. Just imagine the idea of forcing amalgamation! The heading of this remarkable letter reads: "Would put Canada first." Compelling amalgamation would be putting Canada last.

It will be a sorry day for the taxpayers of Canada, when they send representatives to Ottawa that will send over the C. N. R. to, a private company to make profit for the C. P. R. shareholders get back their dividends. Everyone knows that about 85 per cent of the C. P. R. profits would go out of the country if they had any profits and I can't understand why the taxpayers don't get busy and see to it that the C. N. R. is run in the interests of the taxpayers as was intended when the railroads were taken over.

If Mr. McCullagh, the publisher of the Globe and Mail would back his statement that the C. N. R. be run on its own, it would not be a short time until the railways would be running on a profit basis the same as the post office. The post office is the best run institution in the world. Not everybody, no duplication, no competition, it's a monopoly. Why should anyone be opposed to running the railways on that line? If the railways were run for our accommodation the same as the post office they would be an asset instead of a liability. If some one can show me that I have the wrong idea I will give up and have to say nothing in the railway question.

D. S. LaRue.

"BLIND ALLEY"

Something entirely new in crime films, Columbia's "Blind Alley" comes next to the McCarthy Theatre, combining smashing action with a subtle mental conflict which has never before had a unique in motion picture history. This drama of a ruthless gunman who becomes an unwitting "patient" of a skilled psychologist's greatest Broadway thriller that's a play as a motion picture, retaining the full force of the stage hit, "Blind Alley" has already become one of the most widely-discussed pictures of the year, as well as one of the most thrilling.

Brilliantly enacted by Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy and Ann Dvorak, with a supporting cast which includes Rose Stradner, Joan Perry, Melville Cooper, John Eldridge and Marc Lawrence, "Blind Alley" is a tense, startling study in modern psychiatry and in modern murder.

Bellamy and Morris are the protagonists of the film. Bellamy is seen as a young professor of psychology, entertaining several guests one evening at his secluded lakeside home. Morris' appearance is portentous killer who has broken jail and is on the dramatic scene.

Bellamy, his wife and his guests are peacefully working out personal destinies when suddenly the home is invaded by Morris, accompanied by three of his mob. The gunman "takes over" the house, to await a motorboat that is to ferry him to freedom. A skilled psychologist, Bellamy probes the killer's subconscious mind. Morris, prompted by his vanity, responds. Soon, as he stands completely revealed to himself, Morris is a greatly changed figure, and the amazing events and climax are truly startling. "Blind Alley" was directed by Charles Vidor.

"Meet the Girls"

Two attractive young girls, out on their own, with a positive talent for becoming involved in exciting escapades, will be the subject of a new film series by 20th Century-Fox, known as the Big Town Girls. June Lang and Lynn Bari are featured in the roles, which are thrilling not only from the standpoint of unusual adventure but from the opportunity they give of presenting some of Hollywood's latest original fashion ideas. "Meet The Girls," first of the series, is presented as a companion feature with "Blind Alley" which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"If The Victor"

"Mexicali Rose"

"To The Victor" from the greatest dog story ever written—"Bob, Son of Battle", by Alfred Ollivant which is now playing a return engagement to the McCarthy Theatre is now being presented with Gene Autry's newest cowboy picture entitled "Mexicali Rose", at the McCarthy Theatre and for the entire family these are two features that offer the very finest entertainment possible. In addition a splendid cartoon entitled "Mrs. O'Leary's Cow", is also featured. We urge you not to miss this wonderful show.

AT THE BELLE

"UNION PACIFIC"

When the building of the "Union Pacific" railroad is mentioned one thinks of such famous nineteenth century characters as Collis P. Huntington, Charles Ames, Governor Leland Stanford, Abraham Lincoln, or even Abraham Lincoln himself (for it was he who in 1862 signed the bill creating the project). But it's the contention of Hollywood's famed producer-director, Cecil B. De Mille, that thousands of nameless persons—he calls them "little people"—had as much to do with the great feat as the "bigwigs" themselves.

And it is this idea that underlies De Mille's grand-scale screen treatment of the building of our first transcontinental railroad, "Union Pacific", which Paramount is now presenting at the Belle Theatre.

The chief players in De Mille's latest film — Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, Brian Donlevy, Robert Barrat and Evelyn Keyes—portray not great Congressional leaders, financial moguls, political giants, or even the better-known crooks of American history, but rather the nameless pioneers, track-layers, pathfinders, engineers, law-enforcers and petty"sharpers.

These are the people who, in De Mille's opinion, were responsible for the realization of a great dream and the uniting of a continent with bands of iron. The big shots may have been most important behind the scenes, but it was the "little people" who battled frontier hardships, official corruption, the untamed wilderness and fierce Indian tribes because they believed they were doing something great for America.

"Too many big pictures concern themselves solely with the big names of history", De Mille said. "The Ohegan, Napoleons and Lincolns are played up, while little notice is taken of the lesser personages who planned and sweated and died so that great dramas could come true. I hope to present another side in "Union Pacific."

In line with De Mille's expressed purpose, Miss Stanwyck portrays a daughter of a U. P. engineer, the pessimistress of "end of track," and the little sister of the husky railroad builder. McCrea is a stalwart trouble-shooter, whose daring helps bring a law and order to the booming communities along the "U. Ps" right-of-way. Tamiroff is Mexican construction top foreman, plays a hardboiled and colorful Nebraska frontiersman.

MUNICIPALITIES

have no hesitation in saying that the Municipal Board, before which an application must be made before a works program is started, would not allow the program must be submitted to the vote of the people."

Second Answer

This statement was Mr. Hepburn's second answer to the offer of the Dominion Government, through Labor Minister Mcgregor, to deal equally with Ontario municipalities in the costs of works schemes designed to give work to unemployments. Earlier this week Mr. Hepburn said the Dominion Government would not see the municipalities "plunged into a morass of debt to satisfy the political ambitions of the Hon. Mr. Rogers."

After conferring with the Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Mr. Hepburn announced he would be prepared to meet Mayors of Ontario municipalities next week on the Dominion Government's plan.

The Premier said "everybody realizes" the Federal Administration's offer is purely an election gesture."

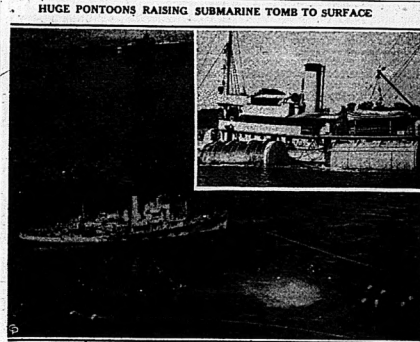
May Not Continue Agreement

He also remind the Ontario municipalities that if the Government at Ottawa were to change in the next election that they had reason to believe that the new government would continue the agreement and the municipalities would be left in the same situation as we found them when we entered office in 1934," Mr. Hepburn said. "Many of the municipalities have paid their debts since after Ottawa had withdrawn from relief agreements, and to many instances the people have to step in to protect partially completed works.

"If the Dominion Government has been attempting to bribe the electors this way on the eve of an election, let it make a direct contribution to the municipalities and not force them into a position of competitive spending and an orgy of expenditure," he said.

Ottawa has complete control of credit and currency and can expend it or control it at will. But the municipalities must depend on the money market."

HUGE PONTOONS RAISING SUBMARINE TOMB TO SURFACE



After weeks of careful preparation, work on the raising of the U.S. submarine Squalus, sunk under way, and the steel tomb of 26 sailors has already been brought to the surface—only to slide back into the depths after its pay had appeared for a moment above tug, are chained to the hull of the

'PLANE CRASHES CAR; MOTORIST SUFFERS SEVERE INJURIES

When a man bites a dog—it's all as around, William McCune, news. Its equally news when an 17-year-old pilot sought to glide airplane becomes another hazard safely at the airport after his motor for automobile drivers. Yet this cut out above the city and his view of a plane crash at Los machine went into a spin. He Angeles, Calif., indicates that motorists need to watch aloft as well crashed a quarter mile short of his as on the highways when an objective, his plane piling into a parked car. The car's owner, Mrs. Anna Keefer, was badly injured. McCune escaped with a split lip, both plane and car were damaged considerably.

Congress Not Likely To Change Neutrality Act This Session

Washington, July 15.—(CP) Despite President Roosevelt's admonition that it was "highly advisable" to revise the Neutrality Act at this session, some senators on both sides of the issue predicted today that the United States Congress would adjourn in about three weeks without acting on the matter.

Vacant seats at Quorum calls, resistances in protracted committee sessions and the departure of some veteran legislators indicated, they said, that the end was near regardless of the urgent appeal made yesterday by Mr. Roosevelt and State Secretary Cordell Hull for repeal of the arms embargo provision in the present law.

With Mr. Roosevelt's approval, the Secretary of State told Congress that the embargo clause might tempt well-armed nations bent on conquest to plunge the world into war, knowing that less well prepared opponents would be shut off from arms supplies in the United States.

Opponents of the government's revision program predicted almost unanimously that it would remain, at the next session, on the shelf in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where they placed it recently by a 12 to 11 vote.

Although Democratic Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky was hopeful that the shelved legislation could be revived somehow, some other administration senators said it appeared their hands were tied so far as getting action on this subject was concerned.

There seemed to be, however, a tacit understanding by both sides that, if war broke out in Europe, Congress probably would be called back into special session and neutrality legislation would be the first order of business then.

It is extremely probable that Mr. Churchill would be called urgently to take up office if a war developed, but at the moment Mr. Chamberlain apparently wants to dodge any possibility of a clash of personalities with him over the Cabinet table.

BRITISH INDUSTRY

According to "Industrial Britain" there are a number of new products of British industry brought to public attention. A provisional patent has been obtained by a Liverpool engineer who after long research and experiment, claims to have a satisfactory substitute for petrol, which when produced in large quantity, will cost only a very little. The process —one of polymerization—reverses the usual method of extracting and refining fuel oils and consists of building up light gases and liquids which gasify at ordinary temperatures. Experts of cars have tested the new "spirit" in a car over a distance of one thousand miles, and reported satisfactory results in regard to acceleration, speed, starting qualities and consumption per mile, it is said.

The first of a revolutionary type of commercial air-liner which will fly through the stratosphere and span the distance between England and Australia with only three stops, is being completed at Rochester, Kent. The engines in this plane have a cruising range of well over 3,000 miles and fly at a height of more than 30,000 feet, high above the weather.

The main line British railways are continuing their policy of speeding up railway travel. Already 678 express freight trains are now running every twenty-four hours, the fastest averaging 45 miles an hour and others running at an average of 40 miles an hour. The general acceleration of freight service on the British railways has been made largely possible by the construction of larger numbers of freight vehicles fitted with automatic brakes, and by the use of more powerful locomotives. During the last five years vacuum braked goods vehicles have been increased by more than 56 per cent to a total of 72,000 wagons and vans.

Regular freight trains which are run to fixed daily schedules, the journeys in a number of instances covering distances of over 100 miles non-stop. Trains are composed of as many as sixty loaded vehicles, including coal and coke wagons, specially designed wagons for fruit perishables, cattle, meat and containers, and glass-lined tanks for liquid in bulk.

British locomotive and car works report large inquiries from Egypt, the Egypt State Railways have placed with a Birmingham firm an order for seventy bogie flat goods wagons and ten bogie steel, third-class passenger carriages. This order is in addition to one or forty of the same type already under construction at the same works. There are also luxury carriages, first class, being made. These mark a great advance in Egyptian railway travel for they are to be equipped with air-conditioning apparatus of the latest design, dirt-proof and insect-proof, ensuring an even temperature at all times. This is of interest as being fitted to coaches which they are building for two super-trains on the Union of South Africa's new Cape Town Johannesburg express luxury service.

Britain is now building a car to challenge the "Thunderbolt," the world's fastest car. John Cobb will take to Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, a car weighing three tons against the six and a half tons of the "Thunderbolt" driven by Capt. Eyston in September, 1938. Cobb expects to reach three hundred and sixty miles an hour over the salt flats.

SILENCE

Silence is a net which holds many things. There is a moment after a song is sung, when silence seems full of music; when the thought remembers the sounds; wonders.

Silence is so much more than the absence of all sound. In a green valley, the silence is a kind of golden dream in which the imagination lingers. But in the high places, where the mountains lift their heads above the clouds, silence is a cool hand laid on the heart, a deep river seen far off. On the vast desert, silence is a dome of stars. Silence is a deep well in which we gaze. On the blue sea silence is full of rhythm, and the eyes follow the tides, and seek the pathways hidden from the sun far below. In the under-surface where an unknown silence dwells

Silence broken can be a lovely thing. The brittle snow breaking under the foot breaks the silence of the winter day, and in the sound is the cold and the sharpness. The music of the autumn, one leaf falling wakes the stillness, and drifts through the blue shadow of smoke like a quiet word said. In summer the white fountain makes a pattern of sound against the blue sky, a pattern of sound against the heat of noon, against the languid hour. And in spring the first birdnote wakes the earth, wakes the heart, after the long silence of the winter season.

Silence is a gift offered for solace. When the world's music breaks too much upon the sense, silence offers its healing interlude. With no texture, no color, no sound—silence is a net which holds many things.—Christian Science Monitor.

SPEAK KINDLY

Speak kindly of the absent,
Seek not his faults to find
But rather give him credit for
Each gift of heart and mind;
A thoughtless, heartless criticism
May lose for him a friend,
And leave a hurt upon your heart
That time alone can mend.

The habit of the unkind word
Is one that quickly grows,
And leaves a blighting influence
Like frost upon the rose;
But oh! the kindly word of praise
Exerts a soothing power,
Exhales a fragrance sweet and pure
Like perfume of a flower.

FOR REASONS OF UNNECESSITY, INEFFICIENCY, IMMORALITY AND COMMUNISM," the Federal Theatre Relief Project has been discontinued by the United States Government. Such are the reasons given by officials from Washington for discontinuing one of the many projects of spending government money under the head of relief. The Federal Relief Project gave work to actors, musicians, artists, playwrights and those directly interested state that it was one of the few government spending projects which paid its own way. Plays were written and staged, and considerable success achieved. Publicity was aroused on the ground that the plays were inclined to be radical and pandering to Communistic propaganda. A movement has been launched backed by screen and stage celebrities to have the government retract the closing order, but thus far with little success. One of the chief lobbyists to storm Washington was the well known screen actress, Tallulah Bankhead, whose father is Speaker of the House, and her Uncle John senior Senator from Alabama. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, plugged for the actors in her syndicated column "My Day," saying: "I know that this project is considered as dangerous because it may harbor some Communists, but I wonder if Communists occupied in producing plays are not safer than Communists starving to death."

PAUL McNUTT, LATE COMMISSIONER TO THE PHILLIPINES, is being boosted as a probable candidate for the Presidential nomination by the Democratic side, to succeed Franklin D. Roosevelt, in the event the Democratic New Dealers are successful again at the polls, and Franklin D. Roosevelt does not decide to reach after a third term in President, which by an unwritten law is taboo under ordinary circumstances. Paul McNutt seems to have strong backing, but the State Department is not the place of offense, but on the other hand he caused enmities in the party by opposing Roosevelt at the last Democratic presidential convention. Another obstacle to the success of Presidential candidate McNutt is seen by political critics in the name McNutt which offers the enemy too many opportunities for ridicule and many cannot see a President McNutt in the White House. Time magazine in its issue of July 3rd between him and the White House one other obstacle would remain, unfair and unfortunate, but essentially American: the name McNutt. Cartoonist Reuben Lucius (Rube) Goldberg's comic, shock-headed character "Boob McNutt" has been retired from the comic strips for six years, but he lived in them for fifteen, and for nearly a decade Cartoonist Goldberg, student of the United Feebleminded bone, choose that name. It is a heavy cross for even so magnificent a crusader as Indiana's white-haired boy to bear." And so, the path to the White House for Paul McNutt certainly is not an easy one.

OUTSIDE OF A FEW DISGRUNTLED LETTERWRITERS, for the most part anonymous, the press chorus of approval of the Royal tour in the United States has been unmarred by any disagreeable criticism. Editorial approval was so general and unanimous that the usual chorusses of disapproval were absent, evidently afraid to raise their puny voices befobe such a nation-wide volume of admiration and approval. Three cheers for the King of England, chorus the prominent news-paper columnist—and four for the Queen. Even those who came prepared to criticize were conquered by the charm of Britain's royal couple.

Belleville General Hospital Founded on Vision of Women

By MRS. W. C. MIKEL

The history of the Belleville General Hospital is of unique character. Established as it is by first Canadian institution or its kind to be built, owned and operated entirely by women. In 1885 Belleville had no hospital, no home for the sick, nor any accommodation for the looking after the poor. On the 18th of November of that year the Women's Christian Association was founded under the guiding hand of Mrs. Dupuis, wife of Dr. Dupuis, principal of Albert College. Mrs. Dupuis was president for only five months when her death occurred and Mrs. Nathan Jones was elected president to carry on the work which she did until 1884. Mrs. J. Z. Wilson, wife of the Rev. Mr. McLean, Minister of St. Andrew's Church, then took over the presidency This wonderful band of women undertook to conduct a general oversight of the poor of the city, visit the jail, establish a home for the aged and friendless, for the city and plan for the building of a hospital for the sick of the City and district.

The question of building a hospital was faced with bitter opposition concerning more particularly the hospital site, to which was added the question of where the ladies thought they could get the money to build such an institution and how they proposed financing the operation should they succeed in securing enough funds to build a hospital. The ladies were not only backed by the newspapers but by the City Council, in the Legislature and on the streets, but right was on their side and subsequent events have shown the wisdom of the stand they took.

The first act was to obtain a charter giving power to the Association to build such a building and which was obtained through the efforts of the late John Bell, Q.C., on May 18th, 1880.

For five years the ladies labored to obtain funds enough to build the institution, and when the subscription list of the money procured is very interesting. The City and County Council of 1885 gave the original lot set aside by the City Fathers for a park, on which now stands Saint Michael's Academy, was sold for $600 and a legacy of $1,000 was left by Mrs. Dupuis for this courageous

Finally the sum of over $15,000.00 was procured and with this amount the building was started in the spring. On July 25th, 1894, the first sod was turned by Mrs. Nathan Jones, then President of the Women's Christian Association. On the 25th day of September of the same year the cornerstone was laid. In the cavity beneath the cornerstone was placed coins of the Dominion, a copy of the leading newspapers of the day, a history of the work incorporating the Women's Christian Association, samples of the then commonest seeds of the country, and a document worded as follows:—

"This cornerstone was laid this 25th day of September, 1894, being the eighteenth year of the existence of the Dominion of Canada, His Excellency the Right Honourable Robinson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Right Hon. Sir John A. McDonald, Premier of the Dominion; Hon. Oliver Mowat, Premier of Ontario; Hon. Thomas Bedson, Esq., Mayor of the City of Belleville; J. B. Flint, Esq., Police Magistrate; D. B. Robinson, Esq., City Clerk; Robert Tannahill, Esq., Treasurer; Laurence Henderson, Solicitor; Hugh McKinnon, Esq., Chief of Police; Matthew Streatch, Toronto, Architect; Thomas Hanley and Frederick Architect; Thomas Hanley and Frederick Superintendent; John Forin, Esq., Contractor."

On July 20, 1886 the formal opening of the combined Hospital and Home for the Aged took place. Miss Linake was the first superintendent of the Hospital.

A description of the hospital as given in one of the Belleville papers makes very interesting reading. The following is the description:

"A representative of the Intelligencer visited the hospital building, and it would be well if more of the citizens would embrace an opportunity to view its neat and tasty internal arrangement and model cleanliness of all that has been neatly laid out, as every one is aware, a public institution house to the right, the gift of Jas. Norworthy, Esq. Entering the building to the left we find the surgery, with its doctors' tables and instrumental case, the gift of six city physicians. In one corner is a bathroom mantel, presented by the late Mrs. R. B. Burdett, the grate being furnished by Mr. W. W. Gerow. Other portions of the house was presented by Mrs. MacLean. All in wee shown a waterbed, a great boon to those who have to lie for a long time. The bed was the gift of the congregation of St. Thomas Church, on the kindly suggestion of Miss Bell. We also saw the necessity of such an article in the case of the little girl Patience.

Stretchers and appliances were on hand for use in accidents. Across the hall is the sitting room, which has been tastefully furnished by Mr. T. C. Wallbridge, a kindly gift that is highly appreciated. To the west of the hall and dining room, neat and tastefully furnished, is the room of Sister Brignall's children, with other children furnished the abboard. Mrs. Deacon's Donkey Party kindly provided the table. Mrs. Martin's abboard furnished the dining room and mantel. A concert at Mrs. Walker's residence some months ago by Mr. T. S. Clarke presented an easy chair to the room and Mr. Ritchie's kindness in this matter assisted the walls. The large halls are well lighted by evening gasoliers from Mr. Ritchie, and a neat hall chair was a present from Mr. Hanley. The whole of the hall furniture was a gift of kindness. The ward, the first to the left, front room is the Annie room, furnished by Mr. Green, at the door of which is a handsome mat presented by Mrs. Jas. Ross. Next is the Evelyn room, which is also on the front. Across the hall is a large well-lighted room, with all the modern conveniences, the gifts of prominent citizens, it was decided to include men on the board, which at present is made up of ten men, consisted of nine ladies, two men selected by the W.C.A. and four selected by the City Council, one by the Council and two from the medical staff. In 1894 the W.C.A. placed the management of the Hospital entirely in the hands of a Board of Governors, which was composed of five members selected by the W.C.A., four selected by the City Council (three by the County Council and one by the Medical Association). In December 16th, 1930, this was changed by the Board. Another by-law was passed to have the personnel of the Hospital Board of Governors consist of five members elected by the W.C.A. to hold office for two years. Two members elected by the Council of the City of Belleville for one year, two appointed by the Council of the City of Belleville for one year, two appointed by the Council of the County of Hastings and one appointed by the Medical Association of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties. This by-law is still in force.

According to the City Auditor's report for 1938 the Belleville General Hospital has assets valued at $215,922.83 a book loss, amounting to the $20,000.00 that the ladies struggled so valiantly to obtain 52 years ago. In 1894 they took $2.00 to compare the expenditures at the Hospital for 1938 which was $2,361.00, with the sum of $16,193.14 which constituted the expenditures for 1894.

And so has the vision of that good band of women in 1879 been justified.

Don Barnett, Tweed Native Son, Makes First Solo Flight

Tweed, July 15.—Mr. Don Barnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Barnett of Tweed who is on the staff of the Royal Bank of Canada at Guelph, made his first solo flight yesterday at Kitchener on Monday. Since May 24 Mr. Barnett has been receiving instruction at the Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Club and received only four hours and twenty minutes of dual instruction before making his first solo flight. He is very much liked and is especially noteworthy as his instruction has been received in such short twenty minute hops. Don expects to try his private pilot's license test on August 5.

Aeroplanes have always had a fascination for Don Barnett. During earliest boyhood he has devoted his leisure time to building and flying model aeroplanes. His many Tweed friends are not surprised to learn of his success with the real thing.

Feed Dog and Cat

Belleville, July 15th, 1939.

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer

Dear Sir:—

Please allow me a small space relative to the feeding of God's dumb creatures, the Dog and Cat given for our amusement, entertainment and company, also for our protection in many instances.

Before the advent of the motor car and trucks every farmer had a stable containing a horse and cow or both, the consequences being mice and rats were numerous, and fed the cat. Again before the garbage collection the housewife or maid would go to the back door and scrape off the dishes of left over food and all kinds for the dog and he got lots of necessary exercise and fresh air and a great variety of food and a sick dog was almost unknown in those days, but today all this variety of food goes into the garbage can, so we understand today the dog and cat get nothing to eat, that is handed out to them directly and their existence this is entirely insufficient. A time ago I witnessed a large dog upset a man's garbage can to get some meat he noticed inside and irregularly the owner came out and in a resentful manner—"If I had my gun I would shoot that dirty dog." I told him that the dog was hungry and went his spleen upon for not having enough to eat, that the poor dog had to forage elsewhere for food if he did not get sufficient at home. I got some meat and bones scrape of all kinds, also stale meat, which I boiled and mixed with cereal in vogue and distributed in some way for the dogs and cats, what a bonanza these strays got, they actually gather it and cook it and sell it to the people who come to your house and then the cat and dog who are carnivorous animals whose natural food is meat and who would get sufficient of their natural food without being forced or subjected to sickness of all kinds. I notice in our papers many interesting articles on the food distributed in our towns and cities of Ontario but I have yet to see an account of such in Belleville, we have a police force who are a lot of good fellows, but they are not right on their jobs for the protection and care of our dumb creatures who cannot feed or protect themselves.

God's good Book says—He who loveth God's dumb creatures is not far from God. Remember, you have not own a dog or cat or horse or any other animal and neglect or abuse or starve it and expect to be in favour with God. Finally a suggestion—If you have a dog why not a little one, because far less food is required and the food is sufficient, also the little dog is better in every way.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

One of the meanest ailments is hemorrhoids or piles. For many years the most efficient treatment so effective was to remove these protuberances of infected varicosed veins by operation. Recently it was found that varicosed veins in the legs could be removed by injection instead of by operation. This use of injections for destroying hemorrhoids was considered an excellent method by many surgeons who had formerly used surgery as any method other than operation.

What effect does injecting hemorrhoids in the surgeon's office instead of having the patient enter hospital for anesthetic and then operation and remain in hospital two days or longer?

The first point to remember is that while practically all hemorrhoids are internal, outside, half-way inside and outside, can undergo operation, since the chief objection of the injection method must be carefully selected.

In fact in "Medical World" on the injection treatment of internal hemorrhoids Dr. Frederick C. Smith, Philadelphia, says that it must be emphasized that the hemorrhoidal nerve should be attempted for external hemorrhoids whose coloring is dark. The fluid used in injecting piles are irritants and are the cause in hardening process which destroys the veins and they become like hard fibrous strands. Where the solutions undermeath the skin on these hemorrhoids, there is pain, pain, sloughing and destruction of the skin. Hemorrhoids that are "livable" with, that is, that do not bother, not be injected as the injection simply makes the tissue more hard in place of the hemorrhoids.

"It has been estimated by numerous authorities on the subject that about half of all cases of internal hemorrhoids can be treated with prospect of cure. Of the remainder, injection method is not to be used at all, on the part of the surgeon in one-half and operation should be undertaken on the other half."

Injections are given at intervals of one week and the average number given is from 8 to 15.

I believe these statements of Dr. Smith should give you information needed by patients with hemorrhoids as to whether internal hemorrhoids are infected and not all "inside" cases are suitable for the injection method.

HEAVY FIGHTING ON BORDER ENDS

Japanese Consider Outer Mongolia a Salient of Empire in Making

By RUSSELL BRINES
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Harbin, Manchoukuo, July 14 (AP)—The heavy fighting at Nomonhan on the disputed border of Manchoukuo and outer Mongolia is ended, but recurrent skirmishes in that barren region are to be expected because the Japanese consider outer Mongolia a salient toward their empire in the making.

Returning to Harbin after a tour of the fighting front, I was convinced the recent battle for Nomonhan Hill was but one phase of a Japanese campaign to eliminate the threat.

There, in a vast prairie peopled thinly by Nomads and peasants of several races, the Japanese have concentrated a force of 30,000 men with excellent arms and other equipment and appeals already have been made for colonists to aid the "national defence."

Nomadic Mongols on the plains of the west apparently are a political factor in the friction between the Japanese in their protectorate of Manchoukuo and Soviet-ized Outer Mongolia, both sides obviously intending to impress the silent, roving plainsmen.

Live in Fear of Attack.

Hailar, a dirt-covered settlement north of the Nomonhan battle zone, lives in fear of a direct air attack. Bombs could cause much havoc to the squat clay buildings and the few modern structures that make up Hailar.

I saw at least a score of bomb craters, some gaping 30 feet across apparently from 500-pound bombs, on my way from the front back to Hailar.

The craters indicated Soviet aircraft were capable of slipping through the Japanese aerial cordon along the Khalka River around Lake Bor. The Soviet air bases lie behind Lake Bor, it is said.

Japanese pilots said Soviet bombers that got through returned to their bases when challenged instead of continuing to Hailar.

An aerial battle I witnessed over Outer Mongolian territory ended with the Japanese manoeuvring above the Red planes despite the Reds' dare-devil tactics.

Bancroft scored again in the third. Port Stewart scored another in the fourth and came back in the fifth to get 4 more to Bancroft's one. Bancroft scored again in the sixth and twice in the seventh to end the ball game. Bill McAlpine starred for Bancroft, while W. Kuno, pitcher was outstanding for the winners.

In the last game Barry's Bay defeated Port Stewart in a 5-inning ball game, 8-3, Barry's Bay proved to be too good for the Port Stewart team. Ferguson, the pitcher was outstanding and had the Port Stewart boys breaking their back swinging at the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bell Presented With Gifts Before Leaving Foxboro

Foxboro, July 15 (Special)—Evincing deep and heart-felt regret that the village and community was to lose one of its most popular families who had always taken such an active interest in all social affairs and church work, members of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, together with friends and neighbors, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bell on Friday evening, July 14, to extend their well-wishes and to present the family with gifts before their departure to their new home in Lindsay.

Rev. T. W. McDonald of Roslin, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, called the meeting to order and the program of community singing was enjoyed. Miss Verna Peacock, who was called upon to read the following address, with Mr. Roy Bartlett and Mr. Grant Lockwell presenting Mr. and Mrs. Bell with a lovely little floor lamp and table, and Mrs. Bell with two children, Joyce and Ralph, were presented with a lovely gold locket and chain, suitably inscribed, by Carroll Spencer making the presentation.

Dear Jim and Mrs. Bell, Ralph and Joyce: It is with a feeling of intense and heartfelt regret that we, your friends of the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, your friends and neighbors of the Foxboro community, have learned of your proposed immediate departure from our midst. So sudden has been the news of your intended removal made known to us that we are still unable to fully realize that in just a few more days this village will lose from its midst as well as still another of its popular families.

It is only natural, however, that the village and also your fellow-members of the church should be vitally interested in the future welfare of a people who have lived so long in this neighborhood and where your two children, Ralph and Joyce, have grown to young manhood and to young womanhood. We are, therefore, fully acquainted with the motive which has prompted you in your decision to depart from Foxboro to have hitherto called your "home-town" and take up a new occupation and a new location.

Taking into consideration the willingness with which each member of the family has, in the past, entered into social activities and church work in Foxboro, and not forgetting your congenial personalities and your hospitality, we feel sure in the positive that you will become endeared to the hearts of your new acquaintances in Lindsay, just as you have established yourselves in the hearts of your old friends here.

Although we shall be forced to replace with other citizens the places which you have occupied in our social life and in the church and also the entire community join in bidding you a fond farewell and in wishing you the utmost in prosperity, and in happiness, in your new home.

We are sure that before leaving to spend one last social time together, and as a small measure of our appreciation, we ask you to accept these gifts, not because of their intrinsic value, but rather that their constant use may remind you of your Foxboro friends.

Signed on behalf of the Presbyterian Church and the community: Mrs. James Lake, Mrs. Clare Pinkle, Miss Tena Watt, Miss Verna Peacock.

In reply to the above address and in thanking his friends on behalf of his wife and family, Mr. Bell was deeply moved as he expressed his deep appreciation of the community's generosity. "We were indeed surprised," stated Mr. Bell, "we had no idea of your gathering in this evening and our hearts are too full for words to express our thanks."

A few words were then spoken by several members of church and community after which the ladies served a delightful luncheon with Mrs. Bowe gathering the cups, saying "For they are jolly good fellows."

DUEL OF WITS

And on that happy note of conviction he saw fit to end her examination in chief. She had made, if not the impression he had wanted her to make, one almost equally notable, and perhaps more serviceable in the end; and he did not think counsel for the defence would get much out of her. He sat down, and relinquished her to the mercies of Adam's confederate Wyndham, who was some time in rising to cross-examine.

Wyndham was a gentleman less surely in all things, tie rose in a manner half-sheep, and his coat long hand stretched out before him, appeared to be admiring the shape of the nails. During the pause the plaintiff, at whom he hardly glanced looked toward her more carefully than she had yet had time to do, and smiled at Lydden Strang, who had not once taken his eyes from her face since she had left his side. She had a fleeting impression that he was feeling the strain more than she was, and a sudden tenderness made her smile very sweet.

Wyndham, in the middle of his consideration of his nails and aging hand, looked up casually under dry eyebrows to study her face, and inquired, as if the idea had only just occurred to him:

"Do you want this piece of land?"

"Naturally I want it."

"Even now that it is ruined in your eyes?"

"Yes. At least, if it is mine, I am not prepared to allow it to be used for pulping."

"Ah, I see. You don't want the ground debased by having bricks and mortar piled on it; you prefer it under trees—holly trees. May I ask what gratifying purpose these holly trees serve for you, to make you so fond of them?"

Catherine answered smartly: "They serve the same purpose, Mr. Wyndham, which the wig performs for gentlemen of your profession—they make the commonplace appear picturesque."

The court lifted up its voice as one man, and laughed. Mr. Wyndham, to do him justice, also laughed, but with reservations which caused reporter number one to remark delightedly to number two:

"He doesn't like it."

"No," said his neighbor, "but the jury do."

"Thank you," said Wyndham, when the laughter had died down, "that is very clear. Now, Mrs. Court, you have told us that Mrs. Dunstan's letter to your husband was the first thing which suggested to you that the right of land in question now belonged to you."

"I should put it more vaguely than that. It immediately presented itself, but it suggested the possibility."

"Were you, until that time, aware of the existence of the family joke mentioned in it?"

"I may have heard of it; but I never remember hearing very much about it."

"Yet one very obscure passage in a letter suggested the whole affair to you—suggested the possibility of changing this action—in one blinding flash?" He looked up again, with his large sleepy, bored eyes, and smiled at her.

"Yes," she said, rigidly smiling back at him.

"These had recently developed, had there not, circumstances which made it desirable to you to follow up every such hint? Something had happened which sharpened your senses, and made you clutch at everything which even looked like a weapon. Mr. Probert had begun to build in Court Brandon. I put it to you that that was the whole cause of your vigilance."

"No," she cried.

"Did you, or did you not, resent his presence in Court Brandon at all? Was it not from a broader grudge against him you seized upon this petty quarrel?"

Catherine looked at him steadily, and said: "I resented the effect of his activities upon Court Brandon, yes; I resented his having chosen so beautiful a place for his garden city; there was never any secret about it. But against the man himself I had not and have not any grudge."

"Thank you; the admission of a public grudge is enough, so you are worthy of a jury's consideration. I put it to you that not convincing enough to be offered to Mr. Probert. He had no inkling of the existence of the writ and the injunction were served upon him on Sept. 2nd, exactly three weeks after the day when you decided to sue him. How do you account for that delay?"

"YOU CAN KEEP THE DAMAGES"

Catherine fell back upon the discourse which was natural to her after all, she had nothing to lose, and honestly might win for her more than she counted on. Nothing might fall to win.

"I did not give him any warning, or any opportunity to back out of his position because I conceived I owed him no consideration."

"In other words, you deliberately sought to entrap him until he had torn up the hedge and begun to build, so that the offence might be all the greater, and the damages amount to a larger sum."

"No, I did not aim for any damages. You can have them before I get them, for any charity you like. I am quite reckless of the sum that I wished to impede Mr. Probert was such as I could."

She had it now. She was holding the stage centre again.

Wyndham looked at his finger nails, and asked, not looking at her, why?

"Because he was trying to transform Court Brandon into a garden city. As you know, Mr. Wyndham, Mr. Wyndham? It's a garden city—a horrible word, and make it into a city is sacrilege."

"Mrs. Court, could you ask us may feel the desire to impede some such movement; but not many of us indulge it. Most of us do not simply being malicious in bringing that action at all."

She said, with a sudden bitter smile: "People do not, as a rule, bring actions for the fun of it, of a spirit of brotherly love."

"Then once again. She had done right; that fearless and implacable frankness had redeemed part at least of the damage he had done her. They could think her what they liked, but she had honest and revengeful, but they could not doubt her good faith now.

"One more question, Mrs. Court. Is it not a fact that Mr. Probert, on the very day that he received the writ, came to you and offered to buy the strip of land from you, at whatever price you chose to ask for it?"

It hung of interest went round at this; and a silence followed it when she answered slowly: "Yes, he did come; and he did offer me £500."

"And what reply did you make?"

"I refused."

"Finally—what reason did he give for making the offer?"

Wyndham had gauged her by this; he could not use her to prevaricate and make her own case appear shifty, he could at least be reasonably sure that she would do his client justice. If candour was her weapon, she would use it for Adam Probert, as well as herself; and the fact that her now as one too proud to lessen a fact because its reflected credit upon her opponent. He knew her; but he did not understand her.

"He said that he wished to settle the matter, even though at a cost unfavourable to himself, because the action could only mean expense and distress and worry to—to me." She passed her hand across her forehead with the first hint of weariness she had shown. "Those were not his words, of course; but that was the gist of them."

Mr. Wyndham sat down, yawned, and appeared to go to sleep again. He was not dissatisfied with his cross-examination.

The court adjourned for lunch. Lyddon took Catherine into the remotest corner of a quiet restaurant, where they could talk in comparative peace. Now that she was released from the tension she had placed upon herself, she found herself trembling with nervousness. Lyddon's solicitude was the best treatment for that illness.

"I know it was terrible," she said, laughing wretchedly; "but what could I do? What did Mr. Beresford say?"

"Well, he was thinking of re-examining you, I believe, but it appeared a shade dangerous. Besides, he'll get the same effect out of the vicar and Joan between them. You have such a rooted objection to being pathetic, haven't you, darling?" He smiled at her across the table.

"I'm sorry I had to be so devastatingly honest; sorry for Mr. Beresford's sake, I mean. I'd prefer it; I know where I am, now."

She sat through the afternoon session in silence and patience; and something of her lost confidence came back, and more of her habitual sense of humour, so that she rather enjoyed the effect the vicar cut in the witness-box. He was a good witness, though, trained to ramble if the subject of an anecdote took, or a man, some up. His long explanation of the purchase of the sale which brought it into his hands, and his reasons, had had for believing it genuine, lasted Mr. Beresford most of the afternoon; and Wyndham was still wrestling with his specialist knowledge on the subject of Court Brandon's past history, and the reputation of old Richard Poole, when the court rose for the day.

"Well," she said, finding herself face to face with her counsel as the court slowly cleared, "are you pleased with the way you got on?"

"It's none so bad." admitted Ronald Beresford, grinning.

"I'm afraid I got into rather a tangle. Sorry if I made it harder for you."

He smiled at her; to tell the truth. Mr. Beresford liked his clients; therefore his action was pleasant. He could, when he chose, be a very pleasant young man.

"Not at all. As a matter of fact, you've got the whole lot of them guessing; they're not used to having the truth told so plainly. I wouldn't like to be Adam Probert Wyndham's clutches too long, though."

He laid his hand upon her arm. "Tell me, Mrs. Court, can this man Probert be relied upon to do you the justice you've done him?"

Catherine looked at him squarely. "Yes, I think so; but I'll take it owe him anything. After all, we're supposed to be fighting each other."

"In very peculiar ways," agreed Ronald Beresford, with a glance in his eye, "you are; but which of you is to succeed finally in the court, the verdict to the other. I've no idea, however, I've no doubt I can at least where you're concerned. And tomorrow we have the legal point of view. Mr. Hart to help us, thanks be."

But when he was safely in his chambers, with Massingham, and having him across a decanter and a syphon, he expressed himself in different terms: for he, too, was human and adventure.

"Massingham," he said weightily, "this is the first case. I've ever handled—the very first—where the plaintiff and the defendant were in love with each other."

"Ronnie," said Mr. Massingham, indulgently, "your imagination is running away with you. She hates the ground he walks on. She said it—with her own mouth she said it—I can't alter what she's done; but I can ruin what's still to do and I will." I propose to cut him to ribbons. I'm only planning to prick him with a pin, and she said: 'Some-

CHAPTER XV

"THEY'RE DEAD AGAINST YOU"

Lyddon brought Catherine the evening papers, and she saw with amusement that the case had caught the public imagination, as that her smart reply to Wyndham had sprung into the headlines, and that she must by then have become almost a household word. She turned the pages listlessly.

"You must have had enough court atmosphere for one day," said Lyddon, "let's go to a theatre, shall we?"

"Yes, let's!" agreed Catherine, almost eagerly. And to a theatre they went.

But strangely there was no comfort there, either for Catherine or Lyddon. All the elating force of the day, all its excitement, all its spice of combat, were gone. Catherine felt nothing but fatigue, and even a sudden distaste for the weapons which had served her so well. Lyddon, too, dreaded the next day, though why she did not know.

Even the wrongs of Court Brandon seemed very distant and long ago. The case was finished, and remembered were the patterns of sunlight and shadow on the broken brick paving of Howard's Pleasance.

X X X

After lunch next day, to everyone's surprise, Perry turned up. He looked a little more dishevelled than they were having coffee, to which, by a barrage of pleased, but startled, congratulation.

"I just couldn't keep away," he said, sitting down. "I hope you don't need me, but I had to come. Tell me what's been going on."

Lyddon, who had not expected to joined them for the meal, "everything, of course, except what should or should not be asked; not 'envy's sheer cloak muffled me here,' as the poet says."

"Oh, yesterday!" said Perry scornfully, and was at once appeased at them. "I know yesterday's hearsay, Lyddon. Tell me what you think, I suppose. You must have done. Everyone in Court Brandon was reading it when I left this morning. They're talking about nothing else." He smiled at Catherine, radiantly across the table, as if he expected her to be grateful for the intelligence. The truth he had come in return was by no means spontaneous; it was the fear that Mrs. Perry was enjoying the notoriety being drawn upon them all. He considered that it was all in a day's work in spite of the sincere feeling which was his serious tone. She said:

"No, I don't suppose they are," and set her teeth.

"But what has happened this morning? I'm still in the dark—you know how I want every word."

Lyddon looked from one another of them but seriously few from Catherine. How smoothly the thing had gone for her! The impressive had been the disinterested evidence of the vicar, and he had obviously cared nothing for the issue of the case that Wyndham had set light and airy to the whole and continued to seem to sleep, as was his habit, during the more difficult execution would close its case that day, in all probability.

Lyddon began now to Perry that Catherine should sit staring into her coffee cup, with a detached manner of a seer, as to which comment was in the air.

As they talked, backwards the law courts afterwards, he drew her away from the others, and said at once, what she had not before realized, that she was behaving in a way calculated to rouse all Perry's celluloid devotion for her; and she smiled, to do him justice, with attention. After all, she owed him something in return for only a little melodrama; moreover, the chivalry of Perry was apt to be of an exuberant kind and she could well do without just now.

"I'm perfectly all right, of course," she said in reply to the inevitable question. "It's just the strain, I suppose."

"Well, why don't you skip this afternoon? It won't make any difference, will it? Let's go and do a matinee instead, shall we?"

"But what will be either be in court?" fenced Catherine; though the idea appeared to her a good one, she was in a mood when she wanted no one's company, least of all that of an affable boy who knew too much about her problems to be interesting on any other subject just then.

"I don't mind; though, of course

"Catherine looked up at him as they walked, and noted what she had been longing to ask from the moment he had mentioned Court Brandon. "Perry, what are they saying about me at home?"

"Well," said Perry, and was silent for a long time.

"You needn't be afraid to tell me; I never expected to be popular with the bigwigs over this business; but then, I never was popular with them, was I?" She smiled, rather wanly. "Well, what do our esteemed councillors have to say about me now?"

"It isn't what they say so much," said Perry hesitantly, frowning at the ground.

"Not they? Then who? She looked up at his face, and knew by his answer, or believed that she knew it. "Everyone, I suppose?"

"Well, the women, mostly; the tenants in Probert's house. They're dead against you; they're very bitter about it. They seem to look upon him as a sort of saint."

He stole a glance at her, and added hastily, "Yes, they do really—I know it's funny—"

"Is it?" said Catherine.

"Well, it must be; I mean, the man screws his rents down, nearly like the rest of his kind. But they take the line that you're standing in the way of—well, of the betterment of the poor, I suppose they'd say. Hang it, he spends them, for money, doesn't he?"

"Yes," said Catherine numbly, "I've always taken it for granted perhaps I've taken too much for granted."

"Well, what else could it be? Women, I mean. Even a man to the trouble to explain himself, if he'd been doing it all out of pure altruism?"

To herself Catherine said, clearly by Perry's standards, "No, he wouldn't!" But aloud she said nothing, merely drank the sharp wine down by which they happened to be passing at the moment: "Look, Perry, I'm frightfully interested in fashions in hats, or for the matter of that in anything at all but Court Brandon and Howard's Pleasance at that moment. He said, with a desperate cheerfulness: "Oh, well, come on into court and see if his standard go down, and then we'll go home."

But Catherine did not feel better.

Neither the abortive excitement of the court, or examination and cross-examination, nor the hearing points brought out in her favour, had brought her the relief she should her; not the long duel between Wyndham and Beresford over technicalities, nor the verdict itself when the crown declared for her. Even the hilarious there might have been in the theory of the fight at least —none of these had given her the satisfaction she had looked for from them.

The prosecution closed its case decorously in time for the court to rise for the day. The second day the verdict was fairly bright, but the first day, of course, anybody's fight. Catherine was expected to be there, and indifferent as this frozen calm of indifferentness that had so inexplicably settled upon her. Their counsel appeared to be much that in the evening she gave him a cup of tea, after that Adam Probert's house, and Wyndham would never stoop to explain to anyone again, how little she cared for the money. That, after all, was her own affair. But that's how much you meant it. Thy she did say, with some anger flaring slowly in her voice:

"You consider yourself competent to judge between him and me, then do you? You know everything

"Nobody's told me anything more than everyone knows who reads the papers. This case of yours! You must have had it all planned in your mind before you came to Howard's Pleasance to-day; I suppose you were laughing about it to yourself while you were talking of that stuff about Howard's Pleasance being horrible. You to dare speak to me, after that! And you buy trying to get money out of the man who's done something for us."

Catherine did not trouble to say now, she would never stoop to explain to anyone again, how little she cared for the money. That, after all, was her own affair. But she did say, with some anger flaring slowly in her voice:

"You consider yourself competent to judge between him and me, then do you? You know everything there is to be known about the case, do you? What right have you, of any more than I, to set yourself up as a judge? What I said in Howard's Pleasance I meant, every word — and I should be sorry to remember that I said very little—"

"It was little enough," agreed Mrs. Garland, stepping back out of the stream of hurrying people there spoke to me, after that! And which flowed ceaselessly along the pavement round them, "but it meant a good deal."

"And this is how you show it, is it? You had the nerve to admit that you wanted to impede Mr. Probert as much as you could; after all, was his own affair, but that's how much you meant it. Thy she did say, with some anger flaring slowly in her voice:

By JUDSON BAILEY

It looks to though New York Yankees can shed their mourning bands any time now. The "Hex" is ended.

By beating Detroit Tigers 6-3 yesterday on the eight-hit hurling of Red Ruffing, the world champions demonstrated to the satisfaction of almost everybody that nothing serious is wrong.

Perhaps their plight never was as painful as some hopefully imagined. At the halfway point in their schedule today they have a six-game lead over Boston Red Sox and their record of 54 won and 28 lost is the one game behind the pace at the half post of the famous 1927 Yankees. frequently referred to as the greatest team of all time.

Ruffing had the Tigers under his thumb except for one inning yesterday. Until the eighth they had only four scattered hits, and by the time they clustered four more for three runs that inning the Bronx Bombers already had scored all their runs.

For Schoolboy Rowe the loss was another one. The team mates also committed four errors behind him.

The Red Sox rested on their nine game winning streak while idle in action elsewhere in the junior circuit.

While Sox Dropped Notch.

Philadelphia Athletics took their second straight from Chicago White Sox, 7-3, to drop the pale hose into a tie for fourth with the idle Cleveland Indians.

Washington's unpredictable Senators came from behind twice, the second time with six runs in the ninth inning, to stop the St. Louis Browns, 11-9.

New York's second place Giants captured their seventh victory in twelve games this season against Cincinnati's National League leading Reds, 4-1. Young Bill Lohrman got the credit for the triumph but had to have the help of Carl Hubbell in the eighth when Cincinnati threatened.

John Leaning turned in a great 8-3-3 inning relief hurling for Boston Bees to beat St. Louis Cardinals. He gave only five hits, one of them Johnny Mize's eighteenth homer. The Bees broke even with all runs in the first and counted home.

Brooklyn Dodgers batted four Pittsburgh pitchers for 17 hits to win 14-6 and moved back into the first division.

KID-KAR DRIVERS ARE ENTERTAINED

Vincent Freeman, manager of the McCarthy Theatre, with Mr. J. C. McCarthy, the owner, entertained 27 of the drivers who took part in the recent Soap Box Derby at a theatre performance on Friday evening and to say the boys were thrilled would be putting it mildly. A number of the boys were unable to be present and Mr. McCarthy has left the invitation open for the remaining boys to see the show tonight. At the conclusion of the show, the boys trooped out to the rotunda of the theatre and personally thanked Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Freeman for their fine evening.

NOVA HAS PLANS

Wants an Outside Referee if He Fights New Jersey Barkeep

(By Bill Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, July 15 (AP)—They're dusting off Max Baer and Max Schmeling and dangling them in the heavyweight fist-pond again. Just in case the ball for a Philadelphia fight between Lou Nova and Tony Galento in the fall doesn't get the required nibbles.

It may be the threat of bringing back either of the mauling Maxes as opposition for Two-Ton Tony was thought up to get Promoter Jack Nova's manager, to fall in line on the Galento fight. But Ray Lumpkin, who has a finger in the Philadelphia possibility on both of the Nova-heavyweight deals, may be re-introduced to the best fistic society.

Carlin is willing to take Nova to Philadelphia to tangle with the Jersey heavy, but only if the Pennsylvania fistic fathers call in an outside referee. The 1935 pact put one of the nationally recognized "third-men" to work there.

Ray Impelletteri, the next spring's challenger for Joe Louis, Ol' counsel, Lumpkin has been scrounging to ask about that. Ray is going to put his case before the New York Boxing Commission next Thursday. In the meantime, the jacobs gentlemen-of-the-ring are trying to get (Relation), Galento's manager, as negotiations to get the thing straightened out.

So they landed Ray an ultimatum today. Either, they said, agree to the fight in Philadelphia, or we're going to call off the whole deal. Or we're dickering the fall.

"Who do they think they're kidding," was Carlin's attitude. "Nova is still the Nova. We're not quite off it, and Mike doesn't want to bring the bout to New York yet, then I'll have to go somewhere with my business."

New York, July 15 (AP)—Jimmy Grippo and Meiko Bettina each dropped five grand on the Conn fight. It's better than that now, as we picked Conn, but still think Bettina should have won. Baseball men say the Cards will be back in the thick of things before September, Ray Blades has the hitters and runners and needs only a little pitching help . . . Yes, gentlemen, baseball umpires all over are still wondering what a guy has to do to get himself a set star game. . . . Well, why don't they ask Gabby Hartnett?

Alex Pfeifer, the Cedar Rapids, Ia., golfer who won the Canadian Open at Toronto, is a member of the Immaculate Conception church there. He's married and has a family. Tour agent has a piece of Henry Picard's hide. Picard is under suspicion during the Open at Fort Byron Nelson will trim him today. . . . Shoppe you noticed the Cubs are batting a poor last in the latest N. league.

Roy Shudt, Troy (N.Y.) Record: "The only National Leaguer who can't see a curve ball is the one who was Babe Phelps—and Umpire Magerkurth is the exception to him."

Injured Ival Goodman will stay here and do the World's Fair when the Reds go to Boston tomorrow. . . . Couple alumni here are trying to bag a pair of fast backs for Andy Smith's Penn State eleven. . . . Note to Linus Frey: Manager Bill McKechnie says you are the most underrated player in the National League. . . . Bettina, who went into the scrap in Philadelphia was a 5-13 favorite after he won the first five heats.

Jimmy Wilson's 16-year-old son, Bobby, is playing centre for eastern trip with the Reds. . . . He's a catcher too. . . . Top job, with a permanent status, wise old Bill McKechnie is giving him spending money in stamps.

CANNIFTON WINS BY 9 TO 4 SCORE

Shannonville Team in 2nd Place While Latta and Foxboro Tie

Foxboro, July 15 (Special)—Canniffton still continues to dominate the Hastings League and with their decisive 9-4 win over the second place Shannonville team on the home diamond last evening are away out in front and cannot be dislodged from the top rung. With only one more game to play in their regular schedule, the Canniffton boys have chalked up eight victories as against three defeats and are two and a half games up on the second place Shannonville team who have played .500 ball to date having won five and lost five. Latta and Foxboro are still in last place position they were in earlier in the week as their game at Foxboro last night ended in a five-all tie, leaving Foxboro still with a questionable chance to get into the playoffs, being just one and a half games out of third place.

With the more rabid fans beginning to get a little excited over the possibility of another Foxboro-Latta playoff series, umpires making close decisions during games between these two perennial rivals, are now coming in for more than their usual share of ranting. Last night was no exception and Umpire Platt spent a few anxious moments as the home fans got riled over a decision at the plate and everyone playing there with a donnybrook threatening until more level heads intervened and straightened things out to allow resumption of play. It all happened when Breese attempted to score from second on a passed ball and was called out at the plate as the catcher relayed the ball. After considering the matter, however, the umpire ruled that only one base was permissible on such a play and the runner was sent back to third without of course satisfied the fans.

E. Koetsier started on the mound for the homesters but developed a streak of wildness and was replaced by Peacock in the fourth after four runs were scored, and with two runners aboard. Peacock forced the next batter to fly to the outfield for the third out and pitched shutout ball for the balance of the game. Garfield Hall was the starting pitcher for the visitors but was relieved by Donning in the second after the homester had pushed across four runs to take a four to one lead. Dunning allowed but one run, that in the fourth, when a walk, a hit and a passed ball gave the hoosiers the run needed to tie up the ball game and keep them in the running for a playoff position.

One of these fine mornings you're going to wake up and read in your favorite newspaper where Hy Vanderberg and his good right arm have been called up to the Polo Grounds to bolster New York Giants pitching staff.

It may not be right away, for Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City doesn't want anything messing up the Little Giants in the tilkk of the International League pennant fight, but sooner or later it's bound to happen. Hy can't miss making the big time and the Giants need routegoing hurlers.

Hy proved it again last night with a neat four-hit shutout job which gave the Little Giants a 2-0 decision over old Tony Lazzeri's Toronto Maple Leafs. Phil Marchildon matched Hy's four-hit job, but he tossed his "boom boom" ball at Tom Winsett in the third and that homer meant the ball game. The other run came across in the ninth of Vanderberg's three-hit job, but it was so much unnecessary work.

Half Game Behind.

The victory, Vanderberg's twelfth of the year against four setbacks, kept the Giants just half a game off the pace of Buffalo Bisons and Rochester Red Wings who went eleven innings before Jack Sturdy's run-producing single gave the Bisons a 5-4 victory over Baltimore's lowly Orioles. The Giants' pace was the best they've held this season Vandenberg has gone the distance.

Newark's slumping Bears, down three in fifth place, dropped an 8-4 decision to Montreal at Delorimier Park stir straight setback and their eleventh loss in their last twelve starts. The Royals, moving up within three games of the Bears, belted Joe Beggs and Marcus Mumphrey for their ten hits and watched each of three Newark errors result in a run.

Buffalo's winning streak went to twelve straight in the first half of a doubleheader, with Clay Smith turning in his eighth consecutive pennant victory by a 3-1 edge over Syracuse, but the triumphant run was made in the ninth. The Chiefs came back to take the nightcap, 3-3, behind long John Gee.

Between the Lines

with Ken I. Colling

Actually Belleville and Picton were the only two Bay of Quinte League clubs to gain ground this week. Picton beat both the Air Force and Napanee and lost to Belleville. The Air Force fell back badly as they lost to Napanee and Picton, while Walt Gerow's charges broke even with a win over the Flyers and a loss to Picton. Belleville's lone stand was a win over Picton. To date Roy Rorke's league leading Picton nine has beaten Walt Gerow's Napanee Gibbards three straight games and it begins to look as though Ron Church and company hold the same power over Napanee as the Gibbards hold over Belleville. Because the Air Force could not play here on Dominion Day and Napanee advanced their game of July 20th here, the Belleville team finds itself without a scheduled game in the Bay of Quinte League this week. And just when the locals were beginning to hit their stride with a five game win streak it's back to the drawing board for Walt Gerow's Napanee Gibbards

Chutist Did Not Pull Cord Far Enough Coroner's Jury Told

St. Catharines, Ont., July 15 (CP) — Joseph Chadwick might have landed safely instead of plummeting to his death at an air meet here June 25 when his parachute failed to open, if he had pulled the "ripcord" a fraction of an inch further, a coroner's jury was told last night before returning a verdict of accidental death.

A large crowd, including Chadwick's mother, watched the jump, which was his first. The jury's verdict included a rider that a pupil's first parachute jump "should not be made as an exhibition or an attraction at an airport."

George Bennett, expert parachutist who has made 1,283 descents, demonstrated before the jury the working of the parachute Chadwick carried with him in his fatal fall. Witnesses testified it had not been touched since police removed it from the broken body.

Bennett pulled the cord to release the chute with no difficulty and declared Chadwick could have done the same if he had pulled it an other fraction of an inch.

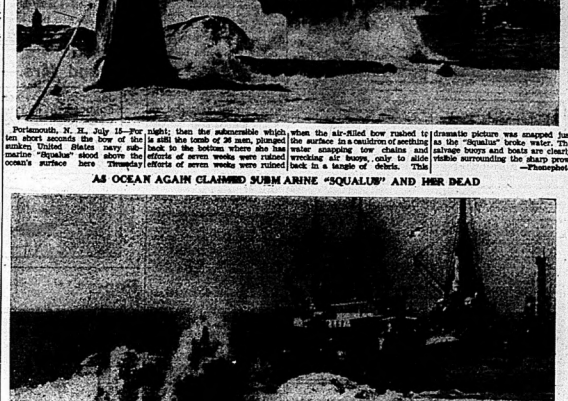
SUNKEN "SQUALUS" COMES TO SURFACE FOR BRIEF TEN SECONDS

Portsmouth, N. H., July 15—For ten short seconds the bow of the submarine "Squalus" sank by the marine "Squalus" stood above the ocean's surface here Thursday night; then the submersible which is still the tomb of 26 men, plunged back to the bottom, where the last efforts of seven weeks were ruined when the air-filled bow rushed to the surface in a cauldron of seething bubbles and chains and wrecking air buoys, only to slide back in a tangle of debris. This dramatic picture was snapped just as the "Squalus" broke water. The salvage buoys and cran are clearly visible surrounding the sharp prow. —Phonephoto

AS OCEAN AGAIN CLAIMED SUBMARINE "SQUALUS" AND HER DEAD



The view of the ocean off Portsmouth, N.H., was made just as the submarine "Squalus" plunged back to her berth on the ocean's floor, her shipmates. Huge air bubbles after showing above the water for ten seconds, as she broke away from air-buoys intended to float her above May 23. New salvage efforts and seething waters marked the second sinking of the craft which carried 26 men to death in a test are to be made but it is not expected that the submarine can be raised again until September. —Phonephoto

FIRE FIGHTERS SAVE VILLAGE

$5,000 Damage Reported in Fire at Bancroft Friday Afternoon

Volunteer firemen of the Village of Bancroft were able to save the village from the threat of fire late yesterday afternoon by their heroic work in battling a blaze which broke out in a barn at the north end of the village. The fire threatened for a time to sweep the entire length of Bancroft, destroying all in its path until the flames were brought under control by the united efforts of the men late in the day.

Thought to have started by a flying spark, the blaze broke out in a barn owned by K. V. Vader. Within a few moments fire had completely gutted the building and threatened to spread widely. Four horses kept in the barn were rescued before the barn was completely demolished.

A high wind lashed the flames from the burning barn, and members of the Bancroft fire brigade were forced to clamber over the roofs of adjacent buildings preventing the flying sparks from gaining foothold. Nearly fifty men were engaged during the height of the fire the blaze. Damage is estimated at $5,000.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

Fisherman's Luck

By KATHLEEN SUTTON

Natalie Owen slipped into her chair at the breakfast table just as Dock, the colored waiter at Gray Stables, "doc-food a Specialty," set a bowl of ripe figs swimming in thick cream before the handsome if carelessly dressed, young man opposite her.

Natalie smiled brightly. "Good morning, Mr. King. I suppose you're going fishing again today?"

He looked up, his eyes as cold as brown eyes possibly can be.

"Yes," he admitted curtly, "and I take it," he added, with a fine edge of sarcasm in his voice, "that you also are fishing again today."

His tone startled her, but she managed a bright smile.

"I'm going on the Maybelle with Captain Jack," she told him, hesitantly. "Deep sea fishing, you know."

"Oh, I know," he agreed with a rather caustic twist to his lips. "I'm going out with Captain Lane myself."

"Really?" Her voice registered bright surprise and pleasure, but her heart skipped a beat. Did he suspect why she was here?

Carefully casual, she commented, "We seem to run into each other a lot."

Almost constantly, I should say. On Monday we fished Hurricane creek—where you ran the hook in your thumb."

"Oh, I didn't mind that," she said hastily.

"No," he said bitterly, "I'm sure nothing so trivial as possible blood poisoning would disconcert you. But I lost a half-pound croker, getting it out for you. And on Tuesday we met accidentally," he stressed the word, "on the toll bridge. In case you've forgotten, it was there you almost ran that car into the bay when you slapped a shark in the driver's face."

She broke a piece of toast and loaded it with jam.

"It was only a baby shark, and if he had had a windshield on his old rattletrap it wouldn't have hit him. And besides, it didn't wreck him, it just made him mad."

"Most surprising," he assured her gravely. "But it cost me my whole string to placate him. And on Wednesday, at the pier, you stumbled over my basket of crabs and to save you from heading into the bay, I had to sacrifice them. And today we go deep sea fishing together! I'm charmed. Do you like to fish, Miss Owen?"

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed, her eyes shining, "I adore fishing. Off the rocks at Martinshead, and the lakes in Maine, and the rapids of the St. Lawrence."

An amused expression crossed David King's face.

He rose, bowed and left the room. Natalie finished her breakfast in deep thought.

She wished David hadn't proved so utterly splendid. Irresponsible, that seemed how she had rated him at first sketching. Had the Abbott girl been pulling a fast one—or had she had them fooled, too?

Some time later, whistling cheerfully, she turned down the grassy road to the pier where Captain Lane was waiting impatiently.

David and four other men and two girls lounged in the bare, hard seat of the Maybelle and a Negro was messing with buckets of raw shrimp.

Captain Lane started the engine almost immediately.

The Negro handed her a fishline, and she looked about for some bait, but David said, "We're going to troll for mackerel. You use a spoon."

Taking her line, he attached one for her.

Natalie breathed deeply in sheer content and glanced up at David. He held a short rod and was casting out line. She let out the entire length of her own.

Better take some in Miss," the captain called to her, "you'll never land your with all that out."

Obediently, she began taking in, when suddenly David yelled, "Strike!"

The engine slowed and he started reeling in excitedly. Natalie continued winding her line. It began to pull and David shouted at her, "You've got my line crossed. Let yours loose!" Not comprehending she kept winding. David stopped reeling, let out line. One of the men called, "He's off," and David swore softly.

He brushed the fish was lost.

"It's too bad," she sympathized, "losing something that you'll catch another."

"Oh, sure," he said ironically. "Sure! Listen, Miss Owen, why don't you just enjoy the boat ride instead of fishing?"

It was six o'clock before the Maybelle, minus one mackerel, circled up to the pier again. As Natalie climbed out the floor of the pier seemed to wobble and sway under her feet.

Tomorrow she vowed, she'd take the first train back to New York where she hoped she'd never have to look another fish in the face.

Bravely she set one foot before the other.

A roadster pulled up beside her, and David said, opening the door, "Get in. What are you rushing off for?"

She shook her head and walked on.

He jumped from the car and, taking her arm, deliberately put her into the seat.

"I've bothered with you as long," he said grimly, "it's become a habit."

He drove in silence. Then—

"Natalie Owen," he said, "I don't know why or how it happened—only this morning I swore it wouldn't—but I've fallen in love with you."

Her heart went pattering but she wasn't in the least surprised when he took her into his arms and kissed her.

Suddenly she pulled away, her face tragic.

"David," she gasped, "I must tell you something. Oh, please try not to hate me."

She twisted her handkerchief nervously.

"I lied to you about loving to fish. I never fished before in my life—and I hate it!"

Her vehemence made David roar with laughter.

"If that's all," he chuckled, "I guess I can stand it." I knew that all the time."

Her eyes widened.

"But I studied all about it, coming down on the train."

Then her face clouded.

"That's not all, David. It's much worse. I came here to sort of watch you. I mean," she faltered, "I was supposed to report what you did. It looked like such an easy vacation."

He drew out his wallet and extracted a newspaper clipping.

"I suppose," he said handing it to her, "you answered an advertisement like this, and you became amateur detective employed by a vitriolic female to check up on a young man who had retired her ward to marry him."

Well, I knew that, too, Natalie Owen!"

"Oh, David!" she wailed in a thin little voice. He took her into his arms and kissed her again, firmly.

"A friend," he explained, "sent me the advertisement. Then when you showed up and began appealing everywhere I went, I suspected. Yesterday the post office delivery letter which bore the return address of the lady in question. I was positive then. That's why I was so hasty. I loved you then, and my feelings hurt."

"But I never sent in a single report, she assured him hastily. "That's why she wrote. You see, she hadn't told me the truth. She had made me believe you were a little—mad."

"Crazy," he amended. "She would! But I wasn't. Not till I met you. I've been crazy ever since. I'll always be crazy—over you."

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — Prices maintained a generally firm tone in the closing session of the week but trading tapered down to about 100,000 shares for the two-hour session. Only a few industrials appeared in the transactions and price adjustments were of minor importance except in a few instances. Riverside Silk advanced 1½.

Utilities, senior oils, steels, liquors and building shares held practically unchanged in slow action and in the food point gains were posted by the Bliss Ribbon issues. Canadian Car and Dominion Steel declined minor fractions.

Base metal and gold stocks boarded about as many gains as losses. Hudson Bay, Sherritt and Normetal were stronger and Smelters, Coast Copper and Bend Oreille weakened narrowly. In the golds East Malartic, Bladen and Aunor changed hands in considerable volume at steady prices while minor gains were chalked up for Macassa, Pickle Crow, Uchi and Mining Corporation.

Senior golds moved in light volume at steady prices and minor losses appeared for Sheep Creek, Lamaque, Brouhan and Naybob.

Trading Slow on Produce Markets

Toronto, July 15.—Graded eggs continued to ease slightly while butter and cheese remained unchanged in a generally quiet and extremely light trading on the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. As on Thursday, no actual sales of butter and cheese were reported by dealers, and prices quoted were entirely nominal.

The egg market was quiet. Receipts were not heavy, but consumer-demand was largely absent, presumably due to the warm weather. Inspected shipments to Northern Ontario during the week have been light, but there were still a number of inspected shipments going forward at the week's end. In the graded section, A-large were selling at 22c to 22 1-2c; A-medium, at 20 1-2c to 21c; B-grades at 16c to 16 1-2c, and C at 14c. Selling prices to the retail trade ranged at 28c for grad- B and 16c for grade C.

Trading was at a standstill on the Canadian Produce Exchange. Although lots were light, offerings were not cleared. Buyers showed a complete lack of interest. Sellers were asking 22c for No. 1 creamery solids, but were met by a refusal to offer. One dealer attributed the lack of interest on the part of buyers to the large number of people out of the city on vacation.

Montreal Potatoes Improve

Montreal, July 15.—Potato prices recieved part of yesterday's losses during afternoon markets here yesterday, while butter and cheese offerings eased a shade, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs held unchanged.

Creamery butter prices to retailers sold for 23c a pound, and solids for 22 1-2c. Northern butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted, quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale lots was quoted at 21c and fresh 2,215 boxes.

Ontario white cheese was quoted at 12 3-4c a pound, and colored at 13c. Quebec white was quoted at 1-2c, and colored at 11 7-8c. Receipts: 3,241 boxes.

Grades and shipments in used free cases were offered at 23 1-2c-24c for Canada No. A-large; 21 1-2c-22c for A-medium, 17c for B-large, 16c-16 1-2c for C. Receipts: 1,486 cases.

Identification of Hogs Important

The identification of hogs in the process of marketing is very important. It assures every farmer of receiving the correct settlement for his hogs.

The act of tattooing which is the form of identification found to be the most accurate is a very simple operation.

The drovers in the Belleville district are given excellent co-operation in this phase of marketing. The identifying of the hogs is a service that the drover is giving the farmer and it is only reasonable to ask the farmers and truckers to assist in any possible way at the shipping station in making the identification of each lot of hogs perfect.

NEW CITIZEN ARMY

Everyone, from Generals to caseharidened Sergeants, had been warned to be considerate of the new citizen army. Special orders regarding reception of recruits specified "no rudeness, bullying or sarcasm".

Distinguished Visitors in Camp

Queen Mary, War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and other distinguished persons visited some of the detachments. The Queen mother inspected the first arrivals at Shorncliffe.

The conscripts will be given six months' training. Other groups will be called up at intervals until in about a year all of the first class of more than 300,000 youths between 20 and 21 will have learned to shoulder arms.

Mustering of the conscript army, creation of which marks a historic departure from Britain's traditional policy of volunteer service in peace time, fits in with the government's plan to have the air force, the fleet and the army at the peak of power during August and September.

The press hailed building of the conscript army as a preventive measure. Avoiding the word conscription, the Times said: "Again, the possibility of their being required for grimmer business, the best insurance is that they are there always and instantly ready."

"Good Luck, Militia."

The Daily Express declared this was "the day when Britain became a true democracy" and explained that the nation was turning her sons into soldiers because "they will never endure peace at any price and will gladly sacrifice their freedom as individuals to preserve the liberty of the nation".

Under the heading: "Good Luck, Militia," the Daily Mail said that "less than a year ago the very idea of conscription in British seemed fantastic". It said the "revolution" in attitude "reveals the will to action of the democracies".

COMMON SENSE

The Gaspe coast highway over which he has been travelling for several days, would attract ten times the number of United States tourists it now attracted if it was hardsurfaced over the whole route.

2,500 Persons Attend.

The Conservative leader's meeting last night was one of his largest of this tour. Upwards of 2,500 people listened to him in the open air.

Dr. Manion's fluency in the French language increased steadily throughout the week and last night he spoke for half an hour in French. His use of French drew approving shouts and applause from every crowd, although on each occasion he apologized for his faltering.

"You speak it more than King," shouted an admirer at one meeting.

At the Matane meeting, Dr. Manion refused to declare himself on the question on his position in the event of war. To a question asking exactly what he would do if war were declared, he replied that he had given the answer in the House of Commons and that answer would stand for all Canada.

Answer on Attitude of Canada

Unlike some public men, he would not take one position in Quebec and another in Ontario. To the first question addressed to him from the audience during the week at the Matane meeting: "Are all Canadians agreed?" Dr. Manion answered:

"Mr. Mackenzie King has been unsuccessful in his efforts to secure a discord this country has ever known." Dr. Manion claimed. "I say unconsciously because I do not like to be unfair to him."

Mr. Mackenzie King had quarrelled with Premier Hepburn in Ontario and Premier Duplessis in Quebec. Relations between the Dominion and the provinces had deteriorated to its lowest point, Mr. Hepburn, although a Liberal, had frequently denounced the actions of the Liberal government at Ottawa. If he were returned to power at the Conservative government he would at once inaugurate a "fresh collaboration" with all provincial governments.

Austrian Countess In Germany's Pay Sought by French

Paris, July 15 (AP)—French counter-espionage authorities today sought to uncover ramifications of a suspected German espionage and propaganda network.

The agents were reported concentrating on the activities of a mysterious Austrian countess reportedly in Germany's pay who fled the country just before two Paris newspaper employees were arrested in connection with the propaganda investigation.

The countess supposedly acted as a link between heads of the German espionage system and their agents in France and worked closely with Joseph Caillaux, Nazi agent identified as Otto Abetz, Ambassador to the right-hand man of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

French newspapers, commenting upon the arrests, demanded an official explanation of "this very grave affair" and predicted more arrests during the week-end.

The revelation of an espionage network came on a time when patriotic fervor was aroused by military demonstrations of Anglo-French unity which was termed "invincible" by Premier Edouard Daladier.

ADMIRAL DIES AT AGE OF SIXTY

Sir Roger Backhouse, Youngest Admiral Since Nelson

London, July 15 (CP)—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Backhouse, said to have been the youngest Admiral since Lord Nelson to become First Sea Lord, died yesterday, died today. He had retired from the service two months ago because of a serious breakdown in health.

Sir Roger became a naval cadet at the age of 12. As a young lieutenant he was one of the most brilliant officers of his time. He was Flag Commander to Admiral Jellicoe at the outbreak of GR' war and served with the Commander-in-Chief in the battleship Iron Duke, where his expert knowledge of gunnery proved invaluable.

Flag Rank in 1925.

He attained flag rank in 1925 and ten years later became Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet. Last September he was appointed First Sea Lord in succession to Lord Chatfield. Only a short time it had been expected that a distinguished period of service as professional head of the navy would end his career. However, early this year his health began to fail and after several weeks' absence from the admiralty on sick leave he resigned, to be succeeded by Admiral Sir Dudley Pound.

MAROONED MEN LEAVE ISLAND

Able to Start Motor That Carried Them to Island Two Days Ago

After being marooned for twenty-eight hours on Enamon's Island off Wellington on the tip of Prince Edward County, Prince Edward men, Murney Howe, Walter Insley and Ernest Hall were able to start the engine of their motor launch Saturday and return to the mainland little the worse for their experience.

The men who had landed upon the island early in the morning at the height of the waves prohibited them from launching their boat again, discovered a food cache in an empty hunting lodge on the island and these were used to stave off the hunger which they feared during their enforced stay.

According to the party they had been unable to prepare it for summer habitation. On the first trip the horse which accompanied them had been overboard, together with some other camping effects. The horse followed with the boat to the wrong side of the island and when the boat became mired. Later the men were able to free the boat from its position by making a path for it through the reeds, but eventually hauling it off and starting the engine.

Man Is Rescued Near Port Hope

Port Hope, Ont., July 15 (CP)— Osborn Pink of Iroquois Falls, was rescued from water in a dangerous position late last night after he had been swimming and dove into the water from the steamship Sheriff Lake when it was 200 yards from shore.

Pink was a passenger on the vessel, travelling as a cruise up the Otonabee River. He leaped into the water, swam to shore with the boat and after swimming 125 yards came to help.

Dr. Toronto woman who is summering at Tails Beach heard his cries for help and with Fred Pinkney put in a skiff, handled by a man whose name was not learned.

Pink was revived en shore by artificial respiration. He said he had a cramp in his leg, threw up his hat in the water and swam a long way with only one leg. He was in a strong undercurrent and Pink said exhausted, his legs gave out.

The swimmer said he remembered the approaching rescue skiff "I reached out my hand and that was I don't know what happened," he said.

QUEST FOR RADIUM SHIFTS TO DUMP

Officials Consider It Possible Radium Has Been Stolen but Thrown in Garbage

Peterborough, Ont., July 15—(CP)—Search for the missing 250 milligrams of radium shifted today to the city dumps after a second test with a radium-detector dashed earlier hopes of finding the radium in a deserted factory here.

Officials of the Canadian Gregor Mueller counter had been stepped up too high during the start of the search last night and had deceived the operators into thinking they had found the radium.

Police had suggested the factory as many transients frequent the place. Police thought if the radium had been stolen by transients from the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic here, that the radium might well have been discarded here after the thieves opened the lead container and discovered they had not taken money.

The scene moved to the city dumps as clinic officials considered it possible the radium had not been stolen, just mislaid and thrown out in the garbage.

CANADA PREPARES TO CELEBRATE

In 1864 Year of Historic Conference, Canada Was Cluster of Colonies

Charlottetown, July 15.—(CP) — A nation's eyes turned to this island province—the cradle of Confederation—today as Canada prepared to celebrate the 75th anniversary of a conference which led eventually to the union of the British provinces on the North American mainland.

What in 1864 was a cluster of colonies now is the Dominion of Canada. To the old provinces was added a fourth—the vast country of the west. For as a bronze plaque on the wall of the Confederation Chamber of Prince Edward Island's province building says of the 36 who met there "Providence being their guide, they builded better than they knew."

Fathers of Confederation Dead

Those Fathers of Confederation now are dead.' Their descendants are scattered from Charlottetown to Victoria. But as many of their sons and daughters as are able will attend the six-day commemoration beginning tomorrow. Several of the Federal Cabinet Ministers and Provincial Premiers will attend as well as about 40 Senators and Members of Parliament.

Four daughters of Sir Alexander T. Galt, one of the Confederation fathers, live in Victoria. They are not coming for the celebration but he is John Hamilton Gray of Metchosin, B.C., who recalls anecdotes that took place in the Rothesay, N.B., home of his father, also named John Hamilton Gray.

Recalls Joseph Howe.

"Joseph Howe (Nova Scotian who opposed Confederation but later became a cabinet minister in the cabinet of Sir John A. Macdonald) was my father's closest friends but he was a rabid anti-Confederate," he said. "I listened to many friendly arguments when Mr. Howe and my father called friends but the drift of the conversation was inevitably directed their friendship and afterwards Mr. Howe became my father."

A granddaughter of Sir John A. Macdonald, first Canadian premier, lives in Winnipeg, a son of Alexander Galt resides in Toronto. Janet Tupper, Victoria, granddaughter of Toronto student is descended from Sir John A. She is a great-granddaughter of R. B. Dickie on her mother's side and a great granddaughter of Sir Charles Tupper.

Those involved, the report said, were Miss Bertha Cassidy, a Canadian, now Mrs. Walter Haskell of the United Christian Missionary Society; Mrs. Haskell's 14-year-old son, Winston; and Miss Anna Stocks, an Advent Christian mission worker. Miss Cassidy was born in China of Canadian parents and is attached to the Advent Christian Mission's Wuhu School.

Officer Credentials

The missionaries said they were held by a street leader in the Yangtze River port 60 miles above Nanking and guarded by Japanese sentry who did not notice them.

The incident occurred at Wuhu July 13, the missionaries reported. The British and American authorities made immediate representations to the Shanghai Japanese Consulate which, said it had no information but would investigate.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Meteorologist

Town and country! Everyone notices the difference between the "feel" of the air in town and in the country. This is partly real and partly psychological. The real difference is in temperature, sunshine, and wind. The artificial heating and warm pavements combine to heighten temperatures in the cities than in the adjacent country both in summer and winter, and also one feels in towns the radiation from the sides of buildings and pavement which is different from that from vegetation. Then there is less ventilation in the city, the buildings diminishing the wind. The smoke of cities gives rise to fogs, and in addition diminishes the intensity of the sunshine.

Honor Statesmen Who Drafted Plans For Confederation

Charlottetown, July 17—(CP)—Members of the House of Commons and Provincial Legislatures gathered here today to honor the statesmen who met in Charlottetown 75 years ago to draft plans for a united Canada. They walked in the shadow of legislative buildings where the 34 Fathers of Confederation sat in 1864.

The formal celebration of the 75th anniversary of the conference which later led to confederation opened early with church services throughout Prince Edward Island. Centre of the ceremonies was in the inland capital where 1,000 members of militia and armament forces attended a drum head service.

Divine Service Held

The divine services were a prelude to a week of pageantry when much of the province's history will be recalled. Unveiling of tablets to the seven Prince Edward Island men who met in conference and participated in the program for the second day of the observances. Some of the descendants of the Fathers of Confederation are here for the event.

Sailors from the United States destroyer Hamilton and the Canadian destroyer Skeena were seen on the streets. Both vessels came into port for the celebration. Bearer of friendly greetings from a country which has been a friend of this island when it was known as Isle St. John three centuries ago, the French sloop Ville D'ys lay in harbor.

Campbell to Speak

Speakers at the unveiling ceremony today include Hon. Colin Campbell, Minister of Public Works for Canada, and Hon. T. M. Pethar, Minister of Mines and Resources in the Dominion government.

Transport Minister C. D. Howe, Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers, Sir Edward, H. Ronald Stewart of the Governor-General's staff, and Commodore H. E. Reid, Royal Canadian Air Service, were among those of who arrived here yesterday to take place to participate in the celebration.

Boucherville to Become Vital Link In Empire Air Route Around World

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boucherville, Que., July 17—(CP)—A vital link in the empire air route around the world will be welded in this quaint French-Canadian village in about three weeks when an Imperial Airways Clipper plane lands on the St. Lawrence River on the first flight of a regular trans-Atlantic service.

The initial westbound trip, tentatively scheduled for Aug. 5, will bring a flying boat to Southampton, via Foynes, Eire and Botwood, Nfld., to Boucherville, 20 miles down the St. Lawrence from Montreal.

It will carry mail which may be transferred to a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane and flown to Vancouver, providing a scheduled 40-hour service from England to the Pacific Ocean, which alone remains to be crossed regularly by British planes to complete the round-the-globe circle.

Weekly Flights Planned

Scheduled weekly air mail flights likely will be made until the river freezes. According to aviation authorities there is little possibility that commercial passenger flights will be started over the England-Canada route until next spring at least.

Undaunted by the fact that American and French airlines already are operating trans-Atlantic services, Imperial Airways and T.C.A., its Canadian agent, are completing plans for the British north-Atlantic service.

The Clipper planes in England are being tested 40 hours in the air before being put on the ocean hop, with new sleeve-type engines, a long-service motor development, are being thoroughly broken in. All these developments have contributed to the delay in inaugurating the service.

Important Air Base

Development of the Trans-Atlantic service probably will make Boucherville one of the world's most important air bases.

The clippers will land here after the flight from Botwood and will

RASPBERRIES WILL BE BUMPER CROP

With the rains of the past week bringing the fruit to a polish where it is inclined to bumper crop, the miscere patch of raspberries on the Farm of George Bailey, prominent Wellington grower, will be the means for upwards of one hundred and thirty pickers this week.

Early indications pointed to a much smaller yield than last year, when twenty-five thousand boxes of the fruit were picked. This year, however especially the heavy downpour that accompanied the severe electrical storm last week have given rise of inestimable value to the fruit, and its crowning glory will be when neighborhood of 26,000 boxes will be picked this year.

BEAUTIFUL SPECIMEN BLACK BASS CAUGHT

White Lake, scene of many a hard fought fishing struggle as well as the "grand-daddy" of northern lake bass over the week-end when Mrs. (Dr.) Sedore, Marlbank, netted a small-mouthed beauty that tipped the scales at five pounds eleven ounces.

"It was the biggest bass I have ever seen," Reeve Harvey Sexton of Hungerford Township who vouches for the weight, stated today. It was well over 20 inches in length, while its girth could not be spanned with my two hands."

Mrs. Sedore was accompanied by Mrs. Allison and Mr. Harvey of Marlbank, when she had fallen astuck. A twenty-five minute battle in which the line of the fighting fish from Belleveau to fish several times back aboard before the big bass lay in the boat.

TORONTO ANGLER HOOKS NICE BASS

A five-pound ten-ounce large-mouth black bass, one of the largest ever caught in the Bay of Quinte was landed on Sunday morning off Quinte Island by Frank Sports, 112 Scollard street, Toronto.

The fish record size was attested by over a dozen witnesses and weighed on the scales of a corner grocery store some time after the catch, and was then carefully wrapped and prepared for shipment to Toronto.

Fishing with several friends, Mr. Roberts who was using an extra large fly for bait believed he had snagged a large carp when the bass struck. Playing the fish carefully for nearly fifteen minutes he finally brought it to gaff with the help of assistants in the boat.

A large bass and a few minnows before had been hooked and played to the side of the boat, then lost during a sudden flurry of the fish.

the fair one day this year.

"This one day will mean a big difference to lots of these exhibitors, and we look for the heaviest attendance of livestock this year we have ever had. They will be able to be loaded their stock in on Tuesday and get away to the next one Thursday which will make a pretty fair week for them. As it was before, they were forced to stay right on the grounds until Friday night, which they said spoiled the week for them."

STREET OILING NOW COMPLETED

With annual street oiling operations now completed, a heavy program of road repairing and grading is now under way, it is the City Department of Public Works. A lighter type, gasoline engine-powered road roller purchased by the department recently is at present carrying its handicap and adaptability to this type of work.

GEOLOGIST CONCLUDES VISIT TO DISTRICT

Mr. Felix Shaw, of New York, a professional geologist who has been spending some time in the district collecting specimens of minerals through North Hastings has returned to New York, carrying with him well laden bags of indigenous minerals and rocks of the section.

FARMERS WARNED TO PROTECT HORSES

Annual summer threat to livestock owners of the district, horse blood is at present taking its toll of horses of the section, and several have been reported lost lately through this cause. Over-feeding on green pastures and alfalfa has been responsible for the loss and owners are cautioned by the local Dominion veterinarian, D. O. J. Rose, against too heavy grazing on this green feed.

CHICORY WEED SEEN IN EASTERN SECTIONS

Department of Agriculture officials note a considerable increase through the eastern section this year of the growth of Chicory weed, and strenuous efforts are being made to prevent further spread. An importation from Europe many years ago, the weed has now spread until every township of the district is reported an increase during late years. The weed, long, has been used for the purpose of mixing with cheaper grades of coffee when ground.

The weed is distinguished by its leafless, many-branched stem bearing numerous flowers of bright blue colour. The plant reproduces in the only method by which it can be overcome, it is stated.

BUSH LAND IN NORTH DEVASTATED BY FIRE

Bushland through the northern sections of the county, and even groves through the southern townships are being ravaged by forest fire at time and unless soaking rains fall through Hastings soon the fire threat of fire in the bush will be somewhat serious. It is stated by residents of the north.

Harry Hilla, Coe Hill, this morning reported that this section of that part of the county in a "dangerous condition". Lack of rain recently has resulted in extreme dryness even under the leaf mould in the woods, constantly damp.

Through the southern townships and in Prince Edward County grass left by roadsides is extremely dry and fires started from cigarettes thrown cigarette or cigar ends from passing cars is serious, Many inches of grass from roadsides have recently have been put out by alert householders and farmers.

OBITUARY

LATE W. E. (TED) CLARK

In the quiet seclusion of his late home at 195 Bridge Street East, with only immediate friends and relatives present, last rites and tributes were paid on Saturday afternoon to the late W. E. (Ted) Clark, highly esteemed resident of this city, who died suddenly at his home at Presqu'ile Point on Thursday last.

Rev. Canon G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church officiated at the simple but impressive funeral service held privately in the home, and at the graveside. Floral tributes, colorful in their beauty testified to the high regard and esteem in which the late Mr. Clark was held.

Pallbearers included: Dr. M. J. Clark, Dr. A. A. Day, J. L. Irvine, L. Lewis, J. S. Cook and Lieut. Col. E. A. Geen. Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery.

American Tourist Forgets To Tighten Screws on Motor

Anxiety to try out his new outboard motor on Majolda Lake cost an American tourist its price the other day. Hurriedly fixing the motor to the rear of his boat he whirled about the calm surface of the lake in satisfied smile on his face.

Then came disaster. Attempting to "turn on a dime" the motor suddenly leaped clear of the boat and plunged into twenty feet of water. He had forgotten to tighten the screw that affixes the motor to the stern of the boat.

Attempts to salvage the motor by swimmers and an amateur diver wearing a makeshift diving helmet failed.

STANLEY GRAHAM GIVEN 2 YEARS IN REFORMATORY

Convicted of Assaulting His Wife and Sentenced in Police Court

OTHER CASES HEARD

Stanley Graham, of this city, was sentenced to serve two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory after he had been convicted of assaulting his wife, causing her actual bodily harm, as he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's city police court. A second charge of non-support, was left in abeyance.

"This man was convicted of not supporting his family some months ago and at that time you ordered him to stay away from his wife. Today she lives in fear of him. He stopped her while she was going to her work recently and assaulted her on the street. Personally I would recommend the limit, I don't recall of you having given out a sentence that included whipping, sir," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he urged severe punishment in the case.

"I will not impose a whipping by Mah punishment in this instance, but I feel this man should be severely punished and sentenced to two years less one day in the reformatory," replied Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., as he sentenced the accused had been convicted of other minor offences on previous occasions.

Transient Jailed

Victor Koila, transient who was arrested in Bellville last week on charges of vagrancy after having been released from jail, where he was fear of residential homes on East Dundas Street, was sentenced to seven days in the county jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., after Koila had been convicted of vagrancy upon his own admission.

"This man was seen prowling in residential districts yesterday and I have the list of previous convictions, as against his name," the Crown Attorney ranging from grand larceny to peniteniary offences were included on the list presented by Mr. Donnan.

John H. Regan, Frankford farmer, appeared on a charge of driving a motor car while intoxicated, pleaded guilty to a mild form," was Regan's admission and the case was given seven days in the common jail. Constable Hall prosecuted on behalf of the accused gave evidence.

Did Not Answer

The name of Edwin Hall was called loudly and could not answer without response. Traffic Officer Ellis told of clocking the accused for speeding his motor car at 50 miles per hour on East Bridge Street last week. The officer also stated that Hall had been properly summonsed into court. A conviction was registered and a fine of $5.00 and costs levied.

Several other minor motor cases were disposed of, many being for the allieged operation of a motor vehicle that was found to have been driven with defective brakes. Fines of $10.00 and costs are being imposed in these cases, his Worship warned.

Get Rid of Hitler, Don't Mention Him

Middlesbrough, England, July 11 (CP)—According to Alfred Edwards, Labor member of parliament for Middlesbrough, the British press could get rid of Chancellor Hitler by not mentioning him.

"If our press refused to mention dictators for six months," he said, "and referred instead to matters of human interest, I venture to suggest that there will be no dictators in Germany at the end of that time."

REPORT 'GHOST' IS SEEN AGAIN

The declared luminous halo of a "ghost" is hovering over the marshy shores of Presqu'ile Point district, and once again the old debate over the genuineness of the apparition which has made itself known for half a century is being carried on-by old timers of the district.

For some time past residents of the section have sighted at odd intervals the weird ghostly sphere which appears as a ball of hazy light and which some older natives believe to be the restless spirit of one of Brighton district's first settlers. The years have only served to deepen the legend of this mysterious ball of light which dances from ground to tree top with sprightly ease.

Some scientific knowledge, however, attributes the presence of the luminous ball to a collection of methane gas, distilled by Nature from the ooze of the bogs of the district, a ball of "marsh gas" as known in scientific treatises.

Police Blotter

Activities in and around city and Provincial Police circles proved quiet and serene over the week end, no serious crime or major accidents being reported.

Ross Goodfellow, 276 William St. reported the loss of a pair of bicycle handle grips from off his parked bicycle on Saturday. The grips were removed while the lad was attending a movie.

Traffic Officers Caldwell and Ervine reported a general decrease in the speed motor traffic yesterday. "The coolness of the weather no doubt accounts for the general decrease of touring motorists over the week end," suggested Constable Ervine today.

WOMEN PRAISED BY FIRE CHIEF

Heroically Fight Grass Fire on Coleman Flats to Save Their Homes

With a small garden hose their only weapon of defence, two women residents of Roswell Street, headed by Mrs. G. V. Proctor and Mrs. George Andrews, piecessfully fought off flames that swept Coleman Flats early during afternoon, and threatened the rear of houses, that border the east side of the open field.

Flames were licking at a large board fence, and had ignited a small pile of lumber at the rear of the Andrews residence by the time city fire squads arrived. Fanned by a strong breeze the blaze swept through the long dry grass at a high rate of speed, leaving charred blackened stubble in its wake.

Believed to have been started by boys playing on the Flats, the fire raced in the van of the wind directly across the field to the rear of two Roswell Street houses. Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Tucker, sensing the danger, rushed to the scene as the blazing grass and played a small but steady stream of water on flames that threatened to ignite their houses. Other women from the vicinity soon joined the assistance and after a twenty minute struggle succeeded in finally extinguishing the flames that licked hungrily at the fences bordering their homes.

Fire Chief William Lynch and crews raced to the scene after an alarm had been turned in, and proceeded in reducing the blaze that had swept over approximately seventy-five percent of the grassy area.

Fire Chief William Lynch was loud in his praise of the prompt actions of Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Tucker and their assistants.

"The blaze might have developed into a serious fire had the flames raced with a foothold in the fences behind the Roswell Street houses. Mrs. Proctor and Mrs. Andrews deserve commendation for their prompt and strenuous prompt action in warding off the flames."

Program For Band Concert

To the Musical Festival at Walkerton, Ontario, the most outstanding thing of its kind in the Dominion, the Belleville Citizens' Band will present the following programme eight entries. January Frosts Partly Responsible For Light Crop

January frosts are more or less responsible for the light cherry crop this year, J. Rutter, employed in one of Prince Edward county's largest orchards that border the Bay of Quinte, Belleville highway all over the week end.

Hope for a large crop next year however is held out by the few new buds that form the year previous give promise of a bounteous yield next season. The crop will be approximately fifty per cent of early expectations, it is stated today.

Pea-Canning operations in the district will open next week, with canning factories reporting a fifty per cent crop. Early drought reduced the early pea yield although late rains brought relief to later crops but the acreage planted to reduce the harvest to anything like a heavy crop.

Strawberries have practically finished although one or two small factories in Prince Edward County will conclude preserving operations this week. Raspberries will occupy the attention of canners for the next two or three weeks with present indications pointing to a good yield.

EAT SANDWICHES, BECOME QUITE ILL
Wedding Guests Under Medical Care for Ptomaine Poisoning

La Tuque, Que., July 17.—(CP)—A mother and her small daughter were in hospital here today and nearly 30 other persons were under medical care for ptomaine poisoning, believed to have been caused by contaminated ingredients of sandwiches they ate Saturday at a wedding party.

They became ill after the breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Omer Pinet 15 miles from Lake 100 miles northwest of Quebec, following the wedding of 19-year-old Clarence Pinet and Roland Leboeuf. The bride and groom escaped poisoning, reporting by telephone after they left on their honeymoon that they were well.

Mrs. Henri Morin, 27, and her daughter were taken to hospital when they became violently ill an hour or so after the party ended. Dr. Elzear Bourdard, who described their condition as "much better," said that he had visited 25 of the 30 wedding guests. Dr. Maxime Comtois treated a half - dozen others.

Only about 30 sandwiches were made from the ingredients and persons who ate those sandwiches became ill. Dr. Bourdard said that the containers and a sample of the cake served had been sent to provincial laboratories in Montreal for examination.

U. S. WHEAT CROP NOT HEAVY ONE
Valued at Two Billions and Somewhat Less Than Last Year

Chicago, July 17—(AP)—The 1939 United States grain crop has a market valuation in excess of two thousand, 000,000, trade statisticians estimated today.

This wealth is based on prices which in some cases are the lowest since the lowest in the last five years. It would be realized from the harvesting and sale of approximately 4,453,000,000 bushels which, favorable weather permitting, will be harvested before winter. Corn, oats and wheat comprise the bulk of which has been harvested, with barley, rye and other minor grains adding to the total.

The 1939 harvest would be nearly 400,000,000 bushels smaller than that of 1938 and 500,000,000 bushels smaller than the 1937 crops, even with those exceptions would be equal to or larger than any other crop of the past seven years.

A market valuation above $2,000,000,000, based on current Chicago prices, is somewhat below the 1938 value of $2,350,000,000. The 1937 grain production was worth $3,000,000,000.

The expected 2,500,000,000-bushel corn crop would be the biggest in seven years, except 1937, and worth $1,182,000,000, without figuring the possible rate at which loans will be made on the corn. The 57-cent-bushel loan rate for 1938 corn is materially above current prices.

SAYS DAUGHTER ADMITS SHOOTING HER FATHER

Danville, Ill., July 17—(AP)—Before a coroner's jury a 9 years pledge made two weeks ago at the request of his family, Andrew Heath, 39, was dead today, slain, police said, by a blast from a shotgun wielded by his 16-year-old daughter, Alta.

Lieutenant Leo Bireline said the girl admitted she fired the fatal shot after telling her father: "Well, daddy, this is what I said I was going to do."

Bireline said the girl, held without charge, told him Heath came home drunk and "started abusing me and the other children."

Heath was placed under a peace bond recently at the request of his wife, Mildred, who complained he threatened her.

Trenton

Trenton, July 17th, (Special) — Pulling into an early lead and maintaining it all the way to the end, Graham's softballers bested Yourex Billiards 22 -14 in the first game of the finals to determine an O.A.S.A. winner for Trenton on Friday evening at Bayshore Park. A large crowd, on hand to witness the first of the playoffs between Yourex, loop leaders, and Graham's, who led the parade right up until just before the end of the season, were disappointed at the huge score and the number of errors. Yourex were the guilty team in the majority of the errors, and at least five or six of Graham's runs came in when fielders and others booted the ball around and let the Garagemen scamper around the bases. Both Coughlin on the mound for Graham's and Burtt for Yourex were hit heavily, and both have done better work on many occasions.

Softball fans were somewhat surprised to see a play-off so early in the season, and many made inquiries about the affair. Yourex softballers, by virtue of taking top place in the loop standing for the season, win the Continental Can trophy donated to the team winning the league each year, and since Wooler will be playing in the intermediate "C" playdowns and will not be meeting a Trenton entry and since the R.C.A.F. are eliminated from further competition this season, it must be that a series between Graham's and Yourex determines a winner to represent the town in the playdowns. The first game on Friday will be followed on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of this week if necessary to complete a three-out-of-five series.

Following the staging of th's local playoff series, the three remaining local teams will play off in the later autumn for the Cobley trophy, emblematic of the championship of the town league. The executive this year have decided to take this step, and will leave that series until after both Wooler and Trenton winners have advanced through the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Wooler will have a perfect right to compete for the Cobley trophy even though they play in a different class in the playdowns; and after the exhibition given on Friday should have little trouble in defeating either Graham's or Yourex.

Smart Attraction

Some time within the coming month Trenton softball fans will have an opportunity of seeing the pride of Trenton's ladies softball teams from the Sunnyside loop playing an exhibition game here in Trenton if plans now being formulated by the local Lions Club mature. At the regular bi-weekly meeting of the group held in the Gilbert Hotel on Thursday evening the club decided that its next attempt to raise funds would, take the form of the presentation of an exhibition softball game here between two of the senior teams now playing in Sunnyside. Possibly Langleys or Orange Crush or Sunday Morning Chase or others, these teams, any of them, would have tremendous drawing power here, for they are really peaking them in Sunnyside where they are not by any means a novelty; and should the game be presented as planned local fans should get a great kick out of it.

A local authority on the subject assures us that two of the stars on the senior Sunday Morning Class team are former Trenton girls, Kay and Marie Genereux, one catching and one playing third base, and these would undoubtedly prove great attractions from the local point of view at least. The information further goes on to state that these girls really got their start at softball when they played for the Belleville Fruit lassies some years ago. Since their migration to Toronto they have improved tremendously, and there isn't much doubt that the Sunday Morning Class team as a whole is really outstanding for they recently visited New York City and played before huge crowds in Madison Square Garden. Further information regarding the possibilities of staging such a game is to be secured in Toronto this week by Jas. Anderson who will interview Alexandrine Gibb of the Toronto Daily Star sports department and possibly interview local team managers. The committee appointed by the club to handle all preparations for the event includes chairman Jim Wallace, and Gord. Huffman, Larry Ryan, and Bernard York.

Development of Aviation

Speaker for the evening was Wing Commander D. C. M. Rume of the Trenton R.C.A.F. Station, who gave a most interesting summary of development in aviation since its inception only a few decades ago. He mentioned the balloon ascents of the previous centuries, but said that flying really dated from 1903, and added that of all the sciences it is the one which has taken the greatest strides in the shortest time. The first Schneider Cup race was won in 1913 with an average speed of 45 miles per hour, and when the last race was won by a British plane in 1934 the speed was above 440 miles per hour. Since then it has been increased tremendously again, but in his opinion the speaker stated there was little more in the matter of speed to expect. In fact he said there was little need of it, for even now Britain can in time of war turn out planes by the carload that will easily average 350 miles per hour with a ceiling of 45,000 feet.

The place of the single-seater fighter in the next war is difficult to define, Wing Commander Rume said. The bombers will certainly take the first place, and the formations of these will be difficult to break up. Practice of other nations in aviation matters was discussed by the speaker with comments as to the advisability of many of their courses.

In introducing the speaker to the club, Secretary Fred Juby pointed out that Wing Commander Rume is recognized as one of the most expert technical advisers in the R.C.A.F. and received his experience with the Admiralty department during the Great War. He has been in Trenton for some years and is very well known here. The vote of thanks was proposed by Ralph Huffman.

Vicky Ryan was named as chairman of a one-man committee to arrange and handle an exhibition game of softball between Long and Bankers locally some day this week.

Committees Named

One of the most important matters to be handled at the meeting was the naming of committees who will function for the club for the ensuing year and will hold office until July 1st in 1940. Included in the list were the following:

Attendance Committee: Chairman—Ralph Huffman, Fred Jeffery; Constitution and By-laws Committee—Chairman, Sherman Graham, Jas. Anderson; Fitness Committee—Walter Gunton, Chairman, Dave MacDonald, Rylton Sherrard; Membership Committee: Chairman, Harry Seger, Jim Wallace, Gordon Johnston; Publicity Committee: Chairman, Harry Moore, Jack Gaskell; Programme Committee: Chairman, Frank Sherbert, Reg. Armstrong; Right Conservation, and Blind Work Committee: Chairman, Chas. Cumberland, George Vanner, Arnold Westfall; Boys and Girls Work: Chairman, Bill Whyte, Ralph Weaver, Victor Ryan; Citizenship Committee: Chairman, Val Caswell, Bernard York; Civic Improvement Committee: Chairman, Rev. F. A. Smith, Harold Smith; Community Betterment Committee: Chairman, Jack Hewitt, Art Norrington; Education Committee: Chairman, Shaw McEwen, Harold Campbell; Health Committee: Chairman, Larry Ryan, Gordon Hillman; Safety Committee: Chairman, Thorne Spear, Earl Kennedy.

Next meeting of the club will be held at Presqu'ile Point. It was decided, on Thursday, August 10th, with wives and friends taking part in a picnic supper.

Cleared Port

The freighter Mont Notre-Dame of Quebec City unloaded her cargo of Bata shoe manufacturing equipment at the local wharf on Wednesday and Thursday of last week and cleared the port homeward late Thursday. At Frankford Bata officials are busy as they can be with architects and builders and job-seekers and carpenters and workmen and the storage of machinery in the warehouse of the former paper mill there goes on steadily. Officials on the scene include Oldrich Suchanek, L. Neubauer, and Dr. Herz, but none of the trio are able to remain constantly on the scene.

The steamer Glen Allen, Capt. Ben Bowen in command, docked here on Saturday morning.

Publicity surrounding the finding and subsequent sale of a meteorite in Western Ontario has made the public comet-conscious, apparently, and newshawks were scouring the local area last week to locate the man who supposedly found one on Friday last. However the only ones avilable at the moment are a huge stone on the Wedell farm just east of Trenton, which was removed by a dredge from the channel of the Bay of Quinte many years ago and brought to its present site, and a smaller one found several months past on Consecon beach by tailor, L. Hill.

Council at a special session on Friday night approved several by-laws and authorized a letter to a British motion picture group to visit Trenton in the near future and "shoot" scenes of local interest.

SOVIET PLANES

Hahnarshan is in northwestern Manchoukuo about 125 miles from the Outer Mongolian border. The raid was believed by some observers to have been the Mongolian answer to a diplomatic protest filed by Manchoukuo over a dawn raid yesterday on Furoujil (Fularki) which represented the deepest thrust yet made into Manchoukuo by Mongol-Soviet forces. Furoujil is almost 400 miles from the Mongolian border.

In the protest over the Furoujil raid Manchoukuo authorities threatened to bomb Russia's Siberian airbase of Blagovenchensk in retaliation. The town had been raided twice before—last Monday and Thursday.

Yesterday's attack on Furoujil may have been an attempt to destroy a bridge spanning the Nonni River, which was prominent in the 1931 warfare in Manchoukuo, the Manchuria. Furoujil is about 40 miles southwest of the important Manchoukuo centre of Tsitsihar and is on the main rail line between Harbin and Hailar.

Seven persons were wounded and two buildings destroyed in this raid.

BRITISH EMBASSY BOMBING HINDERS NEGOTIATIONS

Lessening hope of accomplishing much in a conference between Sir Robert Craigie, British ambassador to Japan, LEFT; and Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, RIGHT, who were to discuss the situation at Tientsin, and other grievances between the two governments, was the riot staged by Japanese outside the British embassy in Tokyo, shown here, when windows were smashed and considerable damage of a minor nature done by a crowd of over 50,000 in one of the greatest outbursts against a foreign power ever staged in Japan. As attempts were made to rush the gates, but police were able to hold the crowd in check, although officials in the embassy moved to the back of the building to escape anything that might ensue.

FRENCH AVIATORS PLEASED

Strengthening the bonds of the anti-aggression front and at the same time bringing further sagging to the edges of "encirclement" bullet-proof glass-enclosed machine guns, Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, are shown here as they arrived at the Croydon airport, near London, where a group of aviators of the two countries are seen examining, apparently with satisfaction, a machine from the axis powers. JAN BATA WATCHES CONSTRUCTION OF HIS U.S. FACTORY

While preparations for the erection of a factory at the Ontario village of Frankford, for the manufacture of shoes by the former Czecho-Slovakian company headed by Jan Bata, are being carried out, work progresses rapidly on an American plant under construction at Belcamp, Maryland, where the head of the firm will also reside. Top picture here shows work on the foundation going ahead, while an old mansion, future home of Mr. Bata's family is being prepared in the lower photograph. Mr. Bata watching construction at the RIGHT, is quoted as saying his American expansion, did not indicate flight from Germany, where authorities had treated him fairly, he said.

GIANT SNOW CAR WILL BE "HOME" FOR ANTARCTIC SCIENTISTS

GERMANY LEASES ITALIAN CITY

This map shows the location of Trieste, once the principal maritime centre of the Austro-Hungarian empire, which became the focal point of European diplomatic attention, when it was reported that Germany had secured a 10-year lease on the city, in what was believed to be part of a deal between the axis powers that saw all German evacuated from South Tyrol, which is to be made completely Italian, South Tyrol lies just south of the Brenner Pass shown here. Trieste, a city of about 250,000, was ceded to Italy after the world war, coast, where she sank with a loss of

U. S. SUBMARINE BROUGHT BRIEFLY TO SURFACE

With a burst of white foam the nose of the ill-fated U.S. submarine Squalus breaks through the surface of the sea off the New Hampshire 26 lives. The appearance was short-lived, however, as she slipped the pontoons used to raise her from the mud, where she had remained embedded for nearly two months, and slid back into the depths. Most of the work accomplished on the salvage job will now have to be repeated.

SURELY AND NOT SLOWLY

Those who know Britain should not be surprised at the immense strides she is taking in the matters of defence. The immense character of her plans for the protection of herself and her allies is not failing to find reaction across the world. And the world is pleased because it has grown tired and weary of German and Italian speeches conveying threats to the world. Than either of these there is a greater power, Britain, which did not boast, but which has found it necessary to speak bluntly, for the sake of preserving peace. What that greater power is doing in making things safer for the world is the source of satisfaction to the people of the world outside of those who have been arming for years and been talking rampant nationalism.

On Saturday Great Britain called up the first peacetime conscripts. Britain did not want conscription, but perhaps it may be the way along with other efforts of hers by which war will be avoided.

Back of everything is the immense resourcefulness of Britain. She has the money, she has the sympathy, co-operation of the world outside of a few nations. Her friends do not fear her as many believe Italy today fears Germany. Britain is a safe ally and a safe leader.

What Britain has done since Munich is a marvel. Germans and Italians have been regimented for years and may soon be growing weary of regimentation, but in one year of her own free will Britain has imposed heavy tasks on herself. She has planned the defence of her Empire without asking assistance. These British are wonderful people. They do such great things so quietly and successfully.

Germany in the course of the past five or more years had turned a world against her. Nations fear her on the score of aggression. They look to British leadership to hold the world safe from the intrigues of dictators, and the latters' plottings and plannings to make a new universe with themselves in the place of the sun.

75 YEARS AGO

Canada has reason to be mindful of the anniversary of the Charlottetown Conference which is here celebrated this week, because it memorializes the first steps of the successful efforts to make of the British North American Colonies a united nation. Three years later, in 1867, Confederation became a fact after years of struggle.

Seventy-five years ago the Fathers of Confederation met at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. Today Canadian, French and U.S. warships are in the harbor, militiamen of the Maritimes are in camp, and men who are leaders in Canadian life will figure in the celebration. Appropriately yesterday religious services of thanksgiving were held at Charlottetown.

Today tablets were unveiled to commemorate the Prince Edward Island Fathers of Confederation.

Confederation was no doubt inevitable. One could not forsee so many colonies stretching across a Continent without unity. But Confederation gave an impetus to the national life and to the Canadian spirit. With the work of the Fathers of Confederation these colonies or provinces stepped into a fuller heritage—one of the finest ever permitted a people, half of a vast continent with an invigorating climate, with a sturdy people, possessing the spirit of youth in their outlook. But while Confederation may have been inevitable, it came at personal sacrifices to great men for the sake of unity and it has accomplished what the provinces singly could not have achieved. Sacrifice is a part of progress. It is well for a nation when men will yield for the good of all.

It seems a long way from the time when the Cabots touched the coast of America and Jacques Cartier landed at Gaspe to the year 1864, the time of the momentous conference on to the year 1867, the time of Confederation.

As said before ultimately there would have been some form of union, but this conference speeded it up, called on great leaders to give and take for the good of the cause of an ultimate union of the British North American Provinces, but the work of discoverers, pioneers, explorers, immigrants from France and the British Isles, the coming of the Loyalists, made all this possible. Of course a look back over Canadian history shows unity existing in early days in the united stand of Ontario and Quebec, in the attitude of the Maritimes, but Confederation made possible sooner the great confederacy of the Dominion which stretches from sea to sea.

SUMMER AGAIN !

Summer again, and the clover blooming
In the old-time meadow beyond the lane,
Summer again, and the sunlight throwing
Its golden beams over hill and plain;
The trees are crowned with their summer glory,
Grandly they guard the shadowed shore,
A whispering wind brings again the story
Of summer days that will come no more.

And every morn when the diamonds glisten
On the glittering dew in the meadow dim,
With heart atune I pause to listen
As the blue-bird sings his morning hymn;
Summer again with the old-time splendor,
With the beauty of forest and field and tree,
When together we fared in the golden glamor—
Fond memories stir in the heart of me.

A two-fold joy the days are holding,
These summer days so full and free—
The summer flowers of the past unfolding
Bloom now again in memory;
In spirit we fare in the summer sunshine
Across the fields you held so dear,
And at eventide when the shadows lengthen
I sleep and dream that you are here.

"I DON'T KNOW WHAT THE LAST WAR WAS ABOUT," said Sergeant Alvin Cullum York, a recent visitor to the New York World's Fair. Sergeant York, a red-headed giant from the Tennessee mountains, handy with the rifle as a hillbilly should be, was credited with having single-handed killed 20 Germans, captured 132 more, with a squad of seven men, while serving with the United States army in the Great War. For a man who did not know what the last war was all about he was certainly taking full advantage of his opportunities.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN MUSIC SEEMS DESTINED TO GO ON FOR-EVER. Revivals of Gilbert and Sullivan operas are becoming more frequent, and recent news from Broadway reports that a permanent troupe is being organized in Manhattan to play Gilbert and Sullivan operas all year along the lines of England's famous D'Oyly Carte Company. A screen version of "The Mikado" was recently made in England and is proving popular in United States movie houses. A colored version of "The Mikado," with Bill Robinson, famous tap dancer in the lead, is having at least a Harlem success. Memory goes back to "Pinafore" days, while "The Pirates of Penzance" lingers lovingly in memory, besides other tuneful products of the famous team of Gilbert and Sullivan. Memory also swings back to DeWolfe Hopper, who if pot the greatest Lord High Executioner, or what have you, left a pleasant memory in "The Mikado," as he did in everything he appeared in—and of course that revives memories of "Casey at the Bat," and the gloom in Mudville on that memorable day when Casey failed them, as related by DeWolfe Hopper several thousand times by request.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA IS BEING TRANSFERRED IN SECTIONS TO ONTARIO, according to press despatches. Prescott has a goat and glove industry started by industrialists who had too much Hitler. Frankford, in the valley of the Trent, is the scene of an important industrial transplanting with factories being equipped for the manufacture of shoes. Brockville reports that two brothers from C—slovakia have purchased the large wholesale plant of the Brockville Floral Company, formerly owned and operated by E. A. Clarke, ex-M.P.P., and will conduct the business under the name of The Brockville Greenhouses. The brothers are Marcil and Albert Oravan. They are graduates of the College of Horticulture in Budapest, Hungary. A third brother, a newspaper editor in his native country, has arrived in Brockville, and will be associated with his brothers in the floral company. If someone will invent a short form for spelling C—slovakia, newspaper men will be eternally grateful. Outside of that the industrial invasion seems O.K.

The captain, fearing the gale would rain the sloop aground near the lighthouse, where she now lies in four feet of water.

"Men Once Wrote Poetry"

It is significant that the flow of wealth into the hands of women increased as men turned to unguents and talcum for their hairless cheeks. The decline and fall of Rome was engineered by the barber; and the citadel of the Seven Hills capitulated to the Huns and Vandals—bearded men all; just as Greece had yielded to the bearded legionaires from the banks of the Tiber.

The arts have had a close shave, too. Men once wrote poetry, but it doesn't work now. A man with the kind of skin you love to touch can't write poetry—he's too much of a poem himself. He's a sentimental sonnet, and ashamed of it. He has made the choice between sanitation and self-importance; and every time he lathers his chin or rubs some soapless cream upon it he is reminded of the mistake he made.

He has devitalized himself under the blandishments of Delilah, and, like Samson, he yearns for the strength which would enable him to put her back in her place. He was a man, once; and it was no accident that in the days when "beaver" was something more than a call to comedy, a man's wife was afraid of him as well.

Business, we are told, stagnates for lack of "confidence." I think it stagnates for lack of whiskers. I think if the average man knew he would throw away their razors for 90 days the boom would be on to stay. And when it comes to politics, no man whose face can be seen is going to lead us out of the valley of our despond. If I were picking candidates for the presidency, I'd send for the House of David and ask for a full quota. Whiskers will win in a walk.—Howard Vincent O'Brien in Chicago News.

x x x

I have often wondered why this was so. Today, however, I have a clue to the mystery—revealed to me by a woman. Our decline, she says, is directly proportionate to the disappearance of whiskers.

In the days when a moustache cup was a thing of use no less than of elegance, the male had dignity. Shorn of his beard, he was only a fractional man.

A voice that emerged from a thicket of whiskers had weight behind it. Like the answers that came from the caverns of the Delphic oracle, it carried conviction. People believed what they were told. And what is more important, the hair - men believed themselves. There was something about their jowling locks that gave a man confidence in himself. He could look in a mirror and suffer no doubts.

The safety razor made the first cut in authority; and the electric clipper removed what was left. When a man bares his throat and undressed if he could feel anything on his face, and believed the entertaining tale told him he ought to shave twice a day, the end of all ordered civilization was in sight.

x x x

It seems to me that an outstanding characteristic of this strangely apprehensive and ill-centred era is the disappearance of respect for authority.

Government, in the old days, was staffed with statesmen, men who occasionally made small mistakes, it is true, but who, on the whole, were respected for the sobriety of their attitude.

Now, all is changed. There are no leaders any more; and those who aspire to leadership are lucky if they get no worse than the raspberry.

"After this week there will be 'Keep Out' signs all over my farm" declared the fleet-faced farmer with a good-natured smile. "I am sorry I have to do this, but I cannot stand it any longer."

"Are you thinking into your property?" we questioned, seeking a reason why first-time signs should appear on his ancestral estate.

"They leave the gates open", he explained shortly. "Stock gets out on the road and if there is an accident I get the blame. Yes sir, it's 'Keep Out' after this."

And "keep out" it is.

This man owns a picturesque farm. Across one corner a spring creek babbles its cheery way between substantial banks. Here and there are grassy plateaus, shaded by an occasional elm, tempting to idle. There is a grip of hardwood, cool and inviting. Occasionally throughout this park-like lot you will find the ashes of camp fires, which were sustained by a pile of hardwood filched from the pile the farmer cut last Winter.

Sometimes you will see a pop bottle on a log and tossed the broken glass into the grass, to cut the feet of the next camper or the cloven hoof of the farmer's pet cow. A wire fence along the road skirts the picnic grounds, and a freshly clipped wire indicated the work of wire pincers which made it easier for the casual visitor to get into the picnic grounds with the sandwiches and coffee. Already this season the green grass had been strewn with bits of paper.

What fools we be!

This farmer is a good-natured, kindly disposed man, which is true of the majority of the folk who live in the country. He had been born on this place and never believed that he could carry a sign asking that trespassers keep off. Dozens of city people will be denied this Summer because of that stupid individual who persists in doing the most thoughtless things.

In the Fall and Winter it is the irresponsible hunter who gives the owners of the land heartburn. Now it is the motorist, usually the Sunday visitor, who seeks a quiet place upon which he leaves his marks of destruction.

x x x

More and more of the choice cathedral-like glens will be closed unless greater common sense is exercised by the city visitor. Why should the farmer be asked to put up the need for camp fires without some consideration? Why should broken glass be tossed about his fields and on the banks of the streams? Why should the farmer be molested with rifle shots of a Sunday? (Which was the experience of one resident a Sunday or two ago.) Why should wires be mangled with city pincers, and why should gates be left open to bring added expense and annoyance to the man who would only be too glad to share the great out-of-doors with his city cousin? Yes, indeed, why?

Summer is here again. Ontario woods are beautiful to a point of enchantment. Through the kindness of those who own them they are open to the office-wearied merchant or the factory-worn mechanic.

Let those of us who seek the shimmering beauty of the whispering leaves, the crescent banks where the creek murmurs back a dark circle of rainbow colors, the mallow call of the bluebird, the cheery call of the whip-poor-will or the telegraphic tat of the woodpecker, accept these contributions with a grateful heart, which will at all times protect the farmer's property.

If we don't it will be "KEEP OUT"—W. H. Colclough in Stratford Beacon-Herald.

MILK HORSE RETIRES

Tired feet at rest, aged teeth munching oats, Teddy, a 26-year-old horse, has waited transportation to rural scenes. Teddy drew a milk wagon for twenty-two years for William McCulloch, proprietor of the Ellenville Dairy, 28 Greenwich avenue. He is being retired. "He'll just rest now as rest as he wants," Mr. McCulloch said while Teddy lounged in his stable at 182 Thompson Street. A truck will take him to Mr. McCulloch farm in Ellenville, N.Y. The new home won't be strange to Teddy, who has always spent six-week holidays there.

Teddy has been a pal of the kids of Public School 41 at 36 Greenwich avenue. Another friend who will miss him is Patrolman Fred Gilman of 41 Greenwich avenue. Mr. Gilman and the children often presented delicacies to Teddy when they passed his former quarters on the sidewalk and whinnied as the children quit school for noon lunches —New York Times.

PULPIT SUBSTITUTE

John R. MacNicol, M.P., who came to Prince Township over 40 years ago to teach school, found himself laden with the task of pinch-hitting in the pulpit when the clergyman could not be on hand.

As Mr. MacNicol tells the story, it was the late Lorenzo Cassidy, then chairman of the school board in the township, who broke the news to Mr. MacNicol was dumbfounded. He had been teaching the Bible Class, but this was something else again but Mr. Lorenzo merely told him that it was up to him.

So the momentous day arrived. "I don't remember getting into the pulpit, and I don't remember getting out of it, but I don't remember what I said," said Mr. MacNicol. "I came in feeling like two cents. But as he left the church he heard two of the elders say that he was all right. You forgot to take up the collection." Said the other: "I didn't think it was necessary to enter that sermon.

"And," chuckled Mr. MacNicol, "I sort of agreed with him."—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

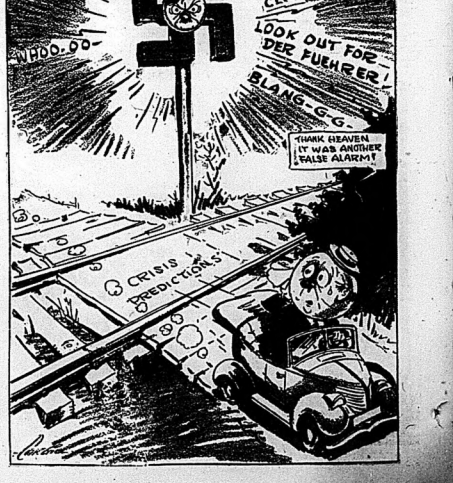
Who Will Pay For Television?

The Radio Manufacturers Association, convened at Chicago, focused its search on the commercial future of television. And well it may. Though the images sent out were received are acceptable, a transmitter has a range of only 40 miles or so, and miles even when mounted on top of the Empire State or Chrysler building. To blanket the country with visual entertainment through a national hook-up would call for a section of perhaps several hundred stations, each costing from $100,000 to $500,000.

Interconnection can be achieved by short-wave radio, but engineers prefer the coaxial cable, which costs about $5,000 a mile, with at least 90,000 subscribers needed. Assuming that some inexpensive way of hooking up stations will ultimately be evolved, there still remains the obstacle of studio costs. The worst film play that the public will tolerate costs about $1,000 a minute in screen-time. Probably $5,000 a minute is the average for a good screen play. But the most that a national hook-up now cuts the advertiser is about $600 a minute, which leaves a satisfactory profit for the broadcasting company. Television studio costs will have to be brought down to about $500 a minute if ordinary broadcasting is any criterion. How that miracle is to be performed in the face of Hollywood's long experience and the public's demand for high-priced actors and elaborate stage settings, no economic soothsayer will venture to predict.

British experience indicates that the public will not be satisfied with mere sketches. It wants full-length plays—a new one for 24 consecutive hours. And this means a production cost of $30,000 a day. The present business of the two leading sound broadcasting companies in the U.S. is about $90,000,000 a year, which is barely enough to produce 300-hour programs. Hollywood never had to reckon with anything like the purchasing power television will demand from authors, actors, engineers, directors, and highly skilled make-up experts, stage directors and customers.

No radio manufacturer now believes that the sale of sets alone can pay the cost of television. Nor does he expect much income from the sale of tubes, though a television nor has about twenty. It is the advertiser who must pay. But will he? And can he? The present cautious broadcasting of one or two television program-hours a week will not answer. Nor will it. Television will it reveal how strong is the public demand for television? The potentialities of advertising. It is the established system of providing entertainment at the expense of "sponsors" that has made radio—and will make television itself.—New York Times.



MANION OPPOSES

No Influence on Policy

"That vote has no effect whatever on the resolution of the National Conservative party opposing unification," Dr. Manion said. "Those 25 Senators have no more influence on the policy of the Conservative party than any other 25 citizens who may wish to take a position on any question.

The last meeting was the largest of the four to date, 4,000 people attended, although a light shower of rain drove some of them home before it ended.

Quebec Conservatives who followed Dr. Manion around the Gaspe coast claimed that his French improved steadily throughout the week-long tour. Usually he spoke from a prepared text but from time to time he added something on the spur of the moment.

Two members of the Quebec legislature, supporters of Premier Maurice Duplessis, appeared on platforms with the Conservative leader. This was the only indication of support for the federal Conservative cause from the Union Nationale Party which constitutes the Quebec government.

Support Best Man

They were Alphonse Pelletier, member for Gaspe North, who appeared at Ste. Anne Des Monts and said he hoped Dr. Manion would become Prime Minister, and Ferdinand Paradis, member for Matapedia, who spoke at Amqui and declared that he was independent in federal politics and would support the best man.

The motor tour down the south shore of the St. Lawrence, across the Gaspe Peninsula and around the scenic coast to the Bay of Chaleur, the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the river took Dr. Manion through the constituencies of Gaspe, Bonaventure, Rimouski, Matapedia, Matane, Temiscouata, Kamouraska, Lotbiniere and Montmagny, all now represented in the House of Commons by Liberals.

INJURIES CONTINUE IN KENTUCKY MINE STRIFE

Constant sore spot on the U. S. labor front is the coal district in Harlan, Kentucky, where trouble between owners, miners, troops and citizens is almost the order rather than the exception. Most recent fights between troops and pickets resulted in the death of one miner and injury to six others, as well as a member of the National Guard, called upon to restore peace. Our picture shows a mass arrest of trouble-makers, as National Guardsmen herded 250 miners to jail.

Similarity Between Tuberculosis and Cancer Said to Exist

By GUY KHOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 17—(CP)—Discovery that 20 per cent of all deaths in all countries of persons over 45 years of age are attributable to tuberculosis and cancer combined has set British scientists agog and a trail they believe will show an intimate connection between the two diseases.

Existence of the theory of association between cancer and tuberculosis was mentioned by the Duke of Kent at a meeting of the Papworth Village Settlement supporters. The Duke called attention to the work of Dr. Barron Crulkshank, a Papworth research expert, who established the mathematical relation between the diseases.

Work For Three Years

Later Sir Pendrill Varrier-Jones, medical director of Papworth, said this settlement research men had worked on the problem for three years. They discovered the two diseases had accounted for 20 per cent of recorded deaths among those over 25 during the last 80 years and that while tuberculosis deaths decreased those from cancer increased and the combined percentage remained the same.

Sir Pendrill cautioned that Papworth workers did not believe they were on the threshold of discovering a cure for cancer or that they were about to determine the actual cause of the disease.

He declared, however, that his workers had discovered a new approach which might lead into new fields promising great success of future work and that he was convinced the mathematical discovery placed them on new ground.

The Hitch Hikers' Etiquette

The modern hitch-hiker has found effective methods of flagging passing motorists which completely shame the crude attempts of his predecessors. It is being proven daily that skill, whether employed wittingly or unwittingly, has played no small part in the growth and development of this parasitic pursuit.

As the name suggested hitch-hiking is an adjunct of hiking. With the influx of the automobile a new problem arose in American society the more resourceful hikers became aware of an economic waste as one after car went whirring by with empty seats.

The ultimate thumb in waging the style today has been definitely proven, after exhaustive experiment on the highway laboratory, to be the most natural and graceful way for the human form to indicate the given direction to indicate that it wishes to go in the opposite. No finger is as efficacious as the thumb for that particular gesture and to secure an optimum of efficiency one must be sure that the right thumb is employed whether one is ambidextrous he let-handed. There are several schools of thought on arm movement swinging from shoulder and elbow to wrist with varying combinations and at different altitudes. Nevertheless, all propel the same style hitch.

Parallel with the growth and development of highway hitch-hiking a find more momentous import because it produced a hitherto unheard number of rides were being revealed. The esoteric were noted pointing the thumbs on the "up the road" sides of stoplight-intersections. The convergence of roads not only produced more prospects, but it served to slow them down to a more moderate pace from which motorists were not so reluctant to come to a full stop as when "running" down the straightaway. When the stoplight turned red, drivers had the opportunity to give roadside thumbers a close scrutiny, thereby avoiding picking up the socially unsuitable.

It is found expedient to maintain a well-groomed appearance, erect bearing and a cheerful countenance. Books carried under the arm indicate a student and, therefore, an ambitious person of commendable character. Bags and travelling kits should be carefully placed endwise so that the legs conceal them from the eyes of the approaching motorists, yet may be snatched up at the first squeal of rubber on pavement.

Successes vary inversely to the number of occupants of the car. Salesmen and truck drivers have the highest scores, while full cars and women drivers have the lowest.

To promote happy hitch-hiking for others it is well to make urbane and pleasant discourse with the driver—possibly he will see you on the road another day, especially if both parties travel the same route often.

In the interest of the automobile business, it is fortunate that folks will never abandon themselves to profligate picking up of hitchhikers, yet there is such a thing as a happy medium approaching when getting a lift does not have as much of a hitch to it.—N. B. G. in Christian Science Monitor.

Polishing Up Our Glorious Crowns

(By Helen Follett)

TO MAKE the dullest brown crown attractive is should be polished. Every hair should shine with a freshly-washed mirror. Taking a general survey of girls here, there and elsewhere, we must come to the conclusion that tresslocks carrying a dull finish are all too common. With all this beauty frenzy that is in the air, you'd think that would never happen.

Lack of grooming, exposure to strong sunlight, dashing the first nightly shampoo are responsible for dead-looking shafts. Sometimes that looks gloomy because the diet isn't right. Finicky eaters nearly always have trouble with hair, complexion and finger-nails. Take care of your health and a lot of beauty ills will evaporate.

Get out the old hair brush and use it. Make your locks, strand by strand, hold them away from the head, treat them to a vigorous curtying, rolling the brush as you sweep from the scalp to the curly ends. This treatment needs a certain amount of exercise to the pupilise in which the hair roots rest, rousing their sluggish blood flow. And, of course, it removes surface dust and promotes a healthy gloss.

Many a depleted growth of wool gets that way through neglect. Don't take your locks for granted, don't fancy that it will stay thick and beautiful throughout the years. Be good to it, and the help in the mirror will create gratifying reflections of your efforts.

It's time now to switch your make up for the season. It is a tricky and we should not begrudge them the money we fling into their tills. They make the world gayer.

Try a rose make-up; you'll love it. Use a fairly golden powder if your skin has been kissed by the sun. Then flutter your little feet to the powder-room and, with a rich rose for rouge, lipstick and finger-nails. They come ,these days, in a single package, so you won't have to chase around and do your own matching. Absolutely charming, we thought.

He Enjoys Evenings at Home With Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

My boy friend, with whom I've been going several years, is always spending money on me, and I know it must be a drain on his purse. Whenever I say that I wish he wouldn't take me to a show, he says as long as he has the money, he wants to spend it. I would like to do some little thing to show my appreciation' When we do stay at home, it's just conversation and listening to the radio—always the same old thing.

We're very much in love and he tells me he enjoys these evenings at home. I want to get some idea for spending evenings at home beside listening to the radio. Can you help me, please?

Serjoe

So many times, spending the evening at home is the height of glory to a young man in love. Why bother your head over it? If you really want to do something special, invite him half a dozen fellow handkerchiefs, with his monogram or initials. Or you might make him a new bed cover for his room, or you might make some fudge some evening. Be domestic. How can I suggest to him that I'd like to know them?

In Doubt

It would be very poor policy for you to suggest the handkerchiefs to your boy friend's mother and fath, or, when he has been presented to you. Most young men would be rather embarrassed, just to think anything of a young lady of the tender age of 17 to the old folks, as it would make the fellow appear to be more serious than it is. Please don't make any suggestions about introductions at the present time.

Peter For goodness sake, Peter, don't

Next time you see her, just saunter into your own hand. Stop and have a friendly chat, invite her to a movie, or to swim with you, or some such something like that. And don't lose sight of that "Paint heart never won fair lady."

Wants to Meet Boy Friend's Parents

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 17 years old and have been going with a boy in my class at school for almost a year now. He talks about his parents a lot, so I know they are both living, and I'm anxious to get acquainted with them. How can I suggest to him that I'd like to know them?

"Adam Probert is a business man," said Catherine, "and builds for profit. You're mad to think of anything else."

"Mad, am I? What do you know about him? How do you think he makes a profit out of my Nancy's five shillings a week?"

"Five! cried Catherine, and her hand fell helplessly from the older woman's sleeve.

"Five shillings, and not a penny more. And every house in that estate is priced the same, no more and no less. You never took the trouble to find out. You took it for granted that he was an ordinary jerry-building speculator, and that it didn't mean a thing to him who took his rotten houses, once they were up. Well, I've been there too, and I've seen for myself; yes, and asked questions where I wanted to know anything. They're good houses. I know what I'm talking about. They're good houses, and cheap. That's the law's done; and now you know what you've done to him."

Catherine stood with her hands clenched, and her breath racing between her lips. She said desperately: "It isn't true. He came to see me at the beginning; if it had been true he would have told me then."

But there was no need for anyone in the world to answer that protest, for she herself had already refuted it scornfully in her own heart. She knew so little of him; and yet it knew enough to be sure that he never had defended himself as he had never needed to long as they both lived. And she admired him for it, passionately, with a pride which was almost fear of herself. She longed to ask more, but no words would come.

Nor was Mrs. Garland the person to tell her what she needed to know, nor, in spite of her vision and enthusiasm, to understand fully what she had already told her.

"If you don't believe me," said Mrs. Garland simply, "go back to Court Brandon and ask for yourself."

"It's too late," said Catherine hopelessly.

"It isn't too late if you really want to undo what you've done."

"But why should I?" cried Catherine, in wild despair. "Why should I? It's been all I've lived for, and more than you'll ever know. It hasn't been easy to carry it to this end, and I won't undo it now, not for you or for anyone. Why should I?"

Mrs. Garland shrugged her thin shoulders. "That's for you to decide," she said, and turned on her heel uninterrupted now, and walked away, leaving Catherine standing with her back against a shop window, like Delsie miraculously remade into stone.

It was all too late to be real. It had not happened. Mrs. Garland was not in London; indeed, upon reflection, Mrs. Garland could not possibly be in London. Catherine's head ached. It was as if fate had taken it into its head to answer in one blow all the reasonless doubts which had been tormenting her, not only through these two nightmare days of litigation, but every day and every night since that ill-omened visit to Howard's Pleasance.

What had kindled them she could not tell even now, unless the truth was that she had always suspected the presence in Adam of the individualism and the fantastic, who could not and would not, find any interest in the building of cosy houses for profit. What was she to do now? After sitting stupefied for an answer, and remembered only Mrs. Garland's voice saying: "If you are distressed you go back to Court Brandon and ask for yourself."

She would go back; she would go back now, this very night, without saying a word to any of her friends, and she would see for herself, and ask for herself, and if all the praise which Mrs. Garland had lavished upon Adam Probert was not more than the truth—but there her heart faltered; for as yet she dared not look beyond the moment of discovery.

For that time being it was enough to have resolved to do what she had neglected to do at first. Somehow, when that good alive rage so strangely cold and listless, had shut closed her mind to all logic; to have all the facts secured before she made any further decision.

Catherine Retreats

She had not enough money in her purse to pay the fare to Stanchester, so she walked back quickly to the hotel, and changed her coat for a heavier one, and filling her bag and bags with the instincts of practicality which always emerge to the surface even now. She was stealing out of the hotel again when in the hall-porter's cage almost into Lyddon Strang's arms.

"Why, Catherine," he exclaimed, "I've been looking for you everywhere. Where on earth have you been?"

She felt no annoyance at his appearance; she feared no halt in her plans; fate was on her side now and nothing could harm her.

"Only for a walk. It was a lovely night, and I was tired of being indoors."

"But you're not going out again? Not alone?"

"Do you mind very much? I just ran into Mrs. Carey, and I promised to go back and spend the evening with her. The invitation was thin, but he could not openly doubt it. He had to relax his hands for a long moment, as if he felt some reluctance to release her even for one evening; and suddenly it seemed to her that she had mistaken his gesture and affection for her, that it was not merely so complacent as she had supposed, but that he only far more patient.

He had said nothing but her formal promise to marry him, and she had thought him content; but now it was as if he were removed from that self-satisfaction. He was only biding his time; it was the last citadel he wanted, the only sanctuary which was finally safe for ever out of his reach. She felt some pity for him in that moment. She pressed the hands she held. "I'm sorry! But just for this one evening—"

"If you're happy—" he said, and smiled. It did not occur to either of them how inappropriate the adjective was.

"Good bye, Lyddon!" said Catherine; and she raised her lips suddenly, and kissed his swiftly and briefly, and was gone. It was the first time that she had ever kissed him of her own free will.

She found time to telephone him from the station; only ten minutes had passed since they had been talking together, but to her they already seemed ten years.

"Lyddon," she said, when his voice answered her; and she heard hastily the sharply indrawn breath with which he recognised the voice. "Yes, it's Catherine. I'm here. I know I told you that; it was a lie. Oh, don't trouble about me, my dear; I'm not worth it, to you or to anyone. No; it's no use asking me what or why—not yet; but I shan't come back tonight, and you must carry on for me. Yes, for me. Good-bye."

In this emergency he asked no questions, none but the one sole question which mattered most to him at that moment.

"Catherine—are you all right?"

"Oh, yes, all right," she said. "Thank you for caring so much."

To this there was a long silence than he had ever heard it be answered by any human voice she had never sensed in his before."

"Catherine—I love you more than anything in the world."

"I know that now."

Strange that she should be able to say that, and stranger that it should be true. They were tears on each other at this moment with one sense to keep them from each other's remembrance, than ever they had been when his arms had been around her. She said: "Good-bye, Lyddon!" There was nothing else to say; and nothing else to do in the world between them, except to ring off and hurry to her train. She knew beyond all shadow of doubt, as she hung up the receiver, that there would be more such moments.

In the train she had a carriage to herself until the second before the train started; and then a smartly dressed young woman loaded with magazines and periodicals, and seen off by no fewer than three young men, leaped nimbly in beside her, and settled down to read, never both seats, and hung from the window to talk to the young men. The wells until her escorts were out of sight.

Catherine hated the idea of conversation, but it was inevitable; for the first time she felt that the world could have kept the girl amused without the three young men.

Presently she opened a desultory conversation. The young London shows, and when that had palled, passed to the news of the day. Catherine was dumb and still, listening imperfectly, her mind in a turmoil of thought, and suddenly it was no! to her companion's untiring questions.

She thought only, with a monotonous insistence, that that's over. What now?" And it was as if she had only just learned to doubt her own decisions. For once was willing to let her future drift on whatever current might carry her.

"Have you seen today's papers?" asked the girl in the opposite corner, rustling pages furiously. "There's a photograph of that man who's suing somebody over a hedge, or something. All the papers have described her as being very beautiful."

She looked up and laughed. "But then, they always do, don't they? But this girl really does look rather nice. Don't you think?" She leaned forward, and spread the paper between them: Catherine saw a photograph of herself, taken as she left court the previous day. It was not, fortunately, a very good picture of her face, but it had the distinction to set down to perfection. "She's not unlike you," said the latest girl, after deep consideration.

"It's the build," said Catherine, and thanked fortune that she had on different clothes.

"Him, I carery you're right. What do you think of that affair?"

"I don't know what to think yet," said Catherine, with passionate truthfulness. "What's your impression?"

The girl lit a cigarette, and regarded the photograph over the first curling smoke of it with impartial eyes. After a long silence she uttered, with the finality of an oracle:

"I think she wears clothes better than anyone I've ever seen. Look at that hat!"

It was the last and the irrevocable, verdict upon the curious case of Court vs. Probert. There could be no further pronouncement after that.

It seemed to Catherine singularly appropriate; and the girl said not another word on that subject until the train drew into Stanchester at seven minutes to ten.

CHAPTER XVI

"So Little Time"

At ten o'clock next morning Catherine Probert knocked at Mrs. Dunning's door.

She felt some reluctance, at the last moment, to go there at all; and she found herself as nervous as a schoolgirl as she stood waiting for the door to open. Mrs. Dunning was not the person to add anything to her distress; she had not her brother's fiery partisanship, nor the depth of her strength; and there was nothing beyond a start, and a slight flush, to trouble Catherine's heart when at length they stood looking at each other. Then she smiled. She was of a sanguine nature, and nothing could withhold her friendship from anyone living for very long. Nancy said:

"Oh, Mrs. Cousk I didn't know you were home again. (I thought —well—

"I know," said Catherine, bracing herself, for it was now painful to her even to hark back to the subject which was greatest in her mind. "You're right; the case is finished. But I have come back, because there's something I want to know. Nancy—I met your mother in London."

"Oh, yes," said Nancy, flushing again, and speaking deeply. "She's staying there with her married sister; they've got a flat near Paddington. Mother often goes, when she's feeling tired. She's never away. They'd like me to go often; but there, mother's that independent."

"And this time," said Catherine, warily smiling, but certain of herself as she was now of Mrs. Garland's gentility, "she went on my account—didn't she? Because of this case."

"Yes," admitted Nancy, "She was in court yesterday. She wrote me a letter."

"I can guess what she says in it. But what I want to know is, is it true what she says of me—and of Mr. Probert?"

Nancy hesitated for a moment, standing there slim and cool in her gay overall and her plain dark dress, swinging the doily in her hand. Then she stepped back and opened it wide. "Won't you come in, Mrs. Cousk? I'd like very much to talk."

"Thank you," said Catherine; "if you think as badly of me as she does, that's very generous of you."

"I don't, and neither does she think as bad as you imagine, only she feels it was wrong, and after all her being so happy and comfortable here. But I see that you mean better than she does, that's all. She's let you down, but you never see more than one thing at a time."

Nancy moved gently about the little living room; Catherine followed her in from the passage which ran clean through the little house, saw her at the garden at the colony. Nancy had escaped from the slums, not to carry them with her, but to shake them off for ever with all the more passionate care because she remembered them so keenly. The house, the room, the hearth, the peace of the windows, the baby who played solemnly in a pen in the warmest corner, all were spoiles and shining as with a consciousness of virtue.

The pale baby girl was not so pale now, in spite of the winter, and the long hours she had to spend indoors. She had a shining of colour in the cheeks which were growing so round and plump, and her little body was growing so clean that Catherine remembered it. So much, at any rate, Court Brandon had achieved; and if it accomplished nothing more, yet it had not been completely wasted.

But Catherine had eyes for other things in the room besides; now! for the sensible windows, with their large panes, admitting to the light and sun, and so easy to clean, not sash windows, but opening outwards for the low open grate, nicely calculated to supply the maximum of heat on the minimum of coal—for the glimpse of a neat, and not too minute, kitchenette, which she saw through the open door beyond. She could not, it was true, see much more, but the range of her vision did embrace the corner of a gas cooker.

She had passed up her way along the passage, the door of the sitting room, and on her former visit to this house she had been in that room, and knew how quietly satisfactory it was. On the whole, these were houses in which she would have guessed a woman had had a hand; at least they avoided most of the pitfalls which usually tripped men.

"This is really a very nice house," she said, half to herself, but aloud.

"It is," said Nancy. "There's three bedrooms, and a lovely bathroom, and the range in the kitchen heats the water; you'd be surprised how soon it gets hot, and it keeps hot all day. When Harry went after—like house, I mean—I said: 'Oh, what's the use? They'll be too much rent for us, and even if we could raise it, they'd never let us have a house with three bedrooms, for only the two of us and the baby.' But Harry said you never know, and he went, and the first thing they asked him—you'll never guess—was where he was living now. I mean, it wasn't as if they were council houses, or built for them clearances, or anything like that; but anyhow, we got it, and no trouble.

"It was about that I wanted to ask you," said Catherine. "Your mother told me what rent you were paying for this house. Is it true that they're all the same — really only five shillings? You see, I feel some interest; this case—"

"Yes," said Nancy, very quietly, and watching every movement of Catherine's face as if the conflict behind it shone clear through the brown eyes and calm brow, and showed itself in every glance she gave and about the warm little room.

"Yes, they're all the same."

"And all from—from the poor parts of Stanchester?"

"Not quite all, and besides, I don't think he'd like it if there must be some from parts I never saw in my life. But Queen's Bowling Green Road. And there's Ash Hills. I suppose, too; they're from quite near where we lived in the Pleasance, and there must be more of them, too, if I could only think of them."

"And, like your husband, these men still work in Stanchester, do they?"

"Yes. Doesn't it make it rather expensive, after all, when the train fare is added on?"

"They don't go by train, there's a bus."

"Oh, one of the Stanchester local cats?"

"No, it's an independent, so they say. It runs from the Greyhound every morning, and comes back at half-past five; so the men are home for tea. There's a bus every hour, the other one to be put on, because it's getting much for the one, now there are so many people moving out here."

"I see," said Catherine, and thirdly through this new detail, the sudden, startling possibility of an influence she knew, the words of Mrs. Garland: "But still you must cost quite a lot in bus fares, I should think."

NEWARK BEARS BACK IN FIGHT WITH TWIN WIN

Beat Rochester Twice to Ease Tension at Top of Loop

BISONS COMING

Buffalo is in Virtual Tie for Second Place by Win and Loss

(By The Associated Press)

It begins to appear possible the fears that have been shed over the plight of Newark's Bears irrigated the greenward in various International League ball parks a bit prematurely.

It's true the Bears still are in fifth place while Buffalo has come up to make it a three-way race with Jersey City and Rochester for the League lead. But Newark's strongest point in running away with the pennant the past two years was its ability to win doubleheaders.

The Bears swept their fifth consecutive Sunday doubleheader when they beat Rochester 9-2 and 10-2 yesterday after losing six straight games last week. They did everything just about right and the Red Wings' two-man mound staff of Mike Ryba and Ken Raffensberger couldn't cope with them.

The double defeat dropped the Red Wings into a virtual tie with Buffalo for second place, two games behind Jersey City, as the Jersey and the Bisons split their twin bill. The little Giants took the opener, 7-4, with a three-run rally in the eighth sparked by Bud Hafey's home run. Buffalo came back to win a 1-0 decision.

Deep in the second division, Baltimore's Orioles beat Montreal twice 7-3 and 9-4 to climb within a half game of the sixth place Royals, while Toronto scored with a single 6-4 victory over Syracuse.

Montreal pulled one victory out of the week-end campaign with a 7-2 victory over the Bears Saturday. Jersey City turned back the Maple Leafs 4-3 in 10 innings with a bargain bill while Baltimore edged out the Red Wings 12-11 in an 11 inning contest. Buffalo whipped Syracuse 7-4.

Joka Easily Wins "King" Rogers' Cup

Frank (Dube) Smith's fast craft, the Joka, came out of retirement yesterday to win the King George Cup for yachts of Class A and over, presented by the Belleville Yacht Club. The King George Cup trophy was presented to the Belleville Yacht Club by the late Wm. (King) Rogers to be raced for annually in A handicap race.

Yesterday's six sailing craft, three from the "A" and three from the "B" class faced the starter's gun. The Joka took an early lead with the "After You Jen" and Alaska following closely. An uncertain north west wind blew early in the race, freshened and the race progressed. The Joka won by 21 seconds over the second placed "After You Jen."

The results of the race and times of each craft were: Joka (F. Smith) 2.27.52; : After You Jen (M. Callaghan):38.52; Alaska (H. Semark) 2.29.05; : Whisper (W. Keller) 1.43.00; : After You 2nd (D. Blackburn) 1.42.36; Alanta (W. Hurst) 1.43.38.

BETTINA CONNECTS WITH CONN CHIN

Boston Bees and the Red Sox Are Making Life Miserable For Clubs in Both Leagues

Both Teams Win Twin Bills Over Cincinnati and Cleveland

SHORTSTOP HURT

Eddie Miller of Boston Bees Likely Out for Season With Broken Ankle

By BILL WHITE

Boston, cradle of the American revolution, now shelters two baseball clubs that are busy spreading revolutionary gestures toward everyone else in both leagues.

For instance the Bees swept through a doubleheader by 5-0 and 4-3 with the first-place Cincinnati Reds yesterday, though the victory had a bitter taste. They lost Eddie Miller, their shortstop, possibly for the season, when he broke a small bone in his left ankle in a collision with Al Simmons.

The two triumphs made it sixteen victories in 21 starts for the seventh place Bostonians and cut the Reds' down to a six-game margin over the field in the National League.

The Red Sox stormed Detroit for their eleventh and twelfth straight victories to stay just six games back of the Yanks in the American League. The scores were 9-2 and 3-0.

There were some other potworking performances on yesterday's program of doubleheaders to keep the Bosses from stealing all the glory.

Medwick Steals Home

In New York St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Giants 3-1 as Joe Medwick stole home with an important run. Over in Brooklyn the Dodgers and Cubs traded third and fourth place honors, Chicago won the first game 9-2. Then a nice relief job by Red Evans gave Brooklyn a decision.

The Phillies and Pirates split a twin bill 3-2 and 7-3.

Stirred perhaps by news of the championship record crowd, the season's largest crowd—63,064—turned out at Cleveland to see the Yankees trim the Indians twice, 5-2 and 8-3.

Chicago's White Sox copped the third place by downing the Senators, 5-3 and 6-3. After belting out a 13-7 opening decision over the Athletics, St. Louis Browns struggled twelve innings to a 5-3 tie before darkness stopped them. They tied it up in the ninth after the A's had led 5-0.

Saturday Games.

In Saturday's American League program the Red Sox defeated the Indians 8-7 and the Yankees downed Detroit 10-7. Chicago took the only victory of their three-game series with the Athletics 7-3 while the Browns gave Jeff Tesreau 11 starters.

In the National League Cincinnati downed the Giants 8-4 as Bucky Walters won his 6-2 over Pittsburh. Philadelphia took fourteen hits from Bill Lee and Charley Root for an 8-3 decision. The Bees whipped St. Louis 7-3.

DEAN BADLY CUT BUT ACCIDENT REAL MYSTERY

VIOLATES RULES

Gabby Hartnett Refuses to Discuss Situation With Writers

Chicago, July 17 (AP) — Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, $185,000 pitcher with Chicago Cubs, was rolling back to Chicago from New York today with his left arm, deeply gashed below the elbow, wrapped in a sling and considerable mystery attached to the situation.

Dean was ordered home by Gabby Hartnett, Cubs' manager, for violation of training rules. Hartnett refused to amplify his ruling.

Just what happened in New York, where the Cubs are staying while playing their series with Brooklyn, was not clear. Reports reaching Chicago, however, said Hartnett was informed at 12.30 a.m., yesterday that Dean was in distress in his hotel room. Hartnett found Dean lying on the bed, with his wife trying to stop the flow of blood from the gash. Two stitches were required to close the wound.

Hartnett refused to discuss the situation. One version circulating around the hotel lobby was that Dean fell through a glass counter case, and that Dizzy hadn't been keeping very closely to training rules Saturday night.

Giants Punished For "Run In" With Umpire Magerkurth

New York, July 17 (AP)—In place of the famous ex-house gang, the National League this year presents the "Coogan's bluff mob" as hard hitters and fighting ball players as ever wore the livery of New York Giants.

The spirit of John McGraw, who fought his clients to fight for ever hit, every out, lives in the team assembled in 1939 by his pupil Bill Terry.

When the Giants have to finish fists with a pitcher and a first baseman in the outfield and an outfielder on third base then play the next day with a patched up lineup because a regular was suspended for socking an umpire, you know they're fighting as the "Old Hoosiers" never did.

The Giants got themselves into that state during the week-end as the result of a battle Saturday that was the climax to numerous lesser affrays in the past few weeks.

Bill Jurges, New York shortstop, and Umpire George Magerkurth became embroiled during Saturday's clash between the Giants and Cincinnati Reds as the New York team protested violently on a decision by another umpire, Lee Ballanfant. The decision that started it all was that Harry Craft, Red outfielder had hit a home run. The Giants claimed it was foul.

Yesterday Ford Frick, National League president, plastered $150 fines and 10-day suspensions on both Jurges and Magerkurth. Harry Danning, the Giants' catcher, was fined $50 for pushing Ballanfant and Terry $50 for "failing to cooperate in handling the situation." He apparently didn't try to call his men off.

If you do any aqua-planing yourself you probably do it on a lake, or even if you only see pictures of it they're probably taken at a summer resort, but the party above, one Jack Burrud, is moving along in the shadow of the walls of the Grand Canyon, as he practices his art above the famed Boulder Dam, near Boulder City, Nevada. He was preparing for a big annual aquaplane event they hold in California every year.

Win Places Team in First-Place Tie With Danforth Aces

(By The Canadian Press)

The Stratford Nationals acquired their only defeat of the Senior Intercounty Baseball League season Saturday when they defeated Kitchener 4-2 at the Stratford. The league leaders, stopped only once this year, pounded two panther pitchers for 11 hits in recording their 11th victory.

Sparkplug of the attack, Jojo Kalmusky, Nats starry second baseman, extended his game-hitting streak to 16. He connected for three hits, two of which were doubles, in five trips to the plate.

Homer With Bases Loaded

Meanwhile the second-place Brantford squad kept the pace with a 12-5 thumping over Guelph Leafs at Guelph. Brants edged the Leafs 12-11 in the first game of a first-inning ugly spree which saw Guelph register nine runs. Brants collected seven hits, two of which were doubles, in five trips to the plate.

Homer With Bases Loaded

Waterloo Tigers reinforced their hold on third place when they edged out a 5-5 decision over Preston. Preston outhit Waterloo 11-8 but committed five errors against one for the visitors. In the other Senior Intercounty contest, the bottom-placed Woodstock Club defeated Galt 7-1.

Brights Still First

Top berth in the Niagara Senior circuit was retained by Niagara Falls' Brights who decisioned Merriton 4-3, although outhit 10-7. Each team scored two runs in the first inning and Merriton made it 3-2 in the sixth. Two runs in the eighth inning by the visitors gave the visitors the game.

In a pitcher's duel at Port Colborne, St. Catharines won a close 1-0 victory behind the one-hit pitching of Bradden. St. Catharines made one hit and scored the lone run in the ninth inning.

In the Senior Intercity group, Peterborough drew into a first-place tie with Danforth Aces with a 12-4 triumph over Webbers. Aces lost 2-1 to Port Credit. The other inter-city game ended with an 8-4 victory for Pindays over Parkdales.

BASEBALL'S $100,000 INFIELD RE-UNITED FOR GAME

These players may look a trifle old to be wearing baseball uniforms—and they are—but about 30 years ago when they trotted out together on major league diamonds, fans were looking at one of the game's greatest all-time infields. Connie Mack's famous $100,000 aggregation of the days when Philadelphia Athletics were kings in the American league. They lined up again recently when the American league old-timers played the National league veterans in a benefit game in Boston, a game the Nationals won, 8-4, reversing the procedure of a similar affair. The high-priced infield of yesteryear, long on the diagonal slope, reads, left to right: Stuffy McInnis, first base; Frank "Home Run" Baker, third base; Eddie Collins, second base; and Jack Barry, shortstop.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

Softball play-off time is rapidly approaching. In Belleville the softballers are confronted with two distinct lines of play-offs, that for the right to advance into the O.A.S.A. playdowns in the intermediate 'A' series and the city series, that has not been amicably settled for the past two season. It is sincerely hoped that 1939 will see a repetition of '37 and '38 in this latter respect. There is no reason why both play-offs cannot be conducted and in the sportsmanlike manner. Actually the O.A.S.A. playdowns should be completed in the near future only affect three of the City League's five clubs, Shell-Aqinas, Corbys A.C. and Dracup Tire.

The Citizens Dairy has a bye into the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns while Point Anne enjoy the same privilege in the intermediate 'C' series of the Provincial saw-offs.

By commencing the intermediate 'A' city play-offs to determine the club to represent Belleville in a best two in three series this week and giving either Shell or Corbys the club finishing first a bye into these finals, such a series would be completed in less than two weeks. Then the Softball league executive could commence the City League playoffs that embraces four of the present clubs. There would be no delay and bustle in either series even if the three local O.A.S.A. clubs in the playdowns were competing in these semi play-offs. The first City League play-offs could be sandwiched in between these Provincial series. In fact, in my attempts to include both play-offs in the same series have not exactly left a sweet taste in the mouths of either the fans or the clubs contesting, so let's see something a little different and more satisfactory than these clubs in 1938.

Lieut. Fred Johnson, who is better known as the leader of the band around these parts, has himself off to the New York World's Fair recently. The genial fiddler took in what sights could be enjoyed during a three day stay at Grover Whalen's extravaganza, including a heated-up "Aquacade" with all those alluring bathing beauties. (And who could blame him; after all, we only get to a world's fair maybe once in a lifetime.) However, that's not the point. Fred informs us he met and went swimming at Long Island, N.Y. with Johnnie Medica, 1936 Olympic swimming champion, who accepted Mr. Johnson's invitation to come to Belleville on his vacation. Johnnie Medica is now swimming coach in New York and it is hoped he will give some kind of a demonstration of his art while visiting in our midst. The rest is up to Mr. Johnson, we're suggesting.

Do you remember when Jimmy Wilde, one of the greatest "little men" the flatic profession has known, outpointed Pal Moore in a furious 20-round bout at London 20 years ago today to retain flyweight supremacy. The Welshman overcame a big lead with a great two-fisted display in late rounds to gain the unanimous verdict.

Frank Smith's Joka, coming out of voluntary retirement to defend its laurels, successfully walked off with the King George V Jubilee Cup, donated by the late W. (King) Rogers for a handicap sailing race to include all canvas craft on the bay. The race was run off yesterday with six starters. Duke Smith's Joka finished first from the barrier to the wire. The "A" class boats dominated the race, despite the fact good handicaps were given the smaller craft by the sailing committee of the Belleville Yacht Club, with whose hands the cup was placed for annual competition.

That race in the National League is surely getting the boys warm under the collar. The Giants lost two over the week-end; one to the Reds on Saturday, when the boys really got tough. Umpires, players, managers and most everybody got fined for participating in a free-for-all fight, which occurred around the home plate. About the only ones not to suffer were the fans, who got something additional for their price of admission and the Reds, who advanced a full game over the Giants Saturday and a half a game yesterday as the Cards beat the Giants. Incidentally the heavy money reductions went to Umpire Magerkurth and Player Jurges, of the Giants who were assessed $150.00 and suspended ten days. Even Skipper Bill Terry was not missed as President Ford Frick really cracked the whip. Terry was fined $500.00 for "failing to co-operate in handling the situation."

SPORT SPICE—Flying Officer "Cab" Carling — Kelly, former coach of the Trenton, R.C.A.F. hockey squad, has returned to the Trenton air base after several months at Camp Borden, we hear. ——The Pirates gave the Yehers a sound trouncing in their senior league loop, winning 12 to 4 on Saturday ——— The Pirates are knocking right at the league leadership door and should be right on top within the week.... 'Old Bit' Dean is up to his tricks of yore—Dizzy was sent home over the week-end and there was some talk of "breaking training rules."

"WHO HIT ME?"

Surprised? Well who wouldn't be? Sammy LaPorte was fighting Tommy Portie in Baltimore and was disqualified for persistent foul tactics, but on returning to his corner who should hand him a hefty wallop but one of the spectators! It's not so bad when your opponent hits you (or is it?) but when you're surrounded . . . ! ! ! Samuel wound up caressing his stool and wearing a bewildered look.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from a reliable druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is as pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

AT THE BELLE

"Union Pacific"

A star-packed cast topped by Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, the heroic story of the building of America's first transcontinental railroad and some of the biggest epic scenes Cecil B. DeMille has ever filmed combine to make C. B.'s newest offering "Union Pacific" one of the most impressive works of many a season. Paramount is now giving its first local showing at the Belle Theatre.

The two principals of the story, played to perfection by Miss Stanwyck and McCrea, are Mollie Monahan and Jeff Butler; she the high spoyous daughter of a "U.P." engineer and the mascot of the railroad-builders, he a handsome trouble-shooter sent out by Washington when trouble-makers threaten the construction of the road. Their whirlwind romance is keeping with the mad pace of the times in which it took place.

At the "end of track" the brawling town that moves ever westward, Jeff meet his biggest problem in Slim Campeau (Brian Donlevy), who has been hired to delay the building of the "U.P." by a Chicago financier who hopes to profit by selling the stock short. Campeau uses every means to carry out his plan: he operates a dance-hall and gambling-den at "end of track" to distract the workers, stirs up Indians to attack the railroad and even robs a pay-train at a crucial moment. His successive defeats at the hands of Jeff and his aides provide a thrilling struggle that lasts throughout the picture.

Jeff's romance with Mollie is complicated by Dick Allen (Richard Fresion), an adventurer in league with Campeau and in love with the girl. Although good natured Mollie even marries him to save his life at one point, his own folly carries him out of the way and finally clears the track for Jeff.

4 NATIVES KILLED

Simla, India, July 17—(AP)— Four natives were reported killed and several injured today when police fired on a deputation from Simla which attempted to enter the "forbidden" state of Dhami, 14 miles away. The deputation, had demanded full self-government for the state and other concessions within 24 hours.

"GOOD QUEEN BESS"

A triumph of the make-up man's art is Bette Davis, hailed widely as the outstanding screen actress in dramatic ability, seen here all ready to go before the cameras to portray Queen Elizabeth in a forthcoming production. The gown and jewelry worn by Miss Davis are all faithful copies of those that adorned "Good Queen Bess" in the days when her renowned seamen were spreading the Empire to all corners of the globe.

Ann Dvorak featured with Chester Morris in "Blind Alley," now playing at the Capitol Theatre with co-feature "Meet the Girls."

AT THE McCARTHY

"MEET THE GIRLS"
"BLIND ALLEY"

Daringly different—weirdly fascinating—at rare intervals a feature appears — from nowhere — which compels the attention to be seen by even those who seldom attend a movie. "Blind Alley" is such a picture that right now is sweeping the country and which is now playing at the McCarthy, direct from Loew's Theatre, Toronto.

"Blind Alley", is an extraordinary picture, bringing to the screen the biggest thrill of the year. That's a bold statement — but "Blind Alley", is a bold picture — saying nothing less than the fearless probing of the depths of a murderer's mind—a mind wherein only Blind Alley", is screen entertainment at its exciting best— for those who appreciate drama that braves new realms of realism.

Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Dvorak, Joan Perry, Melville Cooper and Rose Stradner, head the large cast of "Blind Alley" and their individual performances are second to none in any motion picture drama anyone has ever had the opportunity of seeing enacted and we most sincerely urge one and all who read this announcement to see this great thrill picture of 1939, "Blind Alley", while it is playing at the McCarthy Theatre. In addition, "Meet The Girls", an exciting comedy romance hit, with June Lang, Lynn Barri, Robert Allen, Ruth Donnelly and Gene Lockhart, (who is an old Belleville Boy and at one time a member of the Belleville Kilties Band) head the excellent cast of "Meet The Girls", which as a co-feature to "Blind Alley" brings to the McCarthy Theatre an outstanding program of entertainment.

Following the above, the McCarthy Theatre proudly announces the coming of "Clouds Over Europe" rated five stars by Roly Young in the Toronto Globe and Mail, as the biggest laugh sensation of the season.

ROYAL AIR FORCE SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

French to Make Mock Air Raid

British anti-aircraft guns were manned for a defensive drill in a mock raid by 100 French bombing planes, probably tomorrow.

The British Air Force, which made a 1,200-mile hop over French territory last week, awaited order officers for another and longer flight in a series of reciprocal manoeuvres to give mutual air attack and defence tests and to impress the axis powers.

"This new demonstrativeness of the democracies" said the Daily Herald (Labor), is "part of an effort to convince the German government that Munich is no longer a political possibility."

The newspaper said Britain's first policy is to deter Chancellor Hitler "to prevent a catastrophe, completely to avoid the gigantic agony of another war."

While adjournment of parliament is scheduled for the first week in August, the News Chronicle, (Liberal) was quick to urge that the watchdogs of commons" be kept in session until the critical summer months are past.

The history of Czecho-Slovakia might have been very different had Chamberlain been sitting with Hitler last summer instead of being called only when events had gone too far," the paper said. "Let there be no mistake this summer."

Hitler's Alliance In Fact

Warsaw, July 17—(AP)— The coming of General Sir Edmund Ironside, Inspector General of British overseas forces, for staff talks in Rumania and Poland is hailed here as a well-timed gesture which should convince Germany that the Anglo-Polish alliance exists in fact as well as by declaration.

The announcement of the Briton's visit said he was coming for "important conferences with Polish military leaders" on "co-ordination of military tactics by Britain and her Rumanian friends."

Paris, July 17—(AP)—An early trip to Poland, presumably today by General Maurice Gamelin, commander-in-chief of all France's armed forces, to discuss Franco-Polish military cooperation in case of emergency.

A French military mission headed by General Charles Huntziger, Commander of French troops in Syria, arrived at Ankara, today to conduct staff talks with Turkish army heads.

An announcement here said 100 French bombers would make a practice flight over England tomorrow or Wednesday, depending on weather conditions.

SIGHTED BY PLANE, STRANDED PAIR RESCUED FROM LAKE ONTARIO

Adrift and helpless in a motor-boat on a rough Lake Ontario, Melville Smith and his fiancee, Marjorie Johnston, above LEFT, were rescued by an airplane chartered for the purpose, which sighted the boat, a tiny speck on the water and signalled with a waved white towel on sighting the plane. The couple had set out from Toronto for Frenchman's Bay, to be rescued the next day about 15 miles from their destination. They are also being shown taken aboard the life-saving boat that was rushed to the scene when the discovery of their whereabouts was made known by radio from the rescue plane.

Emergency Relief

By KATHLEEN SUTTON

"Well, but I couldn't help it. I ran into him as I was coming out of the office—not my office, but the building. He was just coming up, don't you see? And I'd asked him last time he was in town, to come home to dinner with me the next time he came, and he was expecting to, and what could I do? There wasn't a chance to telephone."

Jimmy Doane was rubbing his face vigorously with a Turkish towel as he explained to his flustered wife why he had landed home with one of his old college friends from Chicago unexpectedly for dinner.

When Jane and Jimmy had married two years before, she had proudly boasted that she would always have a dinner to which Jimmy could invite his friends.

And Jane always did have a good dinner ready—but, to Jane, was the disheartening part of it.

On the other hand, Jimmy had always contrived to telephone a warning to Jane—nice, thoughtful, Jimmy, thought Jane, as she stood looking at him, really at her wit's end.

Tonight was the exception for both of them. Jimmy hadn't telephoned; Jane, detained late at emergency relief headquarters where she had been helping as she did twice a week, listening to tales of want and hardship, had thought dinner at a restaurant would just rest her up. And she hadn't even done the marketing.

"Jimmy, it's just that there isn't a thing in the house. I'm so ashamed. It isn't your fault—"

"It isn't yours, either. Let's just tell Bob about it and we'll go to a restaurant for dinner."

"No!" said Jane, "I'd be falling down on my job. And I won't do that. We'll have—well, bacon and eggs. You just wait—give me forty minutes—" and she dashed ahead of Jimmy down to the living room.

"Well, Bob," she said to their guest, "you'll just have to take pot luck with us tonight, and the pot isn't very full."

She smiled as only Jane could.

"Light a fire, Jimmy—you see, I've just come in, all afternoon working for my country."

She smiled again as Jimmy struck a match to the fire laid on the hearth, and Bob settled down contentedly in a comfortable chair with a cigarette.

Then the doorbell rang—and Jimmy opened the door.

"Oh, hello, Jimmy!"

Betty Sinclair came into the door —one of Jane's most attractive friends, Jimmy thought.

"You and Jane ready?"

"Ready?" Jimmy looked surprised. "Ready?"

"Well—for dinner, I don't like to force myself, but Jane asked me."

They stood there, at the living room door, looking at each other.

"Oh," came Jane's gay voice, "You there, Betty? Come on in and be introduced—Jimmy's brought a man for you—and then take off your coat and come on out and put on an apron and help me get dinner."

And Jane rushed off to the kitchen.

Five minutes later Jane explained to Betty as she took stock of a depleted larder.

"You see, Betty, I'm not as crazy as I seem. I know I told you at emergency that we'd take us both to dinner. I hadn't got around to telling Jimmy, and in the meantime he's brought home that darned man —and I've got to get some sort of dinner together and you've got to help me."

Betty put on one of Jane's aprons.

"But Jane, I know him—a little. Met him in the mountains last summer. He's nice. What are we going to have?"

"I don't know," said Jane. "Breakfast, I guess. There's cream, and lots of bacon and plenty of eggs. Oh, and some cold cuts and ends. Bacon, anyway."

And Jane began to undo a fresh package.

"And waffles," said Betty. "I make swell waffles. It's the one thing I can do."

"And there's a can of cute little sausages," said Jane. "And we could have a good vegetable salad, if I do say it. Betty I can make a good salad out of anything. My salads always make a hit. And there's some good cheese."

"And lots of coffee, in big cups, with cream. Here, I'll get busy with the waffles—make them on the table. Come on, it's going to be fun."

Half an hour later, Jane called the two men to dinner.

The table was charming—Jane's prettiest linen and china, half a dozen candles in all the room was really light. And Betty hovering devotedly over the hot waffle iron, with four crisp waffles already on a plate to be passed.

"Maybe I'm conceited," said Bob, later, as he ate the last crumb of his last waffle, and turned his attention to a real masterpiece in the way of a left-over vegetable salad, "but this is a mighty good dinner."

"Betty's dinner," said Jane glibly. "She made the waffles."

"This salad—oh, this salad," said Bob. "A man would commit murder for this salad."

Betty made the dressing," said Jane.

She was happy again.

She hadn't failed Jimmy, and that was all she cared for. Anyway, she had told Betty to hear the dressing after she had measured it.

"I think," said Bob, a few minutes later, as he poured cream into his third cup of coffee—"I think," said Bob, "that Betty's a born cook."

He looked approvingly through the candlelight at the girl opposite him.

"I thought last summer she only knew how to dance and swim and play tennis and ride and look nice and a few unimportant things like that."

Betty started to speak, but Jane kicked her under the table.

As a matter of fact, Betty often lamented, in what Jane thought a rather boasting utility way, that she couldn't cook. Except waffles. She'd learned to make waffles from an old southern cook, just for fun. Why didn't she learn? thought Jane.

"Jane," said Jane, meaningfully, "Betty made the coffee."

She had measured out the water and coffee, under Jane's direction, and put them in the percolator and put it on the fire. Betty is a swell cook. She's noted for it."

"Do you suppose," said Bob, passing his cup across the table, although the percolator stood at Jane's right, "that I'd die if I had another cup of Betty's coffee."

As Betty and Bob sat by the fire after dinner—Jane and Jimmy had insisted that they'd clear up by themselves in a jiffy.

"I hoped you all wrong last summer," he said. "Thought you were one of those good-time girls. You were great, you know—but a man never knows a girl till he sees her like this."

He turned dangerously adoring eyes on Betty.

"You know—I'm not rich, and I've a good many responsibilities—but at that, the reason I was going to stay over in town tonight was so I could look you up tomorrow."

"Excuse me," said a flushed and lovely Betty, and dashed to the kitchen.

"Jim," she said excitedly, "go into the living room and entertain Bob. I've got to talk to Betty—about, oh, about emergency relief."

And then, as Jim obligingly dried his hands and hurried into the living room, Betty plunged her pretty smooth brown hands into the soapy water.

"Jane, how soon could you teach me to be a good cook?" she said.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The July meeting of Carmel W.M.S. was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Wallace Simmons, with a good attendance of members and several visitors present. The meeting opened with gospel music and the devotional, after which Mrs. Seldon Homan conducted the worship service. Mrs. Blake Pitman then took charge of the program which consisted of readings by Miss Irene Haynes and Miss Mildred Jones, also a temperance reading by Mrs. Moorman, "Sixteen Reasons why American Youth Should Not Drink." Miss Ruth Brintnell favored with an instrumental solo. Mrs. Percy Reynolds gave the chapter of the Study Book.

Mrs. Ruth Brintnell and Miss Beverley Roberts sang a duet. Mrs. Armstrong closed the meeting with prayer after which the hostess served a delicious lunch and a social time was spent together.

A departure from the classic traditional wedding frock is permitted for a garden wedding. One bride has chosen organdie in a faint blush pink with matching lace ruffled and applied to form a wide plaid design. Bodice is draped, and has a round low neckline.

Packers to Discard Live Grading Plan

Toronto, July 17—(CP)— Ontario meat packers have decided to base prices on and after July 24 on dressed weights and grades only, discarding the live grading system. The announcement is made by the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers and Wholesale Provision Dealers. Details of the hog industry is urged.

The system of dressed grading was put forth by the joint swine committee of Canada in 1931 when it recommended that the Dominion Department of Agriculture should investigate the feasibility and practicality of grading hogs dressed on the block. In 1934 the hog grading regulations were drawn up so as to make the grading of dressed hogs the basis for paying grades and the sale on dressed weights and grades as part of the system of trading in hogs.

From 1934 to the present trading on dressed weights and also grades has developed along side of trading in live weights and grades. The test has shown, according to Council of Packers, that rail grading is more accurate and generally superior to live grading. At present about 96 per cent of all hogs slaughtered at inspected plants in Ontario are rail graded.

GRASS FIRES KEEP BRIGADE ON RUN

Three Successfully Reduced Before Any Property Damage Resulted

A mild epidemic of grass fires that struck in various parts of the city gave city firemen a busy weekend. The blazes, three in all, were successfully reduced before any property damage was done, although the most serious one that started on Coleman Plain threatened Rosehill and Coleman, where danger existed averted by the prompt action of women residents of the vicinity.

Firemen had just returned from the Coleman Plain blaze when fire broke out in a grassy area on the corner of Dundas and James Street near the C.P.R. tracks. Flames burned grass for many acres before they were reduced by fire squads.

Shortly after nine o'clock Saturday morning, fire broke out in the long dry grass that covers a vacant area on the Swift Canadian plant on Centeiere Street, but prompt damage was done and fire squads reported the blaze extinguished.

A well-meaning service station attendant's politeness almost set fire over the roofs of houses on Dundas and Foster Avenue pushed in an alarm a few minutes after five o'clock yesterday morning. Fire crews and apparatus rushed to the scene to find that the smoke was coming from the chimney of an early morning riser's house, and no fire was apparent.

Ruling Given Miss M. E. Foster Not Eligible for High Honors

Bisley Camp, England, July 17—(CP Cable)—The King's medal for the best shot in the Territorial Army has been taken away from Miss M. E. Foster, the only woman who ever won the coveted King's prize at the Empire meeting of the National Rifle Association here.

At conclusion of this year's big shoot Saturday Miss Foster was announced winner of the medal.

At the close of the N.R.A. meeting it was discovered that instead Miss Foster had scored a walkover in the King's medal as the highest shot in Class "A" in the King's hundred, the finalists in the King's prize, was Lieutenant-Colonel D.M.W. Richards of the Queen's Royal Regiment, who won the first prize. Owing to cancellation of the army meeting this year the King's medal was awarded to Miss Foster with the King's prize.

Miss Foster finished the King's prize with a score of 278 to win the N.R.A. badge and $250. She was four pounds behind the winner, Capt. T. S. Smith, formerly of the 5th Staffordshire.

Tribute Is Paid To Fathers of Confederation

Mrs. Lord Who Attended Conferences Unveils Plaque

Charlottetown, July 17 (CP)—In the first of the ceremonies during the seven tablets commemorating the Fathers of Confederation and Confederation were unveiled here today as distinguished speakers did honor to the eastern province's contribute to the men who "builded better than they knew."

Premier Thane A. Campbell of the island province was in the chair at the week-long celebration of the 75th anniversary of the historic meeting in Charlottetown. He was master of ceremonies while an address of welcome was delivered by Lieutenant-Governor George A. Deblois.

Tribute to the Confederation Fathers was paid by Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia; Premier A. A. Dysart of New Brunswick; Premier Duplessis, Quebec Minister of Mines and Fisheries; Hon. Colin Campbell, Ontario Minister of Education; Hon. W. D. Euler, C.M.G., Dominion Minister of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, and Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Dominion Minister of Pensions and National Health.

Among those who unveiled plaques was 94-year-old Mrs. Artemus Lord of South, P.E.I., daughter of Colonel John Hamilton Gray. Mrs. Lord attended two conferences in the city of Charlottetown and the other at Quebec in 1864.

General theme of the addresses, broadcast over a nation-wide hookup, centred on the foresight of the men who gathered in Charlottetown "when the nation was in the throes of creation". It was noted Canada was the first of the British Empire colonies to form a nation under one central government. Reference also was made to the historic conference held in the city just seventy-five years and how the Dominion had become a power in the world of commerce.

Premier Macdonald noted how in Canada two races had come to live in different language and a different culture, the French and English, were welded under a common crown and life altogether.

"While, perhaps, the rosiest dreams of those Fathers of Confederation in the Province House conference cannot but be impressed by their conception of a nation," he continued.

The greatest monument to the memory of the Fathers of Confederation, said Mr. Campbell, was Canada itself—"a monument which will grow more as the years go by."

Representing the federal government, Mr. Crerar said Canada must endeavor to maintain its traditions of liberty.

"Ours as are the strides we have made in commerce and industry, we must not overlook intellectual things."

JAPANESE REFUSE TO TREAT ISSUE AS LOCAL PROBLEM

Tientsin Dispute Near Deadlock as Japan Takes Firm Attitude

PARLEY POSTPONED

Tokyo, July 17 (AP)—Pending the next British-Japanese talk on the Tientsin dispute here set for Wednesday, informed quarters were pessimistic today over the outcome of the conference.

A meeting between Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, scheduled for today, was postponed to allow for London's reply to Sir Robert's report on the opening discussion Saturday.

The British and Japanese positions are so completely at variance that there is no room for discussion at present, it was said by persons acquainted with the report on the Saturday conversations.

These sources added that the Japanese have no desire to recede in their demands for a British about-face on policy in China.

Japan's refusal to limit the discussion to local issues is a major disappointment. The Japanese wish to discuss British "anti-Japanism" throughout not merely the immediate issues at Tientsin which include a British refusal to surrender four Chinese accused of terrorism and a retaliatory Japanese blockade of the British concession.

Anti-British feeling among the Japanese people, which reached a new height last Friday with a mass demonstration before the British Embassy, is being fanned. It was learned, by a number of letters from soldiers at the front telling of so-called British interference.

Next Friday Emperor Hirohito will review the army of occupy on Japan's southern coast. It was not known how many army units would participate but the Emperor will remain aboard the battleship Nagato for eight hours for a review.

Polish Attitude Calm

Polish circles said that British viewpoint by adopting a moderate and calm attitude, with the Polish press commenting that it is said Warsaw always is ready to negotiate, whereas Germany continues with regard to German transit through the corridor that Poland is prepared to discuss the question of improvement in German communications through Poland, but would bar concessions lessening in any way Poland's sovereignty over the corridor.

In the Danzig issue, Poland likewise is prepared to discuss any technical or other reform which would ameliorate Polish-German relations and further collaboration indispensable for the common good of the city and Poland.

Volcanoes in 'Valley of Hell' Provide Electric Power for Italy

Lardarello, Italy, July 18—(AP)— In the Valley of Hell near here volcanoes are providing electric power for Italy.

Fascists assert with pride that only in Italy is volcanic vapor harnessed for conversion into electric power, a project that is part of Premier Mussolini's campaign to make Italy economically self-sufficient.

Production has been increased this year and eight turbine plants now turn out 2,200,000 kilowatt hours of electricity a month. Furnishing power for the electrified Pisa-Rome railway line and light and power for several towns.

The use of this steam was Italy from importing about 500 tons of coal a month.

Southern Tuscany always has been famous for the eruptive cones in its limestone mountains and for geysers of volcanic water vapor. The Valley of Hell—Valle Dell'inferno—at the side of Mount Cerboli, is its particularly hot spot.

The sub-soil has volcanic heat and water, which produces steam. All it gushes forth a residue of boric acid and other chemicals is left behind. It has been turned to commercial use for a long time, but only recently has this steam been used.

Wells have been drilled, some of them 1,000 feet deep. Just before the level of steam is reached the water-steam mixture waits for the blow-up.

Rocks, mud, lava and steam sometimes shoot 1,000 feet into the air, wrecking the drilling equipment.

"Well is allowed to "clean itself out" for a few weeks, and then is capped when its steam is gushing freely.

There are 286 wells in the Valley of Hell supplying pipelines to power plants of the vicinity.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Dominion Meteorologist

Millibars! The familiar weather map publicly displayed and so necessary to the forecaster is now pervaded by millibars. Words of Greek origin millibars (three drawn through points of the same pressure) are still there. Their values both on the United States and Canadian weather maps are now expressed in millibars and not in inches. Since air pressure is a force, it should be expressed in units of force, and so the millibar was chosen. One thousand millibars equal 29.53 inches or the universal barometer under standard conditions. The isobars are drawn as usual and show the location of the "lows" and "highs" no matter in what units expressed.

HITLER MAY ORDER DANZIG TO NAME HIM PRESIDENT

German Spokesman is Hopeful Danzig Will be Recovered

LEGAL STRUGGLE

Denial Given by Spokesman of Any Negotiations With England

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, July 18—(AP)—A German government spokesman said today Germany officials believe the Danzig question is "steering in the direction of a peaceable solution."

"We are very optimistic," he declared, but he would not disclose on what the optimism was based.

No solution' you can mean only the incorporation of Danzig in the Reich," one correspondent observed.

"Your position on this question and our intentions are so well known that further restatement is unnecessary," was the official spokesman's rejoinder.

(Chancellor Hitler declared on April 28 that Danzig was a German city and gave notice of his demand on Poland—the other power chiefly interested—that Danzig return to the Reich as a Free City.)

The spokesman's attention next was called to rumors that Hitler might be declared the Chief of State of Danzig.

FASCISTS JUMP THRU FIERY HOOPS

Today is First of Four Days of Athletic Exhibitions for Italians

Rome, July 18—(AP)— Premier Mussolini's Fascist party leaders assembled from all over Italy today to jump through flaming hoops and otherwise prove their athletic fitness to serve as examples to Italian youth.

From party secretary Achille Starace down to federal secretaries from the remotest provinces they were ordered to participate in four days of athletic exhibitions.

The idea was tried last year to spur the older men to keep down paunchy fit. It caught on and now is an annual affair.

The most exciting stunts last year were those of jumping through flaming hoops and over a hedge of bayonets. One man burned himself and another was struck with a bayonet.

The party leaders must meet daily at 6:30 a.m. and ride horses to the place of their trial. Once again during the day they must ride. Failure to cover the day a quarter of horseback riding.

The four-day program began today with rifle and pistol shooting and jumping hurdles. Wednesday the men are to bicycle; Thursday they ride horses, and Friday they do jumping and truck driving.

No European War in '39 Involving Britain Forecast by Express

British Slogan Should be 'We Are Prepared' Says Major Bartlett — Wheat Hits Lowest Record at 50 Cents

London, July 18—(CP)—A calmer view of the international situation was reflected today in British circles and there was one outspoken forecast that "there will be no European war involving Britain this year."

Wheat, a prime war commodity whose price rises frequently with mounting fear of war, fell to three shillings, seven and three-eighths pence—the lowest record price since 1932—about 50 cents a bushel.

Major Vernon Bartlett, Independent, expressed somewhat that attitude in the House of Commons when with question yesterday in the House of Commons—whether the British slogan, "we must be prepared" might not now be changed to "we are prepared" in view of the "satisfactory state of our present armament."

'Freed of Response'—Andersen

Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal and Minister of Civilian Defence, answered "we are proud of the response which has already been made to the call to national service" but "the time has not yet come when our efforts can be relaxed."

Under a front-page headline, "peace" and in its editorial columns Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express recalled its prediction during last year's crisis that there would be no war, asserting: "There was no war last year and there will be no European war involving Britain this year either."

The agreement between Reichsmarshal Hitler and Premier Mussolini on Italianization of the Italian Tyrol, with the Germanic inhabitants permitted to move into Germany, led the Times of London to comment:

"This proves beyond question the opportunist character of Hitler's policy in regard to German minorities.

"If he desires a political settlement then he is quite willing to dispense with the much vaunted right of self determination just as it suits him to repudiate it altogether when it happens to operate in favor of another race."

Lloyd George Side of Story

On the tension side of the ledger the news from the City of Danzig that 40 military supply trucks had been secretly concealed, were driven in from adjoining East Prussia last night.

The Danzig reached Danzig shortly before the homecoming of the Nazi district leader, Albert Forster, fresh from conferences with Hitler. Forster would not comment on reports he had brought back a "definite plan" for reunion of the Free City with Germany.

LABOR MINISTER PLACES BLAME ON QUEBEC GOV'T

Dominion Gov't. Denies Responsibility for Closing Down of Quebec's Works Projects

STATEMENT GIVEN

Ottawa, July 18—(CP)—The Dominion Department of Labor issued a statement last night under authority of Labor Minister Mitchell declaring the Quebec government has no right to full credit for the Dominion government assistance for unemployment works and denying responsibility for closing down of Quebec's works projects as announced recently by Hon. William Tremblay, Provincial Labor Minister.

The statement follows.

"The action of the Hon. William Tremblay in closing down provincial works projects is due not to any failure on the part of the Dominion government to co-operate with the Provincial government, but rather to failure of Mr. Tremblay to avail himself of the increased assistance which has been offered by the Dominion government.

"In April last the Province of Quebec received by way of financial assistance $4,800,000. This generous amount will be in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 (in addition to $18,000,000 to be spent in the province for

Ottawa, July 18—(CP)—Mail from Ottawa and Montreal for delivery delivered in London in six to eight days, varying according to the ship, Post Office officials here said today in comment on complaints in the Ottawa Journal that Canadian mails sometimes took 11 to 15 days from Toronto to London.

Trenton, July 18—(Special)— Baby Gerald Vardy, eighteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Vardy, 159 Queen Street, was killed Monday afternoon when the rear wheel of a truck driven by Thomas Scalette, 20, Trenton, passed over the child's head, the fatedy occurring in sight of the child's father, and two other witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Deuelte, residing across the street.

The truck, driven by employed by Clifford Gunter, was delivering a load of coal and wood to the home next the Vardy residence. He had backed the truck into the driveway and had his motor running. JAPANESE TAKE A GRAVE VIEW OVER SITUATION

Spasmodic Fighting on Mongolian Border Has Japanese Worrying

CABINET MEETS

Best Japanese Troops Are Assembled Near the Soviet Border

Tokyo, July 18—(AP)—A full report of recent Soviet air raids on rail centres in Japanese-protected Manchoukuo was laid before the emergency meeting of five key cabinet members today.

The government apparently was taking a grave view of the situation which grew out of spasmodic fighting for the last two months along the border of Manchoukuo and Soviet-protected Outer Mongolia.

It was learned authoritatively War Minister Seishiro Itagaki requested the emergency session when a full report regarding Khalkhin Hiramura today before the regular cabinet conference. The request was granted and Itagaki made a full report to the Premier and the Ministers of Finance, Navy and Foreign Affairs.

Serious Situation

By Russell Brines

Canadian Press Foreign Staff

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 18—(AP)—Border fighting between Mongolian and Manchoukuoan forces developed today into a situation which Japanese officials described as extremely serious.

One authoritative source said the next two days would determine whether Soviet Russia will take flame into the most extensive thus far. It has been continuing sporadically since May 11.

Officials were awaiting a formal reply from Soviet-supported Mongolia to a protest against Soviet air forays into the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchoukuo before determining their course.

Protest Raids

The Manchoukuo protest was against a raid on Puronuji, about 100 miles from the Outer Mongolian border. The protest threatened reprisals unless Soviet bombers left Siberian base of Blagoveschensk and was followed by a Soviet aerial attack on the railway centre of Halunarshan.

Bombardment of Halunarshan, the authoritative source said, apparently was designed to disrupt the Nonni River bridge and Halunarshan station, thereby cutting Japanese communication and preventing transportation of reinforcements to the front. Japan's air force offensive, or they were attempting to bombard the bridge to prevent Japanese, he declared, are trying to keep it localized.

The Manchoukuan pictured events as leading, possibly to a second Russian-Japanese war, in which the advantage would lie with Japan if it started now before the Soviet Japanese troops are assembled near the Soviet border whereas Soviet troops there have ample reserves.

Considered Unsafe

Japanese regard the border between Manchoukuo and Soviet-dominated Outer Mongolia as unsafe as long as Soviet troops and air positions on the west bank of the Khalka River. This bank is some 200 feet higher than the eastern shore and Japanese feel they may have to cross it in the event their fence if new fighting develops. The major front in any new fighting, it is understood, would be around Halunarshan, along the southern part of the boundary.

Chief-to-be, Supposed to be Fasting In Woods, Plays Baseball

Pontiac, Mich., July 18—(CP)— White man's customs nearly broke the ceremonial fast of 15-year-old Carl Mattison as chief of the Pontiac tribe of Chippewas but finally ended the inauguration of the 15-year-old members were expected to attend the ceremony, only 40 made their way through the throng of watching whites.

Mattison, now Chief Standing Bear, was supposed to have been out in the woods for three days fasting and then to be resting in a wigwam today, Carl "crossed up" tradition by playing baseball the day before his inauguration and then sneaking out to look at a pony.

The party was again near disruption when it was discovered the ceremonial tobacco for the pipe of peace had been forgotten. Maybe the Indians down Oklahoma way are modernists for Chief Big Wing from that section quickly broke up two cigarettes for the cow and started it around.

San Francisco, July 18—(AP)— The Marine Exchange said today 209 of 212 persons reported aboard the Japanese freighter Bokuyo Maru were rescued shortly before the ship sank in flames 1,125 miles east of Yokohama.

Earlier reports had placed only 110 aboard the 8,618-ton vessel.

Position of the 8,619 ton freighter when an 1126 miles due east of Yokohama.

The Maritime Department said the persons unaccounted for included a junior engineer and a steward, whose names were not known here.

The tanker which picked up the survivors left Honolulu July 3 and was en route to Manila.

Tokyo, July 18—(AP)—The United States tanker Associated radioed tonight she had rescued the 8,618-ton Japanese liner Bokuyo Maru, afire 1,125 miles east of Yokohama, and steamship company officials expressed hope for the rescue of all aboard. They said crew and passengers totalled 214.

The brief message received here from the Associated, 8,400-ton vessel owned by the Tide Water Associated Oil Company, gave no details of rescue operations. Four Japanese vessels are hurrying to the scene.

'Nearest Death' When Speedboat Hurtles Over Stalled Motorboat

Beaumaris, Ont., July 18—(CP)— Percy Budd of Milford Bay said today he has no explanation of a speedboat he came closest to death. It was just recently when a speedboat roared right over Budd's stalled motorboat at 30 miles an hour.

"Before I could make a move it was on top of me," Budd said. "It just bore down and zoomed right over and landed on the other side. It took the propeller right part of each 'im here today."

Budd said the driver of the speedboat, a Toronto resident, towed him back to shore and explained he thought the motorboat ahead of him was a rowboat.

British Bombers Can Fly to Moscow And Return

London, July 18—(CP)—An unusual flight of 30 twin-motored bombing planes in formations high over the heart of London drew crowds today at lunchtime.

It was ascertained the squadron was made up of Vickers-Wellington planes, potentially capable of carrying bombs as far as Moscow and returning. They were engaged in a training exercise.

The exercise was understood to be part of Britain's "we are prepared" attitude for training squadrons to show themselves to England's millions.

Three In Boat Drift All Night

Port Rowan, Ont., July 18—(CP) Three Oakwin men, James Bassett and Lionel Paquette of Woodstock and Collins of Port Burwell, were recovering today from the effects of a night spent drifting about in a motor launch on Long Point Bay on Lake Erie.

The three were on their way from Port Burwell to their cottage at Long Point Beach when the motor launch stalled. Unable to start all night until the launch landed near Turkey Point, north end of Long Point.

Bassett suffered a heart seizure shortly before they were discovered and received medical attention from Dr. D. A. Archibald. All are said to be doing well today.

STOCKS ADVANCE $1 TO $4 SHARE

Expanding Gains in Markets Except in Wheat Which Breaks to New Low 49¾

New York, July 18 (AP)—A sudden mid-summer upswing in security markets kept Wall Street quotation tickers busy today recording additional gains of $1 to $4 a share in many outstanding stocks.

The upward spurt paused a bit for breath after heavy early dealings, then went ahead again. The advance continued yesterday's abrupt upturn, the widest in more than a year.

Expanding previous gains were such shares as U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Johns Manville and Sears Roebuck.

Supporting sentiment on the buying side. It was pointed out, were favorable statements of improvement in profits in the three months ended with June.

Wheat At Record Low.

Liverpool, July 18 (AP) — Wheat prices hitherto unknown in the world's record low equivalent to 49¾ cents a bushel for July deliveries. The price was one cent lower than the close in yesterday's break.

October and December deliveries closed at 53¾ and 55¾ cents a bushel respectively.

New wheat has been pouring into the market already glutted with the huge world surplus and commercial millers have turned to make purchases in view of a possibility of even lower prices to come.

The market broke through the British lows of 1931 last week and has been slipping ever since.

IRONSIDE MEETS POLISH LEADERS

The Polish press displayed new confidence in the visit of General Ironside, who flew here from England yesterday, would have a "decisive influence" on the situation by serving as a new warning to Germany.

To prove the productiveness of the bush and lakes of North Hastings, two local youths, Harry Stockledge and William Harry returned to the city yesterday after a brief visit to Bancroft's section with their cars carrying well stocked creels of bass and lake trout taken from lakes of Bancroft's vicinity, and several gallons of huckleberries picked near the Coe Hill "flats". Colored burgees of the National Yacht Club and the Belleville Canoe Yacht Club fluttering from fore trunk and top mast, the fine sailing yachts, which entered port at the government dock last evening, and one high class powered private yacht attracted dozens of boat minded residents to the dock and water front last evening.

While the craft tugged at their mooring ropes the fine sailing swells, crews of the "Rise Moon" and the "El Venice", the two sailing yachts visited the city on an inspection tour. The power yacht of the Toronto line, the "Thalassa" of Toronto, was snugged and battened fore and aft with exception of only a solitary deck hand on guard.

PASTURES IN DISTRICT ARE BURNING UP

Pastures are burning up and milk production is dropping off, according to the local office of the Dominion dairy products. The office today noted that conditions for milk production at the present time were much better than in Peterborough and Lindsay areas than in the Belleville and district. Nevertheless, more rain has fallen in the northcentral and Lindsay section and the drought and barrenness of pastures are not so marked in these localities. However, the present conditions generally has not meant any considerable curtailment of milk production, but rains may yet save the situation, it was believed.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE IS BEING RE-ROOFED

Work of reroofing the Collegiate Institute is well advanced and it is estimated that about one-third of the new covering has been placed on the building up to the present. Total cost of the new roof has been set at $3,300 by the Board of Education under whose authority the work is being carried out.

SAILING BOOM WITH ALL TRIMMINGS FOUND

A sixteen-foot boom, complete with brass trimmings was found on the shores of the Bay of Quinte on Saturday morning by William Brown, a farmer residing near Read nerville.

The boom, thought to have been thrown from a large sailing vessel that anchored in a cove near Brown's property to shelter from the weather, was found high on the stony beach.

Early Friday evening, Brown said today, the vessel dropped anchor in the cove. A stiff wind was blowing, and later in the evening the breeze reached gale-like proportions. However, the next morning the vessel had disappeared, Brown discovered the boom, while driving home his cattle for the morning milking.

Near midnight Friday, people who said they had anchored for the night secured automobile passage from Redneersville to Belleville, but it is not known whether they were the party on board the sailing vessel that anchored in Brown's cove or not.

FLAMES RACE OVER COLEMAN FLATS

For the second time in three days fire swept over the Coleman Flats yesterday afternoon, when part of the old quarry the flames raced rapidly through dried grass on the flats, that was not burned on Saturday.

In an effort to remove further menace of fire, fire squads started backfires, burning off a strip of the dry grass in that region near Harvest Street, they were forced to extinguish the blaze however, when the flames swept dangerously near houses that border the southwest corner of the flats.

SWAMPY MARSHLAND NOW NEARLY CLEARED

Work of clearing that part of the swampy marshland between the old McColl-Frontenac Oil Company on lower Front Street opposite the Consumers' Gas Company's dock has been completed. These sections owned by the British Petroleum Oil Company and the Harbor Commission expected to be cleared in the near future, Fire Chief William Lynch stated today.

The swampy land, soaked with gasoline, when a pipeline of a gasoline company sprung a leak a few weeks ago still constitutes a silence Chief Lynch stated. "People with a lit pipe, or with a cinders, stones or ashes are asked to dump it on the cleared portions" he added, for no metals, tins or iron should be deposited. Considerable fill has already been deposited in the cleared ground, but there is still room for more.

Buffalo Socialite After Record Held By Jackie 'Pops' Cooper

Voodoo Owned by Hamlin Varies Greatly From Accepted Design

NINE ENTRIES IN

Jackie "Pops" Cooper, Kansas City, sixty-four-year-old veteran of the water speedboat racing game of the world's record for 225 Cubic inch hydroplanes made at the Dominion Day Regatta at Hamilton this year, will have to look to his laurels at the Belleville Rotary Club Regatta to be staged off Massassaga August 7th.

For the latest entry to be received in this class is the "Voodoo" flashy speedster owned and built by Chauncey Hamlin, Buffalo socialite. The "Voodoo" built along unique lines in that it has a superstructure that houses the driver and mechanic, showed a white flashing wake to the cream of international drivers at the Water-loo Regatta last week covering over the finish line in the van of its competitors at a speed of 75 miles per hour.

According to Hamlin, the "Voodoo" is capable of still greater speed, and will be out to break the existing world's record of 97.300 held by Cooper.

Hurls Challenge

Hamlin has issued a challenge at Cooper for a race over a mile measured course here on Civic Holiday, and as the winning speedster, one of the grandest sportsmen that ever jerked a throttle will take on all comers, the public is due for one of the greatest thrills of its life.

For the beautiful white-hulled streamlined "Pops Jnr" driven by Cooper will give the best of them a race of their lives and if Hamlin's performance in the various entrance notices, then one of the greatest water events in this city will be staged over the Massassaga course.

Nine Entries Received

Nine entrants have signified their intention of racing in the 225 cubic class, it was revealed yesterday at the regular meeting of the Rotary Regatta Committee, Neville-Sargent-Cooper and Hamlin, Dr. J. Boyd, Hamilton; George Hamilton, Rose, Quebec; Georgs McRea, Lindsay; Gordon Olive, Montreal; Keith Hoblin, Picton; C. Wheaton, Toronto, Don Foreman, Buffalo, and others.

The handsome gold - plated Trophy donated by Mr. Harold Sanders of the Neville-Sargent-Company will be the prize the events will vie for.

Entries are pouring in daily by letter and wire, Lloyd Hicks, chairman of the race committee stated yesterday. Outstanding drivers in the 135 cubic inch class have forwarded their entries and this speedy class will produce some of the best racing in the city. Other classes are rapidly filling up and members of the committee are weaving enthusiastic over the possibility of the largest number of outstanding American and Canadian drivers to attend a regatta, congregating in the city on holiday.

Many Prizes Secured

Many prizes have been secured for winners, while other details are gradually rounding into shape and promise an exciting and thrilling day for residents of the city and district.

Then of course there is the dance at night in the Armouries, a feature of which will be the giving away of the handsome motor boat to the lucky holder of the winning ticket.

REV. ROY H. CANTRELL

Cantrell of Toronto, formerly of New York, is the evangelist throughout this week. Rev. Cantrell has had experience in the Educational, Pastoral and Evangelistic fields. Mrs. R. H. FOXBORO SCOUTS ENJOYING CAMP

Anderson's Island in Trent River is Used for Camping Site

Foxboro, July 18 — (Special) — Realizing to the fullest possible extent the fond ambition, which is part and parcel of every boy's dreams, the members of the Foxboro Boy Scout Band are this week enjoying their first experience of an actual camping experience. Monday afternoon for Anderson's Island, which is just a few miles down Frankford in the Trent River, the boys, under Scout Master Rev. J. W. McDonald, will for the next few days be able to practise unmolested all the routine duties of a Scout member in a Scout patrol on a camping expedition.

The Anderson's Island abounds with numerous patches of berries and with the fishing at this point in the Trent River being unexcelled, it is the intention of the scout master to live off the patch as far as possible, self - sustaining. That they will of necessity be forced to work for their eats instead of merely looking for granted, will be a new and possibly not too welcome experience for some of the boys, but in view of the novelty of the situation, undoubtedly this will be taken in good spirit.

Being practically alone on the island, the boys will have for company only one lone bachelor farmer, from whom they will get what milk they require, and a few hundred head of young cattle and horses which are turned out to pasture on the island for the summer. There are more than 1,000 acres of fields and woods to these the boys will have ample opportunity to engage in scouting activities and the only outsiders they will see will be the chance pleasure boat or river craft ringing its way up or down the Trent.

LABRADOR AWAITS SIR W. GRENFELL

County Benefactor Making First Trip to North in Four Years

Montreal, July 18. —(CP)—Sir Wilfred Grenfell, who brought hospitals, schools and conveniences to bleak Labrador and Newfoundland sailed down the St. Lawrence today for the first time in four years to the land that hails him as its benefactor.

He couldn't remember just how many times he had been there when he discussed his trip last night before sailing on the liner North Star for St. Anthony, 1922, but decided it was "somewhere" near his 25th. Anyway, he was "excited and impatient" on refuging to the land where first knew him as a missionary surgeon nearly a half century ago.

Through Sir Wilfred's efforts, five hospitals have been built—at Indian Harbor, Northern River, Battle Harbor and St. Anthony in Newfoundland. He is also erected several orphanges and schools and carried on social work along the Labrador Coast and North Newfoundland.

To Replace Building

Sir Wilfred said that the "great fire" in the Grenfell Mission area, engaged upon now is the building of an industrial structure at St. Anthony, headquarters of the International Grenfell Missions. This will replace the old wooden building which now is out repair. Sir Wilfred will leave the ship at St. Anthony and cross to the various mission posts established.

Ever intrigued with a brilliance belying his 74 years, Sir Wilfred confessed that he is "as eager as a school boy" about his visit. He appeared healthy after a recent illness, a deep tan accentuating the whiteness of his hair.

Persons Defacing Trees In City Will Be Prosecuted

Persons apprehended in the act of defacing or causing the destruction of trees in Belleville by means of placing by any means whatsoever, posters or notices on trunks of trees in this city will be prosecuted by order of the Belleville Parks Commission, it was unanimously decided at the regular meeting of the Civic Parks Board last evening.

Complaints have been received by our secretary and myself, that disregard is being paid to the city bylaws pertaining to the tacking or placing of signs and notices on the trees in this city. This practice is strictly forbidden by city bylaw and as we all know by driving nails and large tacks into the trunks of our trees, it will soon keep the life from the tree and it will naturally die long before reaching maturity. It is hard enough to preserve our trees in an effort to beautify our city, without some careless person coming along and driving nails and tacks into them," warned Chairman W. A. Woodley at last nights meeting when he obtained the unanimous vote of the Commission to prosecute in court any and all apprehended in violation of this practice. Police will be asked to assist in the matter.

The Board also decided to erect signs on Riverside Park, requesting motorists not to drive their motor cars unnecessarily too far onto the park. "We invite the public to frequent this park along the river bank, but it is not necessary to drive halfway across it to park" suggested Commissioner Maurice Callaghan.

As all planting of flowers and shrubs in city parks has been completed, last night's meeting concluded in general business. Chairman W. A. Woodley, with Commissioners C. B. Colling, M. Callaghan and C. J. Symons were present.

Fredericton, July 18 (CP)—The Canadian tourist industry has picked up rapidly after a slow start, D. Leo Dolan, head of the Canadian Travel Bureau, said here in an interview yesterday. Blossom Of Night-Blooming Cereus Reaches Maturity

Startlingly beautiful in form and fragrance, the rare blossom of a night-blooming cereus plant owned by Mrs. Frank Walsh, 269 John St., reached its maturity last evening and many interested visitors called to inspect this unusual flower.

Once in seven years this plant of the cactus family produces a blossom which transforms the usually unattractive plant into one of unique beauty. The bud grows from the bottom of the plant and develops into a slim tightly closed tube. About nine o'clock yesterday the tube began to open slightly and the gradual unfolding of the petals as the light followed. By midnight the loveliness of the blossom was completely revealed, the petals of pure whiteness and the stamens distinctly forming a golden crib surmounted by a star which gives the plant its name of star of Bethlehem.

Ordinarily, this flower lasts for one night of beauty, wilts and is almost dead by morning. By keeping it in a dark, cool place however, Mrs. Walsh has been able to save previous blooming for almost two days. This morning the blossom was still fresh and will be all day, for those who wish to visit it.

federal works) and yet with the increased assistance available from the Dominion government Mr. Tremblay says that works must be stopped. It simply does not make sense.

Agreement Prevents Favoritism

"Mr. Tremblay says, 'if we want to get any money from the Dominion we have to abide by the terms of that agreement.' This agreement to which Mr. Tremblay refers differs from the previous agreements inasmuch as provision is made to prevent any favoritism or discrimination by providing the added precaution that the selection of those to be employed on such works shall be controlled by a committee representative of not only the province as heretofore, but also of the other two contributing governments, namely the Municipal and Dominion. The general provisions of the agreement are identical with those contained in agreements with other provinces.

"In February last, attempts were made to work out with Mr. Tremblay details by which this increased assistance could best be expended. No attention was paid to communications addressed to him, later the administration of unemployment relief in the Province of Quebec was vested by the legislature in the board of economic reconstruction and efforts have been made to conclude an agreement with this board.

HEALTHY STANDS

Throughout the grain-producing west damage to the new crop at this stage from all causes amounts to less than 19 per cent.

Close to normal precipitation figures are reported from most sections of Manitoba where the average height of the ripening wheat now is well over 30 inches. Deterioration due to grasshoppers and rust has been reported from only scattered districts and the damage is slight.

Conditions Ideal

Saskatchewan growing conditions are reported ideal, with new stands now averaging close to 30 inches in height. Most of the wheat is headed out and the heads are fair to large in size.

Grasshoppers have done little damage as yet although a flight has been reported travelling northeastward from west of the Wood Mountains toward the Regina district.

The finest stands in Saskatchewan are maturing in the north central and northeast sections where growth has been better than at any time during the past 10 years. Greatest improvement is noted in the central west and southwest where abundant rains have occurred.

Rapid Growth

Clear and warm weather punctuated by scattered showers, has resulted in rapid growth for southern Alberta wheat. New Stands are more than 25 inches high on an average.

Apart from minor damage from hail storms, little new crop deterioration has been reported in the foothills province. Grasshoppers have been held in check by the generous moisture and poisoning campaigns.

A heavy week-end rain drenched wheat fields of the Peace River District and relieved dry conditions which have threatened the Northern Alberta areas for nearly a month. Precipitation in some districts reached more than two inches.

Three new houses and barns were threatened when Merle Sparks' home with considerable farm machinery burned to the ground in about ten minutes. Four horses were rescued. All have been burned, but it was later found out they had gotten to the animals out. Sparks and burned shingles carried by a heavy north wind landed on Vader's house and did considerable damage both to the inside and the outside of the building. Mrs. Sparks and Rumleske's house right next door to Vader's was damaged a little from water but only the wood house was damaged by fire. Sparks carried by the roof of Norman McGee's house and Earl Young's barn and about 500 yards to the roof of a large barn owned by Wilfred Maxwell but soon were put out and the real damage done. There were also several grass fires but they were soon extinguished.

The fire was caused by sparks from the steam engine at Vader's saw mill. They were first seen by the lookout tower on the Eagle's Nest just outside of Bancroft and they notified the Forestry Branch who responded quickly by notifying the fire department and by going on to the fire with their own fire fighting equipment.

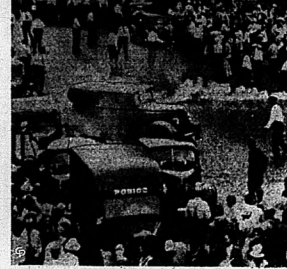
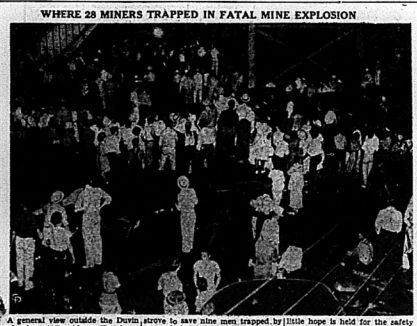
WPA Strikers and Police Meet in Fatal Clash in Minneapolis



A general view of the scene in Minneapolis when parts of the city were turned into battlefields as police and WPA demonstrators clashed. Tear gas and guns, bludgeons and fists were brought into play. One man was shot to death, ten others suffered gunshot wounds, and a score of persons were otherwise injured. A tear gas shell is picture ABOVE as the crowd jeers at the police.

WHERE 28 MINERS TRAPPED IN FATAL MINE EXPLOSION



A general view outside the Duvin coal mine at Providence, Ky., showing the large crowd of relatives waiting for word, as rescue squads strove to save nine men trapped by an explosion in the mine. Nineteen other miners were discovered dead and removed to the surface and little hope is held for the safety of the nine still entombed in the mine.

THESE HOLIDAYS

Canadian boys and girls are blessed in their summer vacation. More than half a month goes by before they find three quarters and more of holidays yet before them. True, like all good things, vacation time moves swiftly, but not too swiftly for nature's healing forces to set their benign influences at work on the bodies and minds of the young scholars. They are out of school but under the influence of natural things they are putting on new strength of mind and body. They are students of the great outdoors. One of the greatest of English poets has said:

"One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can."

Many a child in the freedom of vacation feels these words to be literally true and might be expected to agree that they are the very truth. Adults perhaps would not go so far, yet all admit today, which is an age which glorifies the great outdoors, that those who come into contact with nature in the spirit have received a blessing which cannot be exaggerated or overstressed. Today itself is such an age when men and women would gladly seek communion in nature from the ills of life, and find lessons there. Children may not consciously strive to look deeply into nature but they catch it intuitively something of the spirit, "one influence from a vernal wood," which stands them in good stead. For their entire lives they may look back on happy days.

The sun at his place in the heavens bestowing health, and providing vitamins to the body through the very chemical action of the sun's rays.

It is a time of life into which youth and childhood at play have taught lessons to the elders who also benefit by close contact to nature.

THE OLD MANSE

It is a fine thing that men in a practical age will turn their interest to the dwellings of the great who have helped to mould the nation's ideals. In the United States today honors are paid to the homes of the literary figures who built and laid the foundations of American literature. Christian Science Monitor spoke of "The Old Manse" and its associations with Emerson and Nathaniel Hawthorne, each a philosopher and the other a writer of creative literature and both of whom live by the merit of their work and their influence for generations. The Monitor says::

Few houses in America are more mellowed in the literary tradition than the Old Manse in Concord. News that the Massachusetts Public Reservation and Guild of Boxboard House will be received with pleasure.

The Rev. William Emerson had scarcely moved into his new home before its windows rattled to the musketry on the nearby battlefield and it was on its walls that a tiny Ralph Waldo Emerson scratched his first poem, and "looked out upon that "rude bridge" and dreamed his majestic lines of the "shot heard 'round the world."

Nathaniel Hawthorne followed the Emersons in occupancy of the house, giving it its familiar name with his "Mosses from an Old Manse." How important a period his residence there was, particularly in his literary development, is hinted at in his own works in the introduction to "The Scarlet Letter," and is proved in later chapters by the style that flowed from his pen so short a time after his removal.

For three centuries America has been such a bustling place it has had scant time to look to its traditions, but, certainly, such a charming place—and such a notable one in the cavalcade of America—should be spared demolishment.

A SACRED SPOT

Christians across the world must have read with some anxiety the news story recently that the Mount of Olives, associated so intimately with the Passion of Christ, is likely to become engulfed in building operations in the greater Jerusalem which continues to expand beyond the bounds of the ancient fortress city which is built upon a rock. The suggestion was made that funds might be raised throughout the world to purchase the Mount and so preserve it to the ages because of its sacred history.

There is no doubt that many would willingly assist in so great a project. These would feel a sense of shock if it should be that the holy ground, which has been so linked with the Christian religion and its Founder, should lose its identity and be swallowed up in modern building operations. Of course many shrines of religion have been lost to the world, time has naturally been rather unsparing with places and buildings associated with the great leaders of Hebrew civilization, of Christianity and of other regilions. When they have once been lost or long been lost man still has his shrines in the spirit or sets about to restore them materially. But to see a historic sacred spot disappearing before the eyes in this twentieth century when all the world can know of it through the agencies for the spread of news today would be something more difficult to watch without an effort to stay the hand of modern civilization's development. It may be that some steps will be taken to preserve the Mount of Olives, which lingers in the memory of Biblical scenes and in lines of music heard in countless churches throughout the world for many hundreds of years.

HOMEY THINGS

The hollyhocks about the porch
Are bursting into bloom,
The pink petunias scent the air,
And I'll be there soon.
The summer sun is glinting
Through the kitchen window-pane,
And the breezes softly whisper
That summer's here again.

The dahlias that we planted late
Are growing strong and green,
Their blooom will give us pleasure
Ere the autumn winds blow keen;
The limpid lake is calling
To the peaceful shadowed shore
Where the swallows swift are skimming
The placid waters o'er.

The geraniums that we started
A few short weeks ago,
Are showing now resplendant
In a gay and ruddy row;
And in the cosy kitchen
Upon a cushioned chair
The yellow cat is sleeping
Without a thought of care.

The little clock is ticking
The summer hours away,
The kettle too is singing
A tune all blithe and gay;
And on the kitchen table,
A bunch of roses red
Dispense exotic beauty
And their sweet fragrance shed.

O little house of memories
With all your simple cheer,
How dear you grow and dearer
With every passing year!
Though oft our thoughts are soaring
Afar on spirit's wings,
The world holds nothing fairer
Than life's sweet homey things.

"THE GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY" is a leading feature in President Roosevelt's public platform. Hence visits to South America to win the friendship of the Latin American countries. He has been more or less successful, but closer at home there seems some missionary work yet to be done. President Roosevelt had a neighbor who owned an estate adjoining the Roosevelt Hyde Park home estate. This neighbor violently dislikes Neighbor Roosevelt and all his works, public and private, and has so expressed himself by word of mouth and printers ink. However, on the principle that "Sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never hurt me," little attention was paid by the Roosevelts to their unfriendly neighbor. Recently, however the unfriendly neighbor capped the climax by selling his estate to "Father" Divine, who has a large following among the colored people of the United States, and proposes to plant a large number of his flock, male and female, on the estate adjoining the Roosevelts where they will farm and hold hallelujah meetings, a "Father" Divine heaven where the colored gals all become angels and the colored chaps disciples, all for one and one for all, and all for "Father" Divine who assumes the assets of his disciples and becomes Chief Watchdog of the Treasury. Thus the Good Neighbor Policy is being put to a severe test.

Heywood Broun Meets Rabbit

The woodchucks are bad this year, and so are the rabbits and the Japanese beetle worst of all.

Maybe it's a fact. Whether any of these subversive groups are financed or controlled from Moscow I do not pretend to know, but they are certainly working under some secret understanding. As I came in the other morning I saw a rabbit, a chuck, two crows and a full regiment of robins walking practically hand in hand into the strawberry patch. As a result we haven't any strawberries.

And don't let anybody tell you that a rabbit is sweet, or meek or timid or anything of the sort. Easter bunnies, indeed! If a rabbit ever grew to be the size of an elephant he would eat over you and be glad to get the chance.

There is one who lives just back of the stone wall who is about the size of a dachshund, and when I tried to chase him away from the young cabbage the other day he growled at me and showed his fangs. Only by seizing a bucket of rocks did I manage to fight him off, and though I caught him square on the conk a couple of times I failed to bring him down. It wasn't until a friend with a pitchfork came running up to the rescue that we managed to drive the belligerent hare into a slow and surly retreat. The crows are as big as bussards, and the frogs in the pond seem to be studying to ready themselves as dragons. Some of them have already mastered the trick of blowing steam instead of bubbles.

All the birds and beasts of the field seem to be on the march, and things are looking pretty bleak for my garden. The small American garrison within our stockade has been augmented by native troops consisting of Bucky and his two pet Indian runners, but they, too, seem to have been tolduned by the call of the wild. The ducks in particular are acting very queer. I've never seen such nutty duck in my life. Instead of swimming on the surface of the pond they persist in diving to the bottom and fraternizing with the electric eels.

In the old days there were plenty of dogs around here who could take a woodchuck in stride. It was a simple matter of circling around the savage beast in order to avoid his gnashing tusks, and then grabbing him by the back of the neck. The neighbors tell me that there is no record of such a killing in the last six months. The groundhogs are no longer afraid of their own shadow, and the great Danes and mastiffs idle under every porch licking their wounds.

Indeed, the Hunting Ridge Home Owners Association is attempting to raise a purse to bring over the Hound of the Baskervilles in order that the countryside shall become safe at night. And, according to the reliable New York Times the Bureau of Entomology admits calmly that the Japanese beetle cannot be eliminated. The old Puritans who settled this valley had no idea how lucky they were. They had to face nothing but the lynx, the wildcat and the Pequot who was one of the meanest breeds of Indian.—Heywood Brown in New York World-Telegram.

WOODEN SHIPS

The barquentine Walter-rigger in the British coasting trade, has been sold to Estonia after nearly 70 years under the Red Ensign. For the past four years she has been laid up on the mud at the little Bureau port of Par.

The Waterwitch, a wooden vessel of 207 tons gross, was built at Poole in 1871. She was launched from the yard of a local ship builder, Meadus, and was then rigged as a brig, being intended for the West India fruit trade. In her construction were used many stout pieces of timber, sold by the Government Dockyards on account of their being too small for use in the building of warships.

The brig Waterwitch made a few voyages to the West Indies, but in the mid-eighties she was rerigged as a barquentine and put into the coasting trade. For over 20 years she was in the coal trade from the North-East Coast to Portsmouth, where she used to frequent the Camber. She had the reputation of being a "hard-case" ship, and was known among coastwise seamen as "The Portsmouth Workhouse." She was certainly a hard-driven ship. She once made the passage from Sunderland to Portsmouth in 36 hours. For many years she carried a fore-royal and topmast stunsails; and even a few years before the War she carried topmast stunsail booms, though only for shore.—London Times.

FIRE LINES

Fire Chief Archie McDiarmid will have the support of all intelligent people when he asks for a by-law compelling citizens to keep outside a radius of 200 feet from any fire being fought by city firemen.

The legal department has doubts about the legality of the city in such matters. It is pointed out, for instance, that it would be difficult to prohibit the owner of property going into his own premises should they fail to heed the chief's request pendius of 200 feet.

Surely such petty red tape need not prevent the broad application of the rule sought by the Fire Chief.

All fires of any importance, there are—or should be—police officers lines of President Lincoln there was a dynamite scare and two men were seen put down there to watch for possible dynamiters. That order had never been rescinded and a good succeeded guard, being paid for doing nothing.

In this young country it is unlikely we have any forgotten men in forgotten jobs, but the Chief and there are a great many. A large number of people are drawing salaries from the Government for doing jobs that don't really exist except on the payroll, either as a job to a hereditary appointment, or because nobody has ever countermanded the order.

Until many years after Queen Victoria began to reign there was a Guards battalion wearing busbies and with bayonets fix-Journal.

A Large Unhurried Breakfast May Correct Constipation

The "hustle and bustle of the average person's daily life in this machine age, the lack of time to create a habit of regularity, the freak diets, pandering to the almost insane appetites for slenderness, insufficient fluid intake, and other factors contribute to the prevalence of constipation.

I am quoting Dr. Clayton C. Perry, Cleveland, Ohio in an article on Constipation in 'Medical World'.

I believe Dr. Perry's statement that 'the lack of time to create a habit' is one of the great truths as to the causes of constipation. With a great many individuals, there is the hurried breakfast and no time for or thought of, the intestinal habit.

And so common is constipation that it states further:

"It is so rare in my experience to find a patient who is not compelled that I have come to look with awe and wonder upon those few patients whose bowels move naturally and regularly. A review of the records of one thousand consecutive patients examined in my office (except cancer patients) revealed that 739 complained of constipation and used cathartics. Among the 71 noncathartic patients, however, there were several with diarrhoea and ileitis. If these cases are excluded, and the number with normal bowel habits is small."

One of the conclusions come to by Dr. Perry is that a large breakfast is one of the most important factors in correcting constipation. With this conclusion most physicians will agree because a hurried, light breakfast does not give the impulse to the digestive tract to move and drill waste downward. Under the very best of conditions of a meal will, in itself, give stronger impulses to the whole digestive tract, sometime case living and large intestine.

It is difficult for the average individual to sit down and eat a good breakfast in a leisurely manner, and to take time to sit and read the paper for a few minutes after breakfast seems impossible. Yet, if this same individual were to retire a half hour earlier, and get up a half hour earlier, he could easily eat a larger, unhurried breakfast, read his paper, and reach office or factory in plenty of time.

Missouri Meerschaum Birthday

Last week the historic little community of Washington, Missouri, observed its centennial. Ordinarily this would attract no more attention than any centennial observance by a comparatively obscure community. Washington, however, has a claim to fame in that it was the place where the corncob pipe was invented.

Harry Tibbe, a scissors grinder, is credited with being the inventor. He hollowed out a cob and twig, joined them and exhibited the product at the Franklin County Fair. It was apparent almost immediately that Tibbe "had something". One farmer after another adopted the idea. The fame of the corncob pipe spread until the "Missouri meerschaum" became known from one end of the country to another.

The corncob pipe was invented in 1874, just 65 years ago. Its heyday was probably reached during the first decade of the present century when the corncob pipe suddenly became fashionable. From the fields, it spread to the colleges and universities. Manufacturers devoted themselves to turning out corncob pipes of increasingly quality and appearance. Some went so far as to provide vulcanized rubber and even amber stems. It was a far cry from the fleetfoot activities of the early 1870's to the home-made pipe of Harry Tibbe.

Since then the corncob pipe, it must be confessed, has lost much of its old popularity. It came into the public mind recently, when briar pipes were comparatively scarce, as a one-clay pipe hard to handle. When the time came that a fairly good briar pipe could be bought for very little, the decline of the old corncob started.

Let no one think, however, that the corncob pipe is a museum piece. Many a man with his rack of expensive English briars will turn to the old blackened corncob even to this day when he has a particularly difficult problem to meet or an especially important decision to make. Harry Tibbe may be a forgotten man but the Missouri meerschaum has achieved immortality.—Watertown Times.

Forgotten Men in Forgotten Jobs

In 1875 when she was but 16 years old a girl was hired by the municipality of Newton, Mass., to do sewing in the sewing room. For 30 years old, the temporary girl is still doing the same work. No doubt she hopes the job will be permanent.

A few years ago a man walking through the basement of the Capitol in Washington decided to ask two men whom he found working around there every day what they were doing. He found that during the time of President Lincoln there was a dynamite scare and two men were put down there to watch for possible dynamiters. That order had never been rescinded and a good succeeded guard, being paid for doing nothing.

In this young country it is unlikely we have any forgotten men in forgotten jobs, but the Chief and there are a great many. A large number of people are drawing salaries from the Government for doing jobs that don't really exist except on the payroll, either as a job to a hereditary appointment, or because nobody has ever countermanded the order.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

CONTRAST IN THE HOLY LAND

The old and the new, frustration and determination, a medley of hopes and setbacks, blend in ancient Palestine, a land seemingly fitted for peace and meditation, but instead, torn by rifts and hatred, where officials vainly seek a way of bringing order from a situation that finds Jews and Arabs apparently unable to ever dwell side by side as friendly neighbors. Typical of innumerable deferred hopes is the old man plying his hoe at Kfar Chassidim, one of the many Jewish settlement, where men in the fields must be constantly watchful for Arabs resentful of their influx into the country, despite the many thriving communities they have built where before there had been only desert.

LOST CAPSULES OF RADIUM, WORTH $7,500, FOUND BY ROADSIDE

Five capsules of radium, worth $7,500, were stolen with a cashbox last week from the Standard Medical and Surgical clinic at Peterboro. Yesterday they were found by Dr. L. B. Leppard, physicist of the Ontario Department of Health, and James Bere (LEFT) with Berl DeLaney and H. Pomard (RIGHT), representatives of the company with which the radium was insured for $3,100. Two men cutting weeds by the side of the road found the rifled cashbox, phoned police, who phoned Dr. Leppard. With the aid of the Geiger-Mueller counter, a radium-finder shown here in use, he found the capsules—four on the Cavan Township, one on the Monaghan Township side of the road.

W. J. COTTRELL AWARDED BOOK

Wins Award by Essay on Subject "My Biggest Safety Headache"

Marmora, July 18 (Special) — A copy of Stewart H. Holbrook's famous book "Let Them Live" is being awarded to W. J. Cottrell as one of the six prize winners of the contest in the June issue of "The Industrial Supervisor", publication of the National Safety Council, Inc. The contest took the form of an essay of one hundred words or less on the subject, "My Biggest Safety Headache". Mr. Cottrell's essay dealt with the insufficiency of safety first measures in community life in contrast to splendid organization work in most industrial plants. Twice in quick succession has an employee of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company sent in a prize winning entry to "The Industrial Supervisor", William Burke was a lucky competitor in the limerick contest which appeared in the April issue.

King's, Queen's Visit to U.S. Described by J. O. Herity

ATTENDS DINNER

"They could not have done anything finer if they had been their own. The inspiring spectacle was a sure indication that the two countries and peoples are now and forever friends," Rotary District Governor J. Owen Herity told members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon yesterday, referring to the visit of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth to the United States.

Denied the privilege of seeing the royal couple in Canada due to the fact that he was in the U.S.A. attending the convention of Rotary International, the guest speaker told his fellow clubmen that he availed himself of the opportunity, while the King and Queen were in New York.

Reports of the American press generally showed the utmost cordiality, Rotarian Herity stated. With the exception of a small minority the press was marvellous in its attitude toward the royal visit.

Descriptive Address

In a splendid descriptive address, the speaker outlined the arrival of the King and Queen at Battery Park, New York. "It had some misgivings, when I went there to see the arrival of Their Majesties," he said. "The destroyer 'Warrington' came up the harbor through a dense fog, and stopped at the pier. Suddenly every boat in the harbor roared their sirens in a noisy blast of welcome. Overhead squadrons of planes, likewise dipped a salute. Over three million people witnessed the journey of the royal couple from the Battery to the World's Fair. Cheers in a sustained roar echoed along the entire route of parade. Bands played first the solemn notes of "God Save The King" followed by the stridently challenging tones of the "Star Spangled Banner." It was a marvellous sight."

The speaker gave a fine description of the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, where the International Assembly of District Governors elect held their convention.

"I was privileged to represent Canada at the Governor's dinner held there," he said, "at which thirty-four guests were invited. These represented New Zealand, Australia, Brazil, the U.S.A., Canada, England, Peru, Cuba, France, Mexico, Ecuador, Chile, Palestine, Netherlands, Rhodesia, Bulgaria, China and Japan. Nearly all the delegates spoke excellent English, while some had command of nearly a dozen languages."

"At the British Empire Dinner held in Cleveland, the presiding officer was a knighted Hindu from Bombay. The addresses at this function," the speaker said, "were among the finest I have ever heard. Cleveland was en fete for the occasion and left nothing undone for our comfort."

Number of Stories

Rotarian Herity interspersed his address with a number of humorous stories such as heard only at conventions. He was favorably impressed with the International Assembly, he said in conclusion, adding a warning that "Rotary had focused too much attention in the past on the machine instead of the product. Rotary is an idealistic spiritual movement, one that should consider not so much the machinery, that produces as what it is going to produce."

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Jack Deacon while club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian O. E. Reid, these remarks being echoed by Rotarians George Beare, Toronto; J. C. Winfield, Evansville, Ill., Thomas Greville, Gravenhurst and McGregor Easton of Ottawa. President Howard Clarke was in the chair with Bandy Burrows and Leo Higgs providing the musical background for the community singing.

'Canadian Cattle' Sign Attracts Buyers In Old Land

It's a far cry from the sunny foothills of Alberta to the rolling slopes of Gloucestershire, England, famed dairy country, and it's about half as far from the green fields of the Bay of Quinte district to the busy cattle marts of Cardiff, Wales, it took only a simple sign bearing the inscription "Canadian Cattle" to bring together two men who not only had a lot in common, but resulted in a business deal from which both greatly profited.

Today fifteen choice head of cattle from the herds of well-known Quinte district breeders are grazing contentedly in the green pastures of Harry Wickson, prominent dairy farmer of Newnham Gloucestershire, England.

It was while strolling through the cattle market at Cardiff, Wales, a few weeks ago, that Mr. Wickson, who is a brother of Mrs. Jack Clark, North James street, and Mrs. Ernest Martin, 314 Church street, Belleville, noticed a small sign bearing the words "Canadian Cattle".

His experienced eye swept over the herd offered for sale and he immediately recognized the fine qualities that characterize the type of cattle bred and raised around these parts. For years Mr. Wickson operated a farm in Thurlow Township, later moving to the foothills of Alberta where he successfully operated a large cattle ranch for upwards of thirteen years before returning to his native England.

Perhaps Mr. Wickson felt a twinge of homesickness. Perhaps he yearned for the news of relatives and the folks who live in that part of Canada that was formerly his home.

However, he strolled to a gentleman in charge of the sale of the cattle who happened to be a member of the firm of Scott Brothers, prominent drovers and cattlemen of this city.

The rest can be imagined. The two men had a lengthy talk with Mr. Scott giving his newly-found friend details of the happenings of the past few years. They exchanged views and conversation. Meanwhile Mr. Wickson, who now operates his large farm with his son, again swept his glance over the fine cattle offered for sale. A few minutes later transactions had been negotiated with Mr. Wickson becoming the owner of fifteen head of choice Bay of Quinte bred cattle.

Weddings

OSTERHOUT—MORROW

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Morrow was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on Saturday afternoon, July 8th., when the former's sister, Ilvea Mary, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John W. Morrow was united in marriage to Norman Roy Osterhout, son of Mrs. Emma Osterhout, Frankford, and the late John Osterhout. Rev. J. F. Lamb of Trenton officiated. Church officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother and looked charming in a street-length gown of white sheer. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses and baby's breath. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Walter Morrow and during the signing of the register, Miss Joan Brenton sang "I Love You Truly".

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served to about fifty guests by nieces of the bride and groom.

For travelling the bride chose a frock of blue sheer with matching accessories.

Later the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon in New York State.

Cool Complexions

(By HELEN POLLETT)

DURING THE silly season, when the sun is beaming its strongest and sweat glands are working, everything possible must be done to keep the complexion looking fresh.

A cleansing oil acts more favorably than a heavy cream, some of which may remain on the skin despite the thorough wiping over with tissues. Olive oil can be used; it is a favorite with the beauticians ladies of the silver screen. Mineral oil, which is slightly heavier, will serve. Proprietary articles have the advantage of being sweetly perfumed. But sometimes the bottle is empty and there's no time for shopping.

An iced astringent used after the oil will give freshness and color to the skin. Pour a little witch hazel in a flat bowl, add an ice cube. Dip in a bit of gauze, lave the surface of the flesh lightly.

At this season of the year a light powder is cooler and fresher looking than a heavy one. It should not be too rosy. Golden tones are flattering when the complexion looks a bit toasted.

The girl who looks cool is cool. How we look, we age. Appearance has more to do with comfort, health and happiness than many of us realize.

Nothing much can be done about large veins on the hands. Rough work and advancing years bring them. Having the hands in hot and cold water make blood streams apparent.

A softening lotion to keep the surface smooth should be used the year round. A massage with some essential oil once a week will ward off ugly signs that come after a clean.

Story of Canada Told In Pageant At Charlottetown

Dominion Treasury Board Meets in Ancient Chamber

Charlottetown, July 18—(CP)—Canadian statesmen attending the celebrations of the 75th anniversary of the meeting in Charlottetown which led to Confederation turned back today on three quarters of a century of Canadian history.

The week-long celebration opened yesterday with the unveiling of a plaque commemorating the Prince Edward Island Fathers of Confederation. The story of Canada, from frontier days to the present, was told in a pageant in which the symbolized goddess of fame urged Canadians not to forget their obligations" to the pioneers.

History will be made again in this island capital today when the Dominion Treasury Board meets in the Confederation Chamber of the Provincial building where the Fathers met 75 years ago.

The meeting will be made possible by the presence of five members of the federal cabinet. The members, Resources Minister Crerar, Postmaster-General McCarthy, Revenue Minister Ilsley, Labor Minister Rogers and Transport Minister Howe attended yesterday's ceremonies.

Mr. Crerar represented Prime Minister Mackenzie King at the unveiling ceremony. In an address he urged Canadians to maintain their traditions of freedom. Other speakers at the unveiling pointed to the foundations of nationhood which was laid at the early meeting.

Pageant of Youth Pass Before Tomb Of Levin

Moscow, July 18—(AP)— Across Red Square today, past the tomb of Lenin on which stood Joseph Stalin and other leaders, poured a pageant of Soviet youth—the annual physical culture parade.

For the second consecutive year the massed banners of 86 sports clubs came representatives of the constituent republics of the U. S. S. R., each group consisting from 200 to 250 young men and women picked for their looks and athletic ability.

Each section put on a show of its own and through all the displays ran the theme of national defence.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She Didn't Realize She Cared

Dear Miss Fairfax

I know you have helped others with your good advice, and am sure you will be able to help me also with my problem. I went with a young man for a long time and thinking I did not care for him, gave him up. Although he loved me a great deal, we parted and did not see each other for some time. Then it dawned upon me that I really cared for him, and now he has stopped caring for me. I want to win back his love, because I realize how deeply I love him. What can I do?

Beth

My dear, do you really care, or is it the old story of having lost a possession and discovering, after it is gone that it did have value? I get so many letters like yours. There isn't much you can do, except to try and make up with the young man. You might make him over again. But if he did come back, wouldn't that wouldn't feeling return? Perhaps you would find out he doesn't matter particularly after all. He probably has a vague idea that this might happen, and, like most men, is taking your indifference philosophically.

Changed Her Ideas About Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 30 years old, have a good position, which pays me a good salary and I had about decided never to marry. But, about three months ago I met the most wonderful man, and for the first time in my life I'm sure I'm in love forever and ever. We have so many things in common, and both agree that we are very deeply in love, to the exclusion of all others.

I have seen many apparently happy marriages go on the rocks and find this has set me to thinking. Perhaps I'd better break off, gently, with this man and the memory of his love, for consolation in times of loneliness, when I'm sure doesn't quite fill my time. Do you think this would be possible?

Velma

Yes, perfectly possible, my dear, if you are going to allow fear to keep you from the happiness that life now offers. You may not accept this gift of love, and by your own intelligence work out a plan keep it ever perfect as it now seems to you? A great many times I feel that, although, as you say, many other apparently happy marriages have failed, if all depends on the persons involved and the effort they put into the job of making their marriage succeed.

From your letter I judge that both of you have all the qualities needed for an ideal marriage.

Madly in Love With Another

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm deeply in love with a girl of 18, whom I've taken out about six or eight times. She never refuses to go when I ask her, but she does not act overly-crazy about me. She is popular with both boys and girls and never wants for company.

To make things worse, I've been going out with a girl a few months older than I am—23, and she tells me she's in love with me. She's a fine girl, but not for me. I just don't know what to do—try to win the first girl, or keep on with the one I'm going with now, and eventually marry her.

Patrick

Why make any decision in regard to marriage at your age? You have plenty of time. And anyway, a young man of your age, who can support a wife these days, must be making a pretty good salary. Why not keep on being friends with both these girls, and see a little more of life before you come to any serious decision about a life partnership?

This Mother Approves Dancing

Dear Miss Fairfax

If the old gentleman who got violent about dancing, would only let his daughter dance would go to some clean, decent dances, he'd find girls don't mind.

He admits the type of dances he attended until he was probably too old to dance were the "rough and tumble sort". I go to dances with my young people regularly. I often take a turn myself with my sons and some of their friends. Dancing is a form of exercise, comes almost from the beginning of the race. There's a fresco showing dancing on the wall of a palace in Crete, so old that no one knows the history of it.

There are a great many old men who've been gay blades all their lives, and when they're too old for pranks, they imagine themselves sanctified, and decline to allow their daughters to have normal amusements. Tragedy and farce make no stalks the steps of these repressed girls.

A Mother

We are very glad to get this lady's opinion of view and if it should chance to meet the eye of "Father" we hope it may lighten up his ideas on the subject of dancing, and that he may let his three spinster daughters have a little fun. I am afraid "Father" and the two other gentlemen who have objected to dancing, must have fallen victim of the wrong side of this amusement.

Behaviour At Tennis Match Must Be Essence of Good Sportsmanship

There are many Don'ts that need to be brought to the attention of the person who lures to watch Tennis but who does not play it and therefore does not understand all the sidelights of the game.

In these lively vacation days when there are hotel and club matches, national and international champion ships, the most important point to illuminate is the effect of the attitude of the individual when in the crowd of that composite-individual, a tennis "gallery".

That mysterious thing, crowd-psychology, enters here and produces its own peculiar reactions. With this fact in mind, it is evident that each person watching a tennis match must cultivate and regulate the most sportsmanlike attitude possible, for each person individual thinks may be transmitted by crowd-psychology into the behaviour of the gallery as a unit.

It is very necessary for the individual and for the gallery to refrain from applause when the ball is "in play". Many tennis players get very much under the strain of the fighting-like pace of this fascinating game, and applause may make the most nervous contestant lose his point. Or if the crowd shouts, or some individual applauds before the point is settled, both contestants may suffer.

Also, when watching an international match, the gallery should show every courtesy to the foreign player. The gallery as a whole, and you as an individual, should assume the same cordial attitude that a hostess assumes toward a stranger who is a welcome guest. Of course, we all want our own man to win, but if he isn't the best man, why should he win? Hostility to a foreigner, or to any person who is competing, has a very depressing and disintegrating effect and is distinctly unfair. A gallery prides itself has the quality of fairness in his sights.

Again, do not "boo" the referee if he happens to make a decision that you do not like. Remember that his task is a thankless one! Courtesy demands that the spectator should assume that a referee is doing his difficult duty to the best of his knowledge and ability. One undisciplined person, by premature or unreasonable applause or reckless "booing", can soon make a gallery absolutely unmanageable. So when you are one of a crowd, control your emotions. Your behaviour as an individual entails a big responsibility toward the many who may, from your example, become a possible echo of yourself.

Favor or Cotton?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you please give me a few suggestions for a wedding anniversary gift? I am a friend of the bride's on her anniversary, and sometimes it is given as the reverse. Perhaps you can help me by suggesting something, find out which symbol the couple have chosen for their anniversary.

Care of Your Children

Each New-Born Child Possesses Distinctive Will to Live

It is a wonderful thing how a little work over an apparently dead new-born child will bring it back to life. If a baby isn't breathing at all, it doesn't live longer than half an hour, but often they breathe so slightly that you don't notice it. If you keep on working over them, in an hour or so they begin to breathe more or less naturally. I never give up hope for hours. You see the trouble about getting started is that it takes just twice as much force to open the lungs up with that first breath as it does to keep them distended thereafter.

This will to live is very strong in a baby, stronger in some than in others, Once I recall being summoned to attend a young unmarried girl whose child was born unattended. Whoever was with her had hidden the baby in a drawer and then called me, for the woman was not in very good shape. When I looked after the mother and then asked about the baby, I was told that the mother I saw that it was a premature child, between five and six months, it was thought far away in spite of the fact that no care had been taken. The child itself was about twenty-four hours before it died.

The amount of air that a baby breathes at first is surprisingly small when you consider how important it is for him to get air. Even after twenty minutes out in the world, after he has taken hundreds of breaths, the amount in one breath is only about half a fluid ounce, or one thirty-second of a pint. As six hours the amount of breath will be about twice this much, but even at the end of a week's breathing he is only taking in about 2½ to 3 inches air as he did when he was twenty minutes old.

Babies who are weak or premature don't breath even this much. Their breathing goes on in the central portion of the lung, with the finer cells in the outer branches remaining closed as though the child were still inside the mother. However, if the baby is to grow stronger, the area of lung used in breathing must gradually increase.

The problem facing a doctor who has brought into the world a child that doesn't seem to be breathing is the same as when he is called to attend a person who has been asphyxiated or apparently drowned. In each case he must get the breathing apparatus going or death will come very quickly.

With adults—drowned or asphyxiated—you can handle them more or less roughly. Artificial respirations is tried. This is what used to be done with babies, too, but today we know better methods that are gradually being accepted by medical practitioners everywhere.

By the best method, a mixture of a gas and air is administered the baby. Before this is done the baby should have been billed "still born" in the birth certificate is brought to life.

Thus every year we are learning of something new to save life.

"WALK, UPSTAIRS AND SAVE"

ENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

"Well, you would expect it to," admitted Nancy. "Many a time I've said to myself, I don't see how the owner of the bus can possibly be making his expenses on it, let alone any profit. But I suppose he must be, or he wouldn't be able to go on with it, would he? The fact is, he charges each of them two shillings a week for the journey. Of course, I suppose it's regular; I mean, he's sure of his customers. But I can't see what he can clear out of that above running expenses, can you?"

She turned away suddenly, and stood staring out from the window. Here, from the back room of the house, she could see the hedge on the higher side of the lane, and its own white gate set in it, the gate of her peace of mind, which Adam Probert had violated.

Remembering how she had found him there, beside the pool, she was suddenly filled with longing to have another, and more difficult, question answered for her; but this time she knew that it was useless to appeal to Nancy. Nancy had confirmed, if not her mother's accusations, at least Catherine's own misgivings. As yet it was much of doubt, and little proof. It might be possible to make a reasonable if slow, profit out of five shilling houses; though remembering the rentals set upon cottages less roomy and worse built than these, Catherine could answer that premise for herself.

But the glade—that needed more explaining than Nancy and all her kin, and all her neighbours of the garden city, could do between them. She would not know for what purpose he had desired it, she could not point out from what motive he had coveted it. That was for himself to answer; and that he would never condescend to do that, she was assured. There was no one else.

Then she remembered Mickey Dennis, Mickey who had come with him to the assault of her dominion, and had looked at her in anger and dislike when, not he but presumed to reject Adam's offer; Mickey who had once unbelievedly opened his lips to make a furious answer, and been restrained only by Adam's hand upon his arm.

It occurred to her that there was more than relationship of employer and employed here; that Mickey stood in much the same relation to Adam as Perry did to herself, and resented the placing of obstacles in his idol's path just as hotly. Mickey would be able to tell her all she needed to know. It was less now than ever it had been; she already knew so much, and felt so much more with an intensity which was almost in itself knowledge.

"You think, then, that your mother," she said slowly, "that Probert planned this settlement out of a real desire to better the conditions of the poor people in Stanchester, and not as a financial speculation for his own benefit at all?"

"That's just it," said Nancy. "That's what we believe, all of us here in the village, because we can't see how he's making a penny out of it." She looked up at Catherine, and her eyes were not unfriendly. "You mustn't be hurt, Mrs. Court, if you find the tenants here in the new village a bit cool to you now. You see, they own him a good deal, or right or wrong, they think they do. But I understand the way it must have seemed to you, too; because I know now how I should feel if I lived in the next valley all my life, and then someone came and built houses all over it, and then cut down the trees. I'm fond of trees myself, and I know now you must have felt—like the end of the world was come."

"Something like that," said Catherine, shaken, in spite of her composure, by the unexpectedness of this concession.

"And you don't feel that way about it now? But you don't. I can see that. You've changed a lot."

"I've seen some other points of view besides my own."

"It isn't only that," said Nancy, with a furrowed brow. "It's more as if—your own needs had altered. If you know what I mean. As if you'd found something more than trees to bother about now; not that they aren't important still, but as if there was things more important."

"Perhaps there are," said Catherine, she turned from the window. "Thank you, Mrs. Dunning, for all you've told me. You've helped me very much."

"What are you going to do?" asked Nancy, as she turned towards the door.

"I don't know. I must think; and there are some more things I want to find out before I decide."

"But there's so little time," said Nancy.

"There will be enough. Whatever I do will be done today." On the step before the front door she turned, and looked back at the slender little woman in the gay cretonne overall, and it seemed to her that the real fight was already over, and won, not by herself, or by Adam, but by Nancy and her fellows.

"Goodbye," she said, "and thank you for listening to me."

Then she took the road through the garden city towards the station and caught the next train for Stanchester.

CHAPTER XVII

Mickey Dennis sat in the inner sanctum of his office in Warren Street, Stanchester, reading the morning papers. There were some seven of them, all he could think of, littered over his desk; and each one of them was opened to the account of the second day's hearing of Court v Probert. As he finished with each, he pushed it on one side, and began the procedure all over again with the next. He had reached a picture paper, when his junior tapped at the door, and came in, and closed it behind him. all with an air of having more to impart than the usual advice of the usual type of visitor.

"Well, what's wrong?" said Mickey, not looking up from the fascinating and irritating study of the paper.

"There's a Mrs. Court asking to see you," said the junior, producing what he knew must be a bombshell in a manner of a conjurer producing the rabbit from the hat.

Mickey Dennis looked up sharply enough this time. The paper shot from under his relaxing hands, and rustled to the floor. He made to rise from his chair, and as promptly sat down again. It was impossible; that was all he knew.

"Tommyrot! You're pulling my leg. The woman's in London, at the law courts."

"All I know is, she's here in the office, I know her from the newspaper pictures."

"She can't be in two places at once," said Mickey flatly, as if it was some satisfaction to have at least one point settled beyond question. "It can't be done."

"Then she isn't in London; for there's not much doubt that she's sitting in the next room at this moment, waiting to see you." The junior—he was not many years younger than Mickey and there was little ceremony between them—grinned provokingly. "Shall I tote her in? She's not bad looking."

"She hasn't a bad nerve," said Mickey, in a long breath of wonder. "What on earth can she want here, with me? I thought she was busy trying to extract the chief's pocket-book in the Strand, and now she turns up here in Stanchester."

He leaned forward, and with one sweep of his long arm gathered the scattered papers together into one heap. "Yes, bring her in."

Catherine came. She was in the blue dress she had worn in court two days previously, with the heavy furs of her coat collar erect, and black round the whiteness of her neck and face; and the little close sack cap she wore lost its brown into the brown of her hair. He saw her as she came slowly through the doorway, the walk which Adam Probert had notified first and foremost of her, before ever he had seen her in the flesh.

He acknowledged, though grudgingly, that there was something in the idea that she belonged to the Middle Ages, or at latest to the dawn of the Renaissance. He thought, more out of loyalty to Adam than out of a desire to take the comparison seriously, of Catherina Sforza. All he knew of that redoubtable lady he knew from Adam, and it was not very much; but the name stuck in his mind. He came to his feet as she entered, and for a long moment they stood looking at each other across the desk. Then Catherine said, in a low but steady voice.

"I am aware that you must find this visit very puzzling, Mr. Dennis; but I assure you that I've no intention of wasting very much of your time, if you will give me ten minutes—"

"Certainly," said Mickey Dennis, with the most icy politeness. "I am here to interview any callers, Mrs. Court, however unexpected — and however unwelcome."

She smiled, in appreciation, the slightly worn smile of one who had long seen through the—joke. "So that's the attitude you're taking! Well I don't blame you. You have your own attachments, and I like you all the better for sticking to them. But sometimes even the most whole-hearted of generals find it necessary to parley with the enemy."

She smiled again, and passed a hand over her face in a gesture as resigned as it was weary. "Forgive me; I forgot that the simile of warfare was originally mine. It was a theatrical invention, and if it recoiled on me I can't complain."

"I still don't see," said Mickey Dennis, standing stiffly behind his desk, "what useful purpose this visit can possibly serve."

"No, I daresay you don't; but I do. I want to ask you some very important question, Mr. Dennis; important to me, that is."

"Won't you sit down? asked Mickey, with no very good grace, and came out from behind his bulwark to settle her in a chair.

"Thank you. How we can talk in comfort."

She looked round the little office with some interest, because it had to do with her mission. Here, if Mrs. Garland told the truth, were interviewed the unfortunates who wished to escape from the slums of Stanchester into the ideal village of Court Brandon. The office, where such hopes were settled or doomed, was by no means a rich place, the furnishings were strictly business-like, and the staff consisted simply of these two very young men.

"I know you must be surprised to find me here in Stanchester," she said. "I came home last night, and without telling anyone where I was going; because I wanted to know a few things about which it seemed to me I hadn't taken sufficient trouble. Some of them I've already found out, down there in Court Brandon."

She raised her eyes suddenly, and met Mickey's eyes full. He had not yet found her measure, and did not know how far to trust her, but that glance was some thing of a revelation.

"I don't hate you, now. I know you must do, far more than he does. He can afford not to hate me, you see, and you—can't. But you want to help him, don't you? I mean, apart from wanting to defeat me. You can help him by answering the questions I have to ask; and remember, they were big enough to send me hurrying back here without a word of warning to anyone. I don't care what you think of me; but if you value him at all, you'll listen to me."

"What are these questions?" asked Mickey, not commuting himself to answer.

Catherine leaned forward, and her eyes were shining.

"Tell me, honestly, why did Adam Probert build in Court Brandon?"

He was silent for a moment; then he said: "You've asked that in the village; haven't you?"

"Yes."

"And they told you? What? That it was for what he could get out of it?"

"They told me that he gets nothing out of it. They told me that they pay for their houses a price which cannot possibly afford him any profit. I've seen for myself, now, what sort of houses they are, and I know that he has treated them well. But I want the reason. Was it really out of the greatness of his heart that he created that garden city?"

"If you like to put it that way," said Mickey Dennis, breathing hard, "yes, it was. You want the truth; very well, you can have it. On the bungalows he's still building, on the other side of the valley road, he just clears his expenses with a shade to spare; on the houses he loses just about as much, for possible more. In other words, and taking it by and large, he's running the whole show at a loss. That's how much he's making for himself out of it."

"And the people who get them?" said Catherine, "How are they selected?"

"Most of them come to this office. By now they know the procedure through every slum in Stanchester. If there are any I consider unworthy of handing on to him, I cross them off—myself; and there are; there have been thousands, people with money enough to buy a good house in the suburbs, trying to get into Court Brandon and save their cash. You'd be surprised, Mrs. Court, at the length people like that will go to get a decent house for nothing; but none of them managed it. We're very careful. Only those who needed them, and needed them badly, got those houses. And the last voice on every case was his. A few came from Court Brandon itself, he gave the verdict on those, too."

"I see," said Catherine, with lowered eyes, "thank you. And the buses that take them into Stanchester; are they his, too?"

"Yes, they're his."

"And what was he planning to build on the Holly Lane fields?"

"They were to be a recreation ground. The foundations for the clubhouse and the swimming-bath were already cut when—"

"When I had them stopped; quite! What else was there to be?"

"A gymnasium—a little boating pool—a library — tennis courts, a bowling green— and garden, of course; and anything else he happened to think of would have gone into the plans, of course."

"I see," she said again. "And —this is almost the last question—what did he want with my glade? You remember he tried to buy it."

The famous Sweet Caporal Girl

● Her charming face and figure have long been symbolic of the largest selling brand of cigarettes in Canada. The spectacular popularity of Sweet Caporals is due both to their quality and to the consistent newspaper advertising done for them over a period of 25 years — the early advertising is still remembered by many smokers.

Mr. Picobac

● Picobac Tobacco was introduced through the genial "Mr. Picobac", to sell high quality Canadian Burley tobacco to Canadian pipe smokers. This was accomplished almost entirely through newspaper advertising, and today Picobac is Canada's largest selling pipe tobacco.

The Two Old Chums

● Old Chum smoking tobacco, popularized by the famous "Old Chums", has for half a century held a steady place in the affections of Canadian pipe smokers, and this position has been consistently fortified by newspaper advertising.

Faces made Famous by NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

● One of Canada's oldest and largest users of newspaper advertising, Imperial Tobacco Company has found the employment of "trade characters" a very great aid in promoting the sale of these leading brands. This success in itself affords ample testimony to the effectiveness of Canada's daily newspapers as a medium for productive advertising.

Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited

The growth of Imperial Tobacco Company is the result of the adoption of progressive policies which are fundamental to success. These include (1) the making of high quality products, (2) pursuing broad-visioned and enlightened sales policies, (3) doing sincere and constructive advertising. Ever since its inception, Imperial Tobacco Company has advertised in the Canadian daily newspapers consistently and persistently. This, with its resulting volume of sales, is in itself the best possible evidence that daily newspaper space, properly utilized to promote worthy products, brings the desired results.

"Black and Blue" Monday All Around in Both Leagues As Players Receive Injuries

FOUR TEAMS COMING

Giants, Cubs, Dodgers and Cardinals Fighting it Out for Second Spot

By BILL BONI

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If the experts begin reading New York Giants out of the National League pennant race Monday, grant them ample justification.

At a time when the team should be at its strength in the park on Cincinnati Reds' seven-game lead and protect its very last-game bulge over Chicago Cubs, Infielder Lou Chiozza is out for the rest of the season with a broken leg; Shortstop Bill Jurges is "doing time" for rolling with an umpire; First-catching Catcher Harry Danning, the team's third-best hitter, is in hospital with a leg infection, and Manager Bill Terry is pretty much out of personal infield combinations.

With Chiozza, both bones in his left leg fractured, definitely lost, Terry is down to bed-rock. Already he has Hal Ott, a left-field regular, playing third base; Burgess Whitehead, a utility infielder, has been shifted over to shortstop and Alex Kampouris, less than sensational, doing full-time duty on second base.

Terry Can Master Mind

It remains to be seen what the Giant master-mind can or will do. George Myatt, 1939 rookie phenom, would come in handy in a spot like this, but Myatt may not be ready to go in for some knee cartilage in place and certainly is in no condition to play regularly.

Meanwhile the Reds are drawing away and the Cubs are closing in on the Terrymen. The combination of Giants' 4-3 defeat by St. Louis yesterday with the Cubs' 11-2 shellacking of the Dodgers and the Reds' 4-0 shutout of Boston Braves in Cincinnati seven games in front of the Giants, a game and a half in the van behind, and the Dodgers and Cardinals only a game out of second place.

Black and Blue Monday

It was a "black and blue" Monday all around. In addition to the Chiozza casualty, Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo, from which the latter escaped without injury, Shortstop Billy Jurges of the Giants, took a beaner and Buddy Hassett, of the Dodgers, was winged by a pitched ball in the same game; the Reds' Ernie Lombardi was put out with a spike wound in the hallway through the next four-bit ticket window Buddy Walters pinned on the Bees; Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox was knocked unconscious as his car came to the end of a 13-game winning streak at the hands of the Detroit Tigers, and even the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio was hit with a pitched ball by Bobby Feller of the Indians.

That wasn't the only ball Feller didn't control, though. He hit just enough balls for the Indians to give him 3-0 behind Bump Hadley's five-hit pitching. Together with the Red Sox defeat, that raised the champions' margin to seven games.

In the day's games, Coach Klein ravahls hitting streak to 18 straight games and Cincy walloped with two homers that helped Pitcher Bargo to a 6-4 defeat of the Phillies in the National League, and Athletics outslugged the Browns, 11-8, in the junior league. The Senators and White Sox were rained out.

FRANK GENOVESE TAGS HIS MAN

Toronto Boxer Knocks Out K.O. Carson of Buffalo at Des Moines, Ia.

Des Moines, Ia., July 18 (AP)— Toronto's Frankie Genovese has another knockout on the credit side of his record.

Genovese, 143, knocked K. O. Carson, Buffalo, 141, over the ring last night before finishing him with a right hook to the jaw in 2:12 of the third round of their scheduled 10-rounder.

The end came for Carson when his attempted rally ended on Frankie's right fist and the negro bounced onto the canvas and rolled to the canvas. He was carried to his corner.

Yesterday's Stars

Bucky Walters, Reds — pitched four, hit 4-0 shutout against Bees for his 15th victory of season and 11th complete game.

Earl Averill and George Tebbetts, Tigers—former clouted two home runs and latter homer, double and single in rout of Red Sox.

Wally Moses, Athletics—His three doubles and single led way in 11-8 decision over Browns.

Bump Hadley, Yankees — Outpitched Bob Feller, giving Indians five hits and two bases on balls in 3-0 shutout.

Chuck Klein, Pirates— Two home runs against Phillies ran his hitting streak to 18 straight games.

PRIZE ROOKIE OUT

One of the best major league rookies of the year, Eddie Miller, ABOVE second baseman for Cincinnati Reds, may be lost to his team for the rest of the season after colliding with teammate Al Simmons in chasing a Texas leaguer. A small bone in Miller's leg was broken in Miller's leg in the collision.

LATTA DEFEATS SHANNONVILLE 3-2

Winners Come Strong After Being Held Scoreless for Four Frames

Foxboro, July 18. — (Special)— Minus three of their regular players including Juby, their star right-hander, Latta baseballers successfully invaded Latta on Monday evening for last Wednesday's postponed game and after holding the home-town nine scoreless for four innings, saw the Latta lads start hitting the ball to pull out a 3-2 decision in the last inning. By merit of this victory, Latta temporarily elevated themselves into second position, over Shannonville and with only two games remaining to be played there is a possibility of a three way tie for the extra spot with Carrollton being away out in front.

If Foxboro take their game with Shannonville on the former team's diamond on Wednesday night and also beat Latta, in the re-play of last Friday's the game, a three way tie between Carrollton take Latta in their remaining scheduled game, the latter will be in a sensible spot. Latta, Shannonville and Foxboro all tied for the coveted position. Should mean that one team would draw a bye into the playdowns while the two other teams would battle it out for the remaining playoff position, which Carrollton so far in the league, however, they will have nothing at stake on Wednesday evening when they visit Latta, and they might very easily take the league leaders and into second position, leaving Shannonville and Foxboro to fight it out.

Second String Hurler

With their second string hurler on the mound, Latta scattered nine hits up behind him, Shannonville kept the Latta boys off the base paths for four innings on Monday evening as Barberstock, the visiting hurler, had the Latta boys down with only two hits up to the last inning. Sheffield Hall started on the mound for the home team and after a scoreless first two innings, ran into difficulties in the second as three singles in a row, followed by a base on balls to Cook forced in a run. Again in the third, the Shannonville nine filled the bases on two hits and a walk, with Miracle driving in their second run with a single. Dunning then went in to hurl for the winners and held the visitors scoreless for the last three innings. Latta won the game in the last inning when Cook got on a stolen base allowed 'Dinny' Hall to get aboard and work his way around to score from there much needed run.

Although outhit eight to four, the winners managed to bunch their blades in the fifth to break up the ballgame with Joe Marsh and Sayers, for the winners, being the only batsmen to get a hit apiece, Marsh getting two doubles, and Sayers a single and a double. For the losers, Cook and Marsden each had a hit, getting a brace of singles, while Cook got a double.

The teams—Shannonville — Cook: ss; Reid: 2b; Dee: 3b; Wouters — p; Sayers: 1b; Snider: cf; Miracle lf; Barberstock p and Barnhard: rf. Latta—Perks 1b; Marsh ss, Grower: cf; C. Hall 2b; Callaghan c and rf; Golden lb; G. Hall and Dunning c; Plejs rf; Sayers lf and Hudgins c.

CEMENTMEN HAND SHELL "OILERS" SECOND DEFEAT

Dracup 'Firemen' Eliminate Juniors from Playoff Berth

BAWDEN VICTIM

Ace Hurler for Oilers Loses His First Game of Season

Dracup Tire and Point Anne "cementmen" won the scheduled games in a dual bill of city softball last night, the former eliminating the Oilmens Dairy kids from any possible chance of obtaining a playoff berth and in beating the kids 8-6 at the Flats, the "firemen" assured themselves of a post season series play-off in the city series.

Down at Point Anne, however, with little to do then gain sweet revenge and also to hand the Shell "Oilers" their second loss of the season, the "cementmen" downed the others 9-5. "Dingy" Laffman beat Johnnie Bawden in a well-pitched game. Incidentally last night's loss was the first registered against Bawden this season, Bawden having previously won eight consecutive games without lasting defeat. In losing the "oilers" left themselves open to being tied with Corbys A.C. providing the latter win over the Bridge Street Nine in a game to Dracups in a postponed game.

Wynne Stars Again

Down at Point Anne the "cementmen" went to work on Johnnie Bawden early and often, getting the heart of the batting parade at the halfway mark. Hits by Bennett and Whalen gave the homesters two in the third, while Whitehead drove Genereaux across for another counter in the "cementmen's" fourth. In the top half of the fourth Ronsky walked on and by O'Neill and Bawden, but Point Anne came back to count two more in Whalen, Laffman and Genereaux hit in succession. Bawden tried in vain to help his own cause with a home run, with O'Neill aboard, in the sixth and came to bat again in the seventh to smash out another four base clout. Also scoring after as the "Oilers" last inning rally fell short of knotting the count.

The "cementmen" welcomed Bawden's deliveries for fifteen base hits as Laffman hurled eight-bit ball, Genereaux getting his fifth hit in his own offence. Genereaux had four hits in as many tries for Point Anne while Whitehead had three, with Whalen and Bennett getting two each. O'Neill counted two one-base blows for the losers.

Score by innings:
Shell-Oilzmen .. 000 102 002—5 8 3
Point Anne .. 021 201 01x—7 15 2
Batteries — Bawden, Laffman and Green; Shell-Aajmaa, Bawden and Howbolham.

Juniors Lose.

When old Lady Luck turned her back on Cy Young's tender aged Citizens Dairy kids at the Flats last night the juniors lost a heart-breaking 8-6 decision to the Dracup "firemen". After delay owing to the non-appearance of league umpires the game was late in starting and progressed into a farce comedy as opposing players and coaches virtually battled the umpires and caused no end of delay with useless controversies.

Each team collected three runs in the initial frame as Steve Hook, tossing them for the Juniors, hooked up in a hurlers' duel with "Count" Dracup, on the mound for the "firemen" from that point. Dracups got on Hook for four more runs in the third, the result of a walk, two errors and a brace of hard blasts. The juniors pulled down the firemen's lead in the sixth and scored two more in the seventh as Mansfield, Doherty and Clare, bit. The kids got three aboard again in the eighth, but Dracup hurled himself out of a difficult spot.

The juniors outhit the Dracups 8-6, not a single Dracup batsman getting more than a lucky off Hook's deliveries. Mansfield with three safeties led the kids on the attack, Doherty running catch of Sinfield's hard drive in the fifth was the feature play.

Score by innings:
Citizens Dairy .. 300 001 200—6 8 5
Dracup Tires .....304 000 10x—8 6 3
Batteries—Hook and Mansfield; Dempsetry; Dracup, Dracup and Tuttle.

Dizzy Dean Returns To Brilliant Form In Pop-Off League

By TOM SILER

Chicago, July 18 (AP) — Dizzy Dean may not be his old self on the pitching mound, but he returned to brilliant form in the pop-off league today with a verbal blast at Cubby Bluejacket, Chicago Cubs manager.

Hartnett sent Dean home from New York Sunday with his left arm gashed under mysterious circumstances and o' Diz didn't like it a mite.

"I don't belong here, I belong with the team," Dizzy told reporters. "What are they doing, making a great out of me? I wonder whatta behind it all, anyway.

"I know the Cubs are nuts for a winning streak on this trip, and if disciplining me for something I didn't do will help—why, hell, I'm glad to co-operate. But I should be with the team."

The version of how Dizzy cut his arm rolled in from all sides. It was reported he had been in domestic trouble, had been fighting, had slipped on a soapy hotel lobby floor, and in-stitum.

Reporis Silly Is Claim.

But Dean said these reports were "the silliest things I ever heard of" explaining that he scraped his arm against the corner of a glass-top table as he reached for a phone in the dark in his hotel room Saturday night.

Dean will remain here until the Cubs return from their eastern trip. The team now has only twenty players, five shy of the player limit.

The latest injury cropped up yesterday when it was revealed Southpaw Earl Whitehill suffered a broken bone in his pitching hand during batting practice at Philadelphia last Tuesday night.

Outfielder Hank Leiber is in Philadelphia taking treatments for a sore leg and Rookie Infielder Leonard Merullo has gone home to rest a bad throwing arm. The other vacancy will be filled by Bill Nicholson, a Chattanooga Southern Association outfielder scheduled to report in August.

JERSEY GIANTS BEST PROSPECTS TO WIN PENNANT

Team Has Consistency and Something That Carries Them Over Tough Spots

By TORONTO WINS

Carl Fischer Hurls Five-Hitter to Defeat Syracuse Chiefs 5-4

The Jersey Giants may not be the best ball club that ever won the International League pennant—in fact they may not even be the club to win the pennant at all—but they have two things that make them the best prospects in the circuit right now; consistency and the extra something that carries them past the tough spots.

The Little Giants' longest winning streak this season has been only four games and the longest losing streak five straight. Yet when their hold on the league lead has been threatened, they've risen to their greatest heights.

They demonstrated that point last night when they walloped Buffalo 10-7. The Bisons were on the crest of a winning streak that had given them a virtual stranglehold on second place, games off the lead, when last night's clash started. And they humbled Cook, the league's leading ace, into flinger who had a personal victory jinx of four.

But the Giants belted Cook out in three innings to get a lead they never lost, 4-0, behind the five-hit southpaw flinging of Carl Fischer. Then the Little Orioles bowled over Montreal again, 10-3, to climb within a game and a half of the Bisons. Fischer and Jake Mooty wagged a good battle in the night finale, but Mooty served up the game with two runs in the seventh when Frank Reiber's fly was settled in Buffalo's favor. Victory was the fourth straight and young Roy Bruner had an easy time with the route when he received 13-bit backing. Bruner's mates were paced by Buck Jordan and Bill Lillard and a couple of timely wallops by Nick Etten that drove in four runs.

The Gold Cup to be raced for at the Rotary Club Power Boat races on Otvic Holiday is to have a novel background. The cup is being presented by the Belleville Sargeant Lock Company and will be the best looking trophy ever offered. After being polished the trophy will be given into the hands of Historian Jack McPhee and it took after the gold plating and engraving. Ordinarily this Gold Cup are not made of such a valuable metal as bronze and it naturally follows by gold-plating bronze a fine finish of the bright golden color will result. The fifteen power boat races will have trophies donated by the Quinte Motel and C. A. Cameron, M.P. We believe this is the first time an American power boat association race has seen the major Gold Cup prizes completely manufactured in the community, where the race is to be held.

In three classes attempts to shatter the existing world's power boat records will be made. Jackie "Pops" Cooper, with his Tops 3rd will try for better his own world's record of something like 57.45 miles. Don Wood, of Des Moines, Iowa, sent in his entry recently and assured secretary Ken Colling he would attempt to lower the existing world's record for Class "B" boats in the 225 class, the Tops 3rd being a Class "C" craft in the same class replacement. Lloyd Hicks, of this city, with his Baby Eugene, will try to establish a world's record in the 210 or "D" class, which is 44.75 miles per hour. Already Mr. Hicks has driven the Baby Eugene 47 miles per hour, but that was before she exploded some weeks ago. Mr. Hicks' craft has been completely rebuilt since the mishap by accidents or mishaps, he expects to shatter the existing class "D" record on Civic Holiday.

Taking into consideration there will be a complete day of racing, the additional three attempts to break existing world's records will assure one of the outstanding events of the current season in American Power Boat racing. Incidentally the Belleville Rotary Club had to get permission to stage this event before having the 225 class Gold Cup race and drivers aspiring for the year's world's speed boat crowning. Only a race in order to retain their standing as a member of the association can be on the continent are recorded by Dorsey Brooks, secretary of the A.P.B.A., in New York City and tabulated at the end of the season. Representatives of the American Power Boat Association, as well as the National Outboard Racing Association will be present to officiate and make the races as near to the respect and detail. During these sanctioned races all boats must be identified by lettering of which we will have more to say in the near future.

Do you remember when, for getting into an argument that was the talk of the town, John Rizzo, rookie Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder, was fined $25 by President Ford Frick of the National League last year ago today, Rizzo had rushed into bench during a game between the Pirates and New York Giants in protest a called strike on Jim Tobin. Irate fans in the stands bombarded Umpire Larry Goetz with pop bottles when he banished Rizzo.

Like the proverbial pitcher that went to the well too often Rizzo went to the pitcher's mound once too often for the umpiring crew did not have expected to have gone on indefinitely without being defeated and eight consecutive wins is no mean effort in intermediate "A" mashball. At any rate, the team to ultimately beat him was none other than the Pirates' Class "Cementmen", the team that both Rizzo and Frank Sedore were with last year before organizing the 'Oilers' this spring. Naturally the whippet speed flowed around Ox Point went home quite happy over the whole thing last night after the 'Cementmen' beat the 'Oilers' 9-5. In losing the night the shell crowd left themselves open for a possible tie with Corbys A. C. but we fear it is only a possibility and will not reach the actuality.

Over at the Flats last night the Juniors lost to Dracups and in so doing lost any chance of getting into the post-season city series. Actually the kids were out-lucked from whatever angle one looks at the game. On the field they did not get any too many of the breaks and although Steve Hook allowed only six hits he was chalked up with a loss, as the hits each figured prominently and six. Silly arguments crept into the game until it came to the point of ridicule and all of the umpire-baiting and quibbling was really over nothing at all.

Whenever Dinny Dean makes a suspicious move, the pressss roll for extras, because "Ole Diz" is quite a figure when it comes to the news hounds. On Sunday night Mrs. Dean's No. 1 son sustained a scratch on his left arm, a non-superficial wound. However, when the Yankee pressss rolled 'em off on Monday, and had been in most everything with the possible exception of murder, Friday, however, we find there was really nothing serious happened, Dizzy merely scraped his arm while reaching for the 'phone when brother Paul ("Daffy) called. Of course what Dizzy has got on operating ends of a telephone wire, most anything can result.

On Saturday the Queens University athletic board will make their new rugby coach for the vacancy left upon the resigning of Ted Reeve. If he will accept the position and can continue practicing his medical profession at the Ontario Hospital, don't be at all surprised if Dr. Harry (Red) Batstone, M.D., and the management, with Bob Elliott, a teammate residing in Kingston, as his under-assistant. Both Dr. Batstone and Bob Elliott are well-known in Belleville, having played baseball here with the old Kingston Ponies.

SHORTS SCRAPS — Wednesday, Sept. 20th, has been the date set for the Loyalist Cup Golf at Briggs Stadium, Detroit..... Whipping Louis is a tough enough job, but Billy Conn and Kenny Overlin, Pasadena, has 20 rounds in which to tire the champ out. Conn will make only the first time since the Dempsey-Tunney bout that a title bout has been scheduled over the 20 round route..... With their mid-summer slump behind them the Yankees beat Bob Feller and the Indians for three in a row yesterday..... And at the same time the Tigers humbled the Red Sox 13-6 and the Chicks' key outfit's lucky streak..... Toronto Maple Leafs will sponsor the St. Boniface Reds at the Flats this winter, which reminds us we have been really good news for the district hockey fans coming up; and the Intermediate A's expected if this cool weather continues.

FOUR TEAMS COMING

Giants, Cubs, Dodgers and Cardinals Fighting it Out for Second Spot

By BILL BONI

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If the experts begin reading New York Giants out of the National League pennant race Monday, grant them ample justification.

At a time when the team should be at its strength in the park on Cincinnati Reds' seven-game lead and protect its very last-game bulge over Chicago Cubs, Infielder Lou Chiozza is out for the rest of the season with a broken leg; Shortstop Bill Jurges is "doing time" for rolling with an umpire; First-catching Catcher Harry Danning, the team's third-best hitter, is in hospital with a leg infection, and Manager Bill Terry is pretty much out of personal infield combinations.

With Chiozza, both bones in his left leg fractured, definitely lost, Terry is down to bed-rock. Already he has Hal Ott, a left-field regular, playing third base; Burgess Whitehead, a utility infielder, has been shifted over to shortstop and Alex Kampouris, less than sensational, doing full-time duty on second base.

Terry Can Master Mind

It remains to be seen what the Giant master-mind can or will do. George Myatt, 1939 rookie phenom, would come in handy in a spot like this, but Myatt may not be ready to go in for some knee cartilage in place and certainly is in no condition to play regularly.

Meanwhile the Reds are drawing away and the Cubs are closing in on the Terrymen. The combination of Giants' 4-3 defeat by St. Louis yesterday with the Cubs' 11-2 shellacking of the Dodgers and the Reds' 4-0 shutout of Bustin Braves in Cincinnati seven games in front of the Giants, a game and a half in the van behind, and the Dodgers and Cardinals only a game out of second place.

Black and Blue Monday

It was a "black and blue" Monday all around. In addition to the Chiozza casualty, Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo, from which the latter escaped without injury, Shortstop Billy Jurges of the Giants, took a beaner and Buddy Hassett, of the Dodgers, was winged by a pitched ball in the same game; the Reds' Ernie Lombardi was put out with a spike wound in the hallway through the next four-bit ticket window Buddy Walters pinned on the Bees; Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox was knocked unconscious as his car came to the end of a 13-game winning streak at the hands of the Detroit Tigers, and even the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio was hit with a pitched ball by Bobby Feller of the Indians.

That wasn't the only ball Feller didn't control, though. He hit just enough balls for the Indians to give him 3-0 behind Bump Hadley's five-hit pitching. Together with the Red Sox defeat, that raised the champions' margin to seven games.

In the day's games, Coach Klein ravahls hitting streak to 18 straight games and Cincy walloped with two homers that helped Pitcher Bargo to a 6-4 defeat of the Phillies in the National League, and Athletics outslugged the Browns, 11-8, in the junior league. The Senators and White Sox were rained out.

BASEBALL BATTLE THAT BROUGHT SUSPENSIONS AND FINES

One of the most violent games to take place in the major leagues in some years occurred between New York Giants and Cincinnati Reds on July 4, resulting in 10-day suspensions and fines of $150 to Umpire George Magerkurth, Shortstop Bill Jurges of the Giants and fines of $50 to Catcher Harry Danning and Manager Bill Terry of the same team. In this picture at the left is Zeke Bonura, another Giant, and behind him Frenchy Bordagaray scores for the Reds. It was on the baseball's scoring on home run is Harry Craft, who started all the trouble by hitting a ball into the stands that the umpire ruled fair, but the Giants to a man called foul. Then the trouble started.

"SUCH A BO THER THIS BUSINESS OF FIGHTING"

Probably one of the most touching photographs ever taken of the prize ring is this one from London, showing with placid countenance at the ceiling, thinking thoughts about-who-knows-what, and listening to the gentle lull of the unemotional cries of the infamous Irish Thrush, who makes Dominican realities mince the ring and thus stirs up many arguments as to whether his pugilistic or vocal efforts are the worst. It is usually agreed that his singing is to be preferred to his fighting although the bout during which this picture was taken in which his opponent was Eddie Phillips, had an edge on their previous encounter. Eddie scored a first-round knockout this time, whereas in their last meeting Dad had precluded the possibility of this by knocking himself out!! Jolly, what?

SLUMP STRIKES AT WRONG TIME

Amsterdam Feeling Pinch As Oswego Makes Drive for Top Rung

(By The Canadian Press)

A slump, while never welcomed by a baseball club, couldn't have struck at a worse time for the loop-leading Amsterdam Rugmakers in the Canadian-American League. Just when second-place Oswego Netherlands were starting to get hit, Rugmakers hit the skids.

In the last week, Amsterdam has won only two of five games played. Many a time this scarcely would have affected their margin at the top but in this case Oswego seized the opportunity and won five straight games, pairing Rugmakers lead to a scant three games.

The nets lopped off a full game without aid yesterday by travelling to Amsterdam and outslugging Rugmakers 8-5. The two meet again today in the second of the two-game series and another victory for Oswego would make them strong contenders to drag Amsterdam from the top.

Verdict to Oswego

Twelve hits, including homers by Fleishman and Zagurni, were walloped by nets to tumble Rugmakers in the first meeting. Each clan needed two hurlers to get through, replied with eight baseblows, but an outburst, good for six runs in the fourth swung the verdict for Oswego.

Dispute was drawing near over another first division berth meanwhile when Rome Colonels swept a doubleheader, 10-7 and 5-4, from Ottawa Senators. At Ogdensburg Colts bowed 4-1 to the Glovers at Glovertville, the results left Colts with just a one-game margin over Colonels for third place.

At Utica, the cell-dwelling Braves rallied for one run in the eighth inning and a 3-2 decision over Cornwall Bisons. Toner and Martin combined to pitch the victory allowing Bisons 11 hits but scattering them better than the eight granted by Polly Veach of Cornwall.

SEES NO PERILS OF HIGH LIFE

'Miss Michigan Aviation' Makes Trip to New York Likes Fun and Adventure

New York, July 18—(AP)— A winsome red-haired girl from Michigan found slight cause for worry today in the perils of New York "night life" against which the mothers and daughters of America have been warned by the Governor of her State, Lorens D. Dickinson.

Willo Sheridan, 22, of Detroit, whom he named "Miss Michigan Aviation" to represent the state's aircraft industry in a week's visit at the New York World's Fair, said she had not noticed many of the dangers which the 80-year-old Governor described as bringing unprotected girls in proximity to "hellish brink."

At first, the Governor's warning about the perils of "night life" "scared me to death" said Willo.

"I think I'll go on a special investigation tour to find out if it really is as bad as he claims," she added.

She planned to visit several night clubs during her visit, but made it clear she intended to be moderate. She has an occasional cocktail and a cigarette, but said she "knew when to stop."

"I like fun and adventure," she said, "and I intend to get it while I am here." She thinks Governor Dickinson is "real fine," and she doesn't expect him to view the world the way she sees it.

Chicago White Sox Owner Gravely Ill

Eagle River, Wis., July 18 (AP)— J. Louis Comiskey, 54-year-old owner of Chicago White Sox was gravely ill today at his summer estate, near here.

Dr. Russell Oldfield, attending physician, began administeriy oxygen to the baseball magnate late last night. Dr. Oldfield said, however, Comiskey appeared "brighter" and that they "see some hope".

A heart ailment, which has bothered him for years, was aggravated recently by a cold and complications. Comiskey inherited the White Sox from his father, Charles Comiskey, who died here in 1931 at the summer retreat.

OFFICIALS LET OUT FOR ECONOMY

Amherstburg, Ont., July 18 (CP)—Dismissal of Tax Collector Leo Grondin and Town Foreman David Pelzyplcza as an economy measure was announced today by Mayor N. A. Marra. The action said a majority of council members had approved the dismissals.

'WONDER DOCTOR' DIES OF ACCIDENT

Linz, Germany, July 18 (AP)— Dr. Eugen Schon, 65, known as "the wonder doctor" of Gallspach, died yesterday of an injury suffered in his laboratory. He worked with high frequency electrical current in treating his patients.

The Biggest Liar' is Subject

New Toronto, July 18—(CP)— A big appearing at a local gospel hall reads: "Come and hear what is the biggest liar in town." The exposure is planned for Friday night.

Weak on your forehead? We don't know whether this will fix it up, but if you get sufficiently energetic you might try this method. Adrian Quist, star of the Australian Davis Cup team, really lays into the ball to send one whizzing across the net. Purists of the game would be inclined to criticize this violent form of getting things done, but Mr. Quist finds it quite effective. Sufficiently so, at least, that he and Jack Bromwich, who makes up the Australian team, are favorites to remove the international trophy ball to send one whizzing across the net. Purists of the game would be mer.

THE OLD DAYS

By OSCAR DEWSON

A long afternoon stretched ahead of her. Lida Wheaton curled up on her chaise-longue and stared at the ceiling. There were plenty of good shows, but she had seen several lately and they were beginning to pall.

Six years ago a good show once a month was a rare treat.

That was before Ned had invented the clever device that had controlled the flow of gasoline by a big percentage, but at the same time gave the maximum of power.

She could down and see the Waldorf exhibit of antiques, but even that wasn't interesting today. It was strange that with everything money could buy, she should be so restless and discontented.

Had Ned been coming home for dinner there would be something to look forward to.

This morning he had said when he kissed her good-by:

"Won't be home for dinner tonight, dear. Sorry to leave you all alone to the pomp and ceremony of that Western-faced butler and the maids. But I'll try to get in early so we can rest together that new book I brought home. It's been months since we have read together as we did in the old days."

He had kissed her again as he turned to leave.

"Little bird in a golden cage—like that, Lida? Could you go back to the old days—the little apartment and the cheap meals, and Mrs. Hockenstock and Lida knew always dressed for dinner."

She was always uncomfortable dining alone since they had this butler.

When Ned was there, they forgot him in discussion of the latest happenings, interesting things in their day's doings, their plans for the future.

Four-thirty. Six years before she would have been thinking about dinner.

She recalled Ned's fondness for sirloin steak—and Bermuda onions.

She could see him again across the oaken table from her, laughing and talking—he did that so seldom now. And she called him, he would emerge from the sun-room which he had appropriated for his work-shop, his hair disheveled, his face smudged with black, his eyes alight, and they would discuss the progress of his invention; prophesying just what had become a reality six years before—the big home, aeroplane, cars, luxuries, leisure.

Ned thought she was happy in the new life and she would not tell him differently; the new life that had taken her husband from her—but had given her everything else that woman's heart yearns for.

And then a strange desire took possession of her.

She would have time before dinner to drive over to the old apartment they had moved out of six years before.

She was just plain homesick for it!

She wanted to see again the worn narrow stairs to the second floor, the middle mail boxes and the iron-grilled railing of the porch; the sun-flooded living room with its shabby floors, and the little hallway leading back from the dining room to the sun room and kitchen on the rear.

She had always been thankful the sun-room was on the rear when Ned had needed a room of his own in which to work, and such a disorderly, untidy, littered room it had been with its long pallet of flat bed, big drawing-board on an easel, the proportions of which were almost as large as the room itself; tools and papers on the window-seat, chairs and floor..... They had always kept the door closed when company came. And then the two bedrooms, one on either side of the hall, the guest room papered in pink and green and their own in soft gray with pink roses scrambling through it.

Jasper, the uniformed chauffeur, seemed a little surprised when she had given him the address.

In fact, when they had stopped before the apartment, he had scanned it from top to story to street floor, and then she had decided to take a taxi home and dismissed him.

Jasper made her feel as uncomfortable as did the butler.

"Oh, yarm, this apartment is rented," said the stout voluble janitress.

"Most a year back, a gentleman took it to use sort of irregular, Don't know who he is. Has a Jap clean it up and do his cooking when he is here, y'know. Never has any mail so didn't put up his card. Pays cash, y'know. Yes'm the one above is for rent—the very same apartment only on the next floor. Needs some decoratin' but that can be arranged. Lots of sun and air. Would you mind lookin' at it yourself, ma'am? I've got lumbago something frightful.... can't walk upstairs hardly, and my husband is workin' days. Head limits, y'know."

Lida walked slowly up the stairs to the second floor.

She had climbed them hundreds of times before and it all seemed so natural, although they were not as clean as Mrs. Murphy, the janitress of the old days, kept them.

She stopped at the window at the end of the hall and looked out over the backs. It was the hour she had begun to watch for Ned in the old days.

To get a better view of the corner at which he alighted from the street car or subway she would come out into the hall and stand at this window.

She didn't watch for Ned now. He was always admitted by the Butler. There was no window from which she could watch him roll up to the house in his closed car.

She remembered how she would stand at the head of these same steps and wait for him, and as they would squeeze through the doorway, their arms about each other, he would sniff hungrily and exclaim, "Steak! Onions! There's where I like my chef again and then we'll eat."

Ned never mentioned being hungry these days.

She turned and walked down the hall, and then her hand was on the door of 3B.

She pushed it gently and it opened. She did not expect it would.

She was just pretending.

The living-room was strangely familiar, the furnishings being all ranged almost identically the same as she had done when they had lived here. Evidently, the tenant was not in. Summoning up courage, she tiptoed across the floor to the hallway. She peeped into the gray-papered bedroom; the pink one across the hall.

The kitchen was disorderly.....

But she must see the sun-room, the littered old sun-room in which Ned had made the fortune that had placed her in the gilded cage on Fifth Avenue.

Suddenly—a noise! A chair scraped hurriedly, a man's feet crossing a bare floor. She was conscious of a big bulk in her throat.

What could she say?

How could she explain?

She looked up, swallowed hard, and found Ned looking down at her: New with his hair disheveled, a smudge across his cheek, his eyes shining, his hands very dirty, on her shoulders.

"—and I'll run down to Otto's and get steak and a Bermuda onion and strawberry tarts and coffee, and you can go straight back into your workroom. Or would you close the door, Neddie, for company may come (laughing), and you can stay there until I call you for dinner; but I wagn you, Ned Wheaton! Don't you dare! Don't invent anything that will make you more money, for I am tired of being a bird in a gilded cage without my mate! Oh, Ned, I just feel as though we have both come home after a long time away, and please promise me, that when you run away over here to work and rest and cream, you'll let me come too and we'll live the old days together."

WALL STREET

New York, July 18 (A.P.) — Steel shares took the leadership today in a stock market rally in which leaders advanced fractions to two points or more points, even more in a few cases.

A big accumulation of buying orders awaited the opening and for many minutes the ticker tape was unable to keep up. Profit taking on shaved prices in many instances.

Brokers said much buying was coming from outside New York while offerings were made by Wall Street traders. Yesterday's big mark-up, the heaviest in many months, is believed to have brought public support into the market.

Among the prominent stocks to gain were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, United Aircraft, Johns Manville, Owens Illinois, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical.

Sears Roebuck and C. J. Penny at one time touched new highs for 1939.

In a broadly improved Canadian group fractional gains were scored by Lake Shore, Distillers, Hiram Walker, McIntyre Porcupine and Canadian Pacific. Dominion 49 moved evenly.

FORESEE OTTAWA FEDERAL DISTRICT

Committee of City Council Will Study Proposal That Capital be Federal Area

Ottawa, July 18—(CP)—A committee of the Ottawa City Council headed by Mayor Stanley Lewis will study a proposal to make the capital a federal district such as Washington, Canberra in Australia and several capitals of South American Republics.

For almost half a century the question of a federal district has been before Ottawa rate payers and at least two reports, one by Sir Herbert Holt, have been submitted to the government. These will be studied by the committee in the light of present conditions.

The council went on record last night in favor of the committee but the aldermen made it clear in so doing it was only to study the proposal, they were not endorsing the principle of a federal district. Several aldermen advanced the view it would not lift the load of taxes on city real estate contending taxes in Washington were as high as here.

Beautification

The ambitious program of expropriating city property for federal government purposes and for beautification of the city centre has put the question of a federal district again before the people and city premier Ald. George Perley to move for a committee.

During the past few years the Dominion has taken over $13,500,000 of Ottawa property, mostly business blocks, and several additional blocks are mated for expropriation this year. As soon as expropriated, these properties become exempt from the city rolls and the loss in taxes.

Objection to a federal district is that the citizens would lose their franchises in Dominion and Provincial elections. The argument was answered at last night's meeting that the Ontario government would not object to Ottawa being a federal district because of the revenue received from the New York Bridge tunnel from succession duties, gasoline tax and the like. On the other hand Ottawa would lose provincial grants.

WORKER INJURED AS HOPPER FALLS

Edward Quackenbush of Carrying Place Hurt in Construction at Air Base

Edward Quackenbush, 24, of Carrying Place, received painful injuries to his back shortly after eleven o'clock this morning while at work at the R.C.A.F. Station for the Frontenac Construction Co., when a hopper fell on him.

The injured man was rushed to Belleville General Hospital where he was attended by Dr. Johnson of Trenton, who had been called to the Station when the accident occurred, and Dr. G. S. Cronk. An X-ray was taken to determine the extent of his injuries.

Livestock Men Are Divided In Their Opinion

Opinions of livestock men of the district were divided this morning on the question of whether the new regulations adopted by the Ontario packers which state that only dressed weights and grades of hogs will be paid for, will be of any advantage to breeders.

It was stated that commencing on July 24 the system of rail-grading of hogs will go into effect in all Ontario packing plants, which change will mean a considerable one in the system of price quotations.

According to one breeder of the district, who preferred anonymity today to avoid any controversial repercussions, the change will be a beneficial one in fact as it will be able to capture the bacon market in the British Isles which was wrested from us some time ago by the Danes through our own carelessness.

"Under the new system of rail grading the hog raiser will have to depend upon a more standardized type of hog which will have to be fed better and more standardized rations to ensure a uniform acreage. The change should be all to the good," declared the breeder.

Complains Bear Grabbed Fingers

Hamilton, July 18—(CP)— An alleged attack by a bear is the basis of a suit for $1,000 damages brought in County Court today by Mrs. Mae Berry, Saltfleet, against William Campbell, Calnaville hotel man, owner of the animal.

It is claimed that last May 10 Mrs. Berry stopped to feed candy to the bear, one of several kept in a cage to attract tourists. The animal grabbed her, inflicting injuries which confined her to bed for a month.

MORTGAGE BANK MAKING SURVEY

Ottawa, July 18 —(CP)— Solicitors for the newly-created Central Mortgage Bank are making a survey of all Provincial debt-adjustment and moratorium legislation with a view to determining to what extent it may affect the operations of the bank.

Determination of this question is one of several important preliminaries to the active operation of the bank which is expected to begin before the end of the year.

The directorate and executive staff of the bank, which will serve to adjust principal and interest payments on mortgages held by member companies and standardize the mortgage business for the future, has been largely completed but the organization of the staff will proceed as the institution comes into active operation.

WILL BLOCKADE 3 MORE PORTS

Japanese Naval Authorities Make Announcement on Santuo, Loyaun and Swatow

Shanghai, July 18—(AP)— Japanese naval authorities announced today that three more south China ports—Santuao, Loyuan and Swatow—would be closed and made their customary request that third-power ships and nationals leave.

The announcement said the new blockade would be imposed Friday.

Shanghai, July 18—(AP)—Withdrawal of stabilization fund support for the Chinese dollar today caused a sharp slump in its value in foreign exchange and brought Shanghai business virtually to a halt.

From Yesterday's quotation of 13 15-16 cents of the United States dollar the Chinese currency dropped to 9 3-4 and was worth 10 5-8 cents in today's closing quotations.

Foreign bankers said the present depreciation was favorable to the Chungking government as Chungking is seeking to increase exports and at the same time to make imports more difficult.

Boycott of British Goods Tientsin, July 18—(AP)—The so-called "supreme anti-British committee" was reported today to have decided on a boycott of British goods and "punish" Chinese and Japanese merchants doing business with British concerns.

Japanese sources said the committee decided all its followers' deposits should be withdrawn from British banks.

Tokyo, July 18—(AP)— Domei (Japanese news agency) reported today that all British subjects at Kaifeng, China, have left there because of the anti-British campaign.

Official British sources said Chinese at Kaifeng had been ordered to leave the Canadian Anglican Church mission and Chinese inland compounds and have nothing further to do with British or Canadian missionaries.

Produce Market Easier — Trading Light

A further decline in the prices of butter, eggs and cheese marked another day of dull trading on the Toronto open produce market when the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported Demand was light for all lines.

Egg receipts were light but sufficient to meet what demand there was. Grade A medium eggs continued to enjoy the best enquiry. In the graded section, Grade A large graded in a range of 21½-22½c, while Grade A medium eggs were selling at 20½c, Grade B at 16c to 16c, and Grade C at 14c. Prices paid the producer for ungraded eggs remained unchanged as did prices to the retail trade.

Butter showed an easy, with No. 1 creamery solids selling at 21½c and lower grades at from 20½c to 21c. Trading was dull. Demand was not great but there was no real pressure to sell below 21½c as offerings were not heavy. No sales of Western butter were reported.

The cheese market was dull and draggy. Buyers seemed content to fill immediate requirements only. New, large paralflned current make sold to wholesale trade at 13¼c to 13½c. Average prices paid to shippers, f.o.b. country points, were 13½c to 13¼c for new large fleshed, and 13½c to 13c for triplets. Buying was hardly sufficient to establish prices.

Montreal Butter and Cheese Down

Montreal, July 18—(CP)—Butter and cheese offerings dipped slightly, but open produce market while potatoes traded irregularly, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs prices ruled stationary.

Ontario white cheese was quoted at 12¾c a pound and colored at 13¼c. Quebec white was quoted at 11½c and colored at 11¾c. Receipts: 1,247 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 23½c a dozen for A-Large, 21½c to 22c for A-medium, 17c for B-large, 14c to 14½c for C. Receipts: 308 cases.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE BELLE

"LUCKY NIGHT"

Bringing a sensational new romantic-comedy team to the screen, "Lucky Night", co-starring Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor, is the outstanding attraction coming next to the Belle Theatre.

Hitherto portraying straight dramatic roles in films such as "Camille", "Stand Up and Fight", and "The Crowd Roars", Robert Taylor, in this film presents himself for light comedy honors opposite the merry Myrna Loy who has already achieved distinction as a comedienne in such mirthful entertainments as the "Thin Man" series, "Libeled Lady" and "Double Wedding."

Taylor portrays the role of an out-of-luck playboy who meets Miss Loy on a park bench where both are looking for jobs. Myrna has fled from a fourth engagement to a man she didn't want to marry. The pair team forces, panhandle fifty cents, pyramid it into those ands by lucky Taylor, hit the night spots, get into tight spots and find, after their wild and "lucky night", that they've been married. Thereafter they face the serious business of life, leading to further hilarious complications, separation, and eventual reconciliation.

In the supporting cast is a picked list of funmakers, among whom are Joseph Allen, Henry O'Neill, Douglas Fowley, Bernard Nedell, Charles Lane, Bernardene Hayes, Gladys Blake, Marjorie Main, Edward Gargan, Irving Bacon and Oscar O'Shea.

"Tell No Tales"

Five tense dramas within a drama is the distinction that is offered to the theatre-going public in "Tell No Tales" featuring Melvyn Douglas and Louise Platt next at the Belle Theatre. The story is woven around a newspaper man in whose hands falls a hundred-dollar bill that is part of the ransom money paid in a kidnapping and murder.

Tracing the source of the tainted money, the newspaper man uncovers a separate drama at each step along the trail and involving each group of individuals through whose hands the money passes. As he unmasks the true characters of the persons involved as a wealthy jeweler's romance is shipwrecked, the home of a prominent doctor is broken up, a mother is arrested and the bill is traced back to the newspaperman's own boss.

Douglas plays the role of the newspaperman who solves the kidnapping mystery, Louise Platt, of the New York stage and who recently appeared in "I Found My Love Again" and "Stage Coach" is the school teacher who witnessed the kidnapping and helps Douglas with his solution. Gene Lockhart is cast as the owner of a crooked gambling establishment, and Douglas Dumbrille, one of the screen's outstanding heavies, enacts the newspaper owner who is indirectly responsible for the dramatic proceedings.

Also prominent in the large cast are Florence George, Halliwell Hobbes, Zeffie Tilbury, Harlan Briggs, Sara Haden, Robert Cavanagh, Oscar O'Shea, Theresa Harris, Jean Fenwick, Esther Dale, Joseph Crehan and Tom Collins.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Clouds Over Europe"

You'll call it swell entertainment! "Clouds Over Europe" opening next at the McCarthy Theatre and you'll roar with laughter... as the screen's newest comedy team Ralph Richardson...cooks up the brightest breeziest comedy romance of the year.

"Clouds Over Europe" rated five stars by Roly Young in Toronto Globe and Mail, is a "must see" laugh bit starring Ralph Richardson (star of "The Citadel") Laurence Olivier (star of "Wuthering Heights" which is also coming soon to the McCarthy Theatre) and Valerie Hobson (Heroine of "Drums") We urge you now to plan to see "Clouds Over Europe" which comes next to the McCarthy Theatre.

Now Playing

Weirdly fascinating .. daringly different "Blind Alley" starring Chester Morris, Ralph Bellamy and Ann Dvorak is now the current screen attraction at the McCarthy Theatre, with a splendid companion feature hit for laughing purposes only, entitled "Meet The Girls" featuring June Lang, Lynn Barri, Ruth Donnelly, Robert Allen and Gene Lockhart (who is an old Belleville boy formerly with Belleville Kiltie Band)... These are two outstanding screen attractions and present entertainment that all will most thoroughly enjoy.

Police Blotter

Although they do say Dobbin will never replace the more modern horseless carriage, Belleville today saw the old method of the new in a picture of somewhat the same atmosphere, when city police officers stood at the intersection of Bridge and Front Sts. directing traffic in the ancient, not-to-be-forgotten method of hand direction.

Yesterday the traffic light at the main city intersection failed to function, the mechanism of the control box being out of order, it is being repaired and no doubt the traffic light will resume its untiring vigil within the next 24 hours.

In the meantime, however, city police officers will direct traffic by means of the old fashioned hand indication of "stop and go." Today bedecked in shiny white gloves P. C. Evans assumed the duties of traffic officer.

Otherwise activities proved quiet and serene in and around local police circles. While patrolling his beat late last night P. C. Taylor found a bicycle abandoned in the Kresge parking lot. The bike was taken to the police station for safe keeping.

HITLER MAY ORDER

"We don't propose to fall back into the practices of royalty, when after the King's or Emperor's name came also all his other titles, such as Grand Duke this or Margrave that," the official commented.

"Besides, for our Fuehrer to assume also the title of Chief of the Danzig State would mean recognition of a status—two distinct political entities—to which we object.

"From our viewpoint Danzig should be part of the Reich."

The spokesman denied that negotiations of any kind were going on at present with Poland.

London, July 18.—(CP)—The diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle (Liberal) said today Chancellor Hitler may order Danzig Nazis to elect him president of the Free City.

"From a very moderate and well-informed German source," The News Chronicle writer said, "I have had a hint that the Fuehrer may get himself elected State President of Danzig. He is already an honorary citizen of the Free City, and it would be difficult for the Polish or any other government to do anything against this election.

"The struggle would then continue on a legal rather than on a military basis."

Gangs Work in Relay to Prevent Dam Going Out

5-Foot Difference In Lake Levels If Dam Bursts

Waters of Lake Rosseau Would Pour Into Muskoka Lake and Lower Reaches of the Moon River

ALL LOCKS USELESS

Early Today Lockmaster Brown Stated Men Were "Holding Their Own" Against the Weakening of the Dam

Port Carling, Ont., July 19—(CP)—Gangs of men worked in relays today to prevent the weakened Port Carling dam from going out — and possibly sweeping the waters of Lake Rosseau into Lake Muskoka and the lower reaches of Moon River.

Pressure of Lake Rosseau's waters forced out one of the cement blocks in the dam and a steady stream of water rushed through the footsquare hole, which widened until noticed by Lockmaster R. M. Brown, all through yesterday and most of the night men worked to plug the hole.

Rock, gravel and logs were piled into the hole until it seemed plugged late last night and Brown gave the men a rest. But as the pressure from Lake Rosseau mounted the cribwork weakened and the men were called out again in the night. They're today trying to seal it by holding our own.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
National Service Meteorologist

Visibility! Everyone, consciously or unconsciously, measures the visibility when, looking abroad, he sees that certain monument, mountain, steeple or house is visible or invisible. Professional weather observers make measurements of visibility at 8 o'clock to the much the same. Visibility is a measure of the transparency of the air. At night-time, as far as the transparency is concerned, visibility may be improved; that is, a flare dropped from an airplane may on account of the transparency of the air be very efficient. Visibility at night may be measured in a general way by observing the amount of blurring of objects, but the best way is to use standard lights,

'Diamond Horseshoe' About to Bow Out of Metropolitan Opera House

By JOHN SELBY
Associated Press Arts Editor

New York, July 19—(AP)—The "Diamond Horseshoe" is about to bow out of the Metropolitan Opera, leaving its future financial support up to the masses instead of the classes.

For more than a half century the stockholders in the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, who also are boxholders in the horseshoe of the famous glittering horseshoe, have controlled opera in New York. All the world-famous singers and leaders of the "400" during the gilded age—are dead, and Robert S. Brewster, President of the real estate company, said it no longer is possible to furnish the opera house on the old terms.

Financial reasons, he said, shareholders have refused to pay the assessments levied to maintain the property—sometimes because of post-depression financial changes, sometimes because the shares are tied up in estates, sometimes because the holders have inherited them and have no interest in opera.

Brewster said the real estate company decided yesterday to propose that shareholders sell the opera house and its warehouse and the Metropolitan Opera Association, the company which actually produces the operas.

The Association has asked to buy the properties for $1,500,000, subject to a mortgage of $470,000.

Otto Kahn, Jr., Miss Kahn, chairman of the Opera Association, said his organization had in mind "the possibility of enlisting civic groups to join with the Opera Association in establishing a permanent musical centre."

The plan will be submitted to the stockholders of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company at a meeting in September, Brewster said.

BARLOW REPORT URGES END OF GRAND JURIES

Attorney General G. D. Conant Hopeful of Implementation of the Report

OTHER CHANGES MOOTED

Retention of Petit Jury Asked but Six-Man Jury in Civil Cases Requested

Toronto, July 19—(AP)—Abolition of the grand jury system, in line with England's example, and adoption of a pre-trial system in civil courts of five cities, as practiced in various parts of the United States, are urged for Ontario in a report submitted to Attorney-General Gordon Conant.

Mr. Conant last night issued an interim report submitted by F. H. Barlow, Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario, after studying since last December the administration of Justice in five cities in Ontario, with a economy and expedition of justice.

Many of his recommendations have already been adopted in other countries and jurisdictions, including England and other parts of the Empire," said Mr. Conant, who did not thereof Mr. Barlow to make the survey. "I am very hopeful that we may be able to adopt many if not all of them in this province."

'Silent' Plane Motor Muffler Is Described

Liege, Belgium, July 19—(AP)—A "silent" airplane motor muffler which might enable fighting aircraft to raid enemy territory with greater safety was described to the Royal Academy for the advancement of science which met here Tuesday.

The new silencer was described by Jean Bosquet, engineer for the Cockerill Motor Works, as one "just exactly the opposite of a radio loud-speaker." The effect, he said, is to reduce down sat-splitting acoustic power by reducing the frequency of sounds blasted out by the motor cylinders.

The silencer described would still leave the noise of the propeller, which engineers so far have been unable to muffle.

Canada Assured of Many Manufacturing Plants All From Central Europe

Toronto, July 19—(CP)—Canada is assured of many new manufacturing plants, to be operated by industrialists from Central Europe. Details concerning their number, character and size are indefinite because of the reluctance of industrial commissioners, civic authorities and federal departments at Ottawa to disclose information.

The chief of the Toronto Industrial Commission, a business and civic group engaged in fostering new industries, declined yesterday to give any detailed information, though he admitted foreign money was coming to Canada for industrial purposes.

According to a Canadian Press survey a half dozen or more Canadian cities and towns already are assured of industrial expansion as a result of the exodus from Europe. The largest project to date is the shoe manufacturing plant to be located at Frankford, Ont., by the Bata concern of Czecho-Slovakia. The plant now is being set up and the outlook is for a working staff of 1,800.

Prescott Has Two

Prescott, Ont., has attracted two new plants, one a glove factory to be operated by a Parisian and a Czecho-Slovakian and the other a toy factory, promoted by a Czecho-Slovakian. Huntington, Que., is in line for a textile plant to be established by a Polish group. At Levis, Quebec, a Belgian industrialist, Georges L'Hoire, is planning to create a plant for the manufacture of aluminum pots and pans.

A $2,000,000 sugar plant is planned for Manitoba's Red River Valley. The promoters, Albert Flagenheimer, is said to be the owner of 26 sugar factories and four distilleries in Germany, Italy, Belgium, Bulgaria and Rumania. Born in Rumania of Jewish parents and were citizens of the United States, Flagenheimer has lived in Switzerland during the past four years.

European interests, supported by British capital are reported to be organizing a $2,500,000 rayon industry at North Vancouver. At New Westminster, B.C. Pacific Veneer Limited, backed by Austrian interests, have just started operations with 50 employed and Alaska Pine, Limited, also at New Westminster and promoted by Czecho-Slovakia industrialists, expects to start operations in a few days with 100 men employed.

MAY NOT FINISH GEORGE CUP RACE

Light Winds Prevent Yachts from Sailing Course

Toronto, July 19—(CP)— Light easterly winds prevailed today as the third race of the George cup series for six-metre yachts started, and officials doubted whether the yachts would be able to finish the race within the time limit.

Crescent Yacht Club's Mars of Watertown, N.Y. is in second place with seven points. Erne of Wilson Harbor, N.Y., Yacht Club has only five points and Mis of the Olcott, N.Y, Yacht Club, two.

URGE COMPLETION OF PACT WITH SOVIET RUSSIA

Stories of German - Polish Negotiations Are Called Nazi Propaganda

POLES FIRM ON DANZIG

Long Flight by Way of Egypt, Turkey to Poland Contemplated by R.A.F.

London, July 19—(CP)—Pressure for completion of negotiations to bring Soviet Russia into the Anglo-French front before parliament recesses next month confronted the cabinet today.

Optimism over the Danzig question continued in many circles, but the less hopeful viewed speedy conclusion of a pact with Moscow as essential to bolster the British position.

Rumors that negotiation of Polish-German differences over Danzig was about to be undertaken persisted despite denials in authoritative Berlin quarters. Polish circles here termed the reports a type of "appeasement propaganda."

Meanwhile, it appeared Chancellor Hitler still is convinced Britain will not fight to keep Danzig out of Germany. This observation was coupled in Berlin with reports of pronouncements to be made optimistic about the Danzig situation.

ROOSEVELT WANTS TO TAKE FIGHT TO THE COUNTRY

Reluctant to Heed Advce of Senate Leaders on Neutrality Act

PRESIDENT ADAMANT

By JACK BELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, July 19—(AP)—President Roosevelt, reluctantly accepting the advice of Senate leaders to abandon his demand for revision of the United States neutrality law at this session, was represented today as prepared to take his fight for repeal of the arms embargo to the country.

Mr. Roosevelt held this definite impression with a group which met late last night in the White House discussed the international situation, and finally persuaded him and Democratic leaders in the senate and congress is not disposed to spend a month or more debating neutrality legislation.

The President argued that the Senate's failure to take action today on the United States' influence in European affairs.

Some conferees believed the President would make a case to the country in a series of speeches in which he would make known his views on modifications in the present mandatory embargo on arms shipments to belligerents.

During the conference he mentioned his proposed trip through the west after congress adjourns. Many believe he will utilize that journey to set forth his views on neutrality.

Suit Hangers and Suit Labels Found In Thurlow Twp.

Found abandoned on the second concession of Thurlow, dozens of coat and suit hangers were discovered early today by Fred Barlow, Thurlow farmer. Subsequent checkups by Provincial Police revealed several suit labels had been torn apart ently been torn off coats or suits of clothes and the hangers, alone and bore the label of R. J. Dein, Cannanoque.

Later Sergeant Harry Thompson of the Ontario Provincial Police, Cannanoque, questioned police authorities and was informed that robbers had entered the clothing store of R. J. Dein, Cannanoque, and sold several dozen higher-priced suits of clothes, together with expensive articles of men's haberdashery.

Mr. Barlow informed Provincial Constable Ross Dier, in investigation, that he had heard men discussing an automobile tire on the second concession road of Thurlow early this morning. Later checking revealed a new-cost tire and tube being found abandoned in a ditch. The tire had apparently blown out and had been tossed aside by the robbers in their flight. The robbers are believed to have been headed towards Toronto after robbing Mr. Dein's store.

Dreams of Resurrection of Czech Republic However Discouraged by George Havelka Who Speaks of 'Unfounded Hopes'

APPEAL BROADCAST

Havelka Urges Co-Nationals to Adapt Selves to German Aims — Appeals to United Population in Co-operation With Reich

Prague, July 19—(AP)—Dreams of resurrection of the old Czech republic received new official discouragement today as George Havelka, Minister of Transportation of the protectorate government, urged his Czech co-nationals to adapt themselves to German aims rather than nourish "unfounded hopes."

Havelka spoke in a broadcast nationwide appeal to combat a widespread whispering campaign which has accused the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate government of failing to defend the rights of Czechs energetically enough.

Czech political circles interpreted Havelka's appeal to support the "realistically thinking" protectorate government as another attempt of Czech officials working under German authority to calm the population in co-operation with the Reich.

London, July 19.—(CP)— Former President Edouard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia asserted today on arriving from New York that "public opinion in the United States makes me entirely optimistic" about the world situation.

Expressing pleasure with receptions given him there, he added: "I am confident Czecho-Slovakia will one day shake off the shackles of Fascism and become free again."

1,900-MILE FLIGHT MADE BY R.A.F.

Second Series of Exercises of Today Are Divided Into Two Parts

London, July 19—(CP) — Nearly 100 Royal Air Force planes took part today in the second of a series of extensive training flights over French territory.

Today's exercises were divided into two parts. A group of Blenheim Bombers left British bases at 7 a.m. made a non-stop flight to Marseilles and Chartres and returned after dusk.

Captain Harold Balfour, Undersecretary of State for Air, personally flew with the second group, a number of Wellington and Whitley bombers which flew to the Mediterranean in the vicinity of Marseilles. This involved a 1,900-mile non-stop flight of nearly 1,500 miles.

The first British air exercises in France were carried out in May, 11 with more than 100 planes participating.

Plans for today's flights were kept secret by the Air Ministry until the majority of the planes had returned to their bases.

'I Didn't Become Panicky' Says Woman of 75 Lost 3 Days

Bowmanville, Pa., July 19—(AP) —Smoking her favorite pipe, 75-year-old Mrs. Emma Stetly tilted back in a rocking chair on the porch of her home here today and related her experiences while lost for three days in the Welsh mountain wilderness.

She found her way home yesterday while farmers, woodsmen and a bloodhound searched the mountain. She left home early Sunday to pick huckleberries.

Refusing a doctor's orders to go to bed, Mrs. Stetly said she fell in a hole and hurt her head during her wanderings but "I didn't become panicky."

"Jesus was with me," she murmured.

Mrs. Stetly stumbled on rocks Monday and spilled all the water she had left. She ate berries, .

GAR DOOR OPENS, WOMAN KILLED WHEN SHE FALLS

Inquest Will be Held Into Death of Mrs. Andrew Peat

SKULL FRACTURED

Toronto, July 19—(CP)— Dr. Sinkie Lawson, Chief Coroner for Ontario, announced today there would be an inquest next week into the death last night of Mrs. Andrew Peat, killed in a fall from an automobile.

Mrs. Peat, who was separated from her husband and used the name Elsie Redcliffe, was driving with a friend, Gordon Welch, in a sport roadster. He told police he noticed she had her right in the car door and suddenly the door flew open and she fell to the pavement.

Welch said he was travelling about 25 miles an hour at the time and was able to bring the car to a stop within three feet.

Dr. Lawson said he had learned Mrs. Peat was the mother of two children aged 10 and eight. Her husband is believed living in Tillsonburg, Ont.

A post-mortem examination today showed she died of a fractured skull.

Two other passengers in the car were in the rumble seat.

POLISH ATTITUDE PROVES OBSTACLE

By PAUL-LOUIS BRET

By The Havas News Agency
London, July 19.—(Havas)— Poland's insistence on being left free to purchase war material in the best market with the proceeds of a proposed British loan was reliably reported today to be the most serious obstacle in the way of Anglo-French-Polish negotiations here.

The Polish negotiators headed by Colonel Koc have been pressing for some time that they should be permitted to use part of the credits arising out of the loan where they can get the materials easiest and cheapest in allied nations, where most of the munitions factories are busy working for their own national defence.

Conference at Treasury

It was learned in Polish circles that an important conference took place yesterday at the Treasury here, attended for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, and Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, Chief economic adviser to the government. Colonel Koc was accompanied by Count Edward Raczynski, the Polish ambassador.

Sir John Simon was said to have argued that an Anglo-French-Polish commission should control the use of the proposed credit but Colonel Koc stuck to the point that Poland must be given greater freedom in the matter. It was reported that unless the British representatives change their attitude Colonel Koc will leave for Warsaw to confer with his government.

OLDER RESIDENTS PLANNING PICNIC

Outing Would be Typical of Picnics Held Here Many Years Ago

One of the most ambitious and original outings or picnics yet held in this city may materialize this summer if efforts of a few of Belleville's older residents are realized. Under the plan, arrangements of which are being quietly carried on by a few of the older well known citizens, a full day's outing for the real "old timers" of Belleville will be held some place in the immediate district, preferably at Massassaga or Twelve O'clock Point, this summer at which outing all the old time features of forty or fifty years ago will rule.

It is pointed out by the organizers who have been working on the project without undue advertising that the gathering would be a typical old-fashioned reunion of men who have been employed an open air picnic since the days when the old Annie Lake, the North Star or the steamer Hero made regular excursions from the Belleville docks. The plan is to enlist the help of younger residents in assuring that every older citizen may be able to attend this picnic.

In the ranks of one of the local organizers, "the old-timers of Belleville are dying off fast, and it won't be many more years until there won't be enough of us left to hold a picnic. We have to get them all together this year for what might be a last picnic for many of them. A couple of dollars each should pay for the outing, and give everyone a day of real pleasure to have just one old-fashioned, genuine picnic, just as we used to have forty years ago. That would be showing the youngsters of today something."

Plans of the committee call for the chartering of a boat or steamer to carry the members of the Old Brigade to Massassaga Point, which the reunion point on the bay is named.

BRANTFORD ASKS FOR ADJUSTMENT

Will Make No Further Contribution to Grand River Scheme

Brantford, Ont., July 19.—(CP) —Under a resolution approved by the city council at a special meeting last night, Brantford will not contribute further to the Grand River conservation project until adjustment has been made to permit this city to have its share of the labor placement as stipulated in the contract.

Reporting to the council, Ald. J. P. Ryan, chairman of the Finance Committee and Ald. Art Pennell said they had visited the Shand dam construction site Monday. They said they had found only half-a-dozen Brantford men out of a payroll of from 80 to 100.

In view of the fact that under the terms of the approved arrangement, Brantford, as major contributor to the scheme, is entitled to proportionate labor placement, council considered that immediate representations should be made. A resolution to that end was accordingly directed to the Rayner Construction Company and the Grand River Conservation Commission.

Ald. Ryan reported that of some 15 trucks on the job none was from Brantford, four came from Kitchener, four from Oshawa, one from Toronto, two from Guelph and four from Fergus.

Under the contract the contracting firm is entitled to 15 per cent of the labor placements and the contributing municipalities to the remaining 85 per cent. Of this 85 per cent. Brantford, on a proportionate basis, is entitled to place 26 per cent of the men.

110 Britishers Visit City See Much in 3 Weeks' Tour

Crossing Ocean Twice, Will Travel 1600 Miles in Canada and Visit New York World's Fair

WORKERS' GROUP

How would you like to have your vacation consist of crossing the Atlantic twice in a palatial liner, cover practically sixteen hundred miles of picturesque Canada, spend two days at the New York World's Fair and be back at your office approximately three weeks later.

It may sound fantastic but that is exactly how one hundred and ten middle-class Britishers who stopped at the Hotel Quinte last night for dinner are enjoying their summer holidays.

Seventy-five per cent ladies and the remainder gentlemen, the cavalcade arrived in three large motor-buses shortly after six o'clock en-route from Kingston to Toronto.

They are members of the Workers' Travel Association, an organization of England that annually sends upwards of sixty thousand Britishers on colorful vacations at a minimum cost.

School teachers, skilled artisans, clerks and business men, and associates, the cavalcade was representative of England, Eire, Northern Ireland, Wales, Scotland and South Africa.

According to Mr. J. W. Iredale, Montreal representative of the Travel Association, who is personally conducting the Canadian and American end of the tour, the party landed in Quebec on Sunday, last. They were taken to Montreal and Ottawa. From there to Canadoque cruise of the Thousand Islands. Next periods are given at various cities along the route. They rested in Kingston yesterday and they journeyed to Belleville late last night where they had dinner.

Immediately afterwards they left for Toronto where they spent the night. This morning they have on a sight-seeing tour of the Queen City, then journey to Niagara Falls. More sight will be taken in, then the cavalcade will proceed to Buffalo and from there by stages to New York City where two days will be spent sight-seeing at the World's Fair. They will then journey to Montreal, arriving in Quebec next Tuesday where they will embark for home and be at their respective jobs roughly three weeks from the time of their departure.

Commenting on the nature of the Workers' Travel Association, Mr. Iredale stated that it is a non-profit organization whose sole aim is to give the middle-classes of England a chance to see the world at the lowest possible cost. "We will cover approximately sixteen hundred miles during the tour of which Quebec, Ontario and the United States," he added, "Mr. A. H. Price of London, England, is the British representative of the association in charge of the tour.

Police Blotter

Weak thieves are blamed for taking a gold wrist watch from out of a cabin trailer last night. Early today Mrs. Ella Morris, who is residing in a cabin trailer near 13 Foundry street, informed Sergeant Arthur Booth of the missing watch.

Mrs. Morris was absent from her temporary home on wheels from 9 until 11 p.m. last evening. Although the watch, a lady's wrist type, was not missed upon her return, the time-piece was gone this morning.

Dr. R. Johnson, Tamworth, reported the theft of his 1939 Chevrolet coupe to Provincial Police early today. The vehicle, when taken, was equipped with Ontario license plates number D-1966.

While patrolling their beat in the police cruiser early today Constables Wright and Taylor found two gentlemen and two armatures left abandoned in the ditch on Station street. The police confiscated the articles and it is felt they were stolen from some motor launch, as these parts of mechanism are of the marine type.

Motorists continue to violate the city parking and speeding by-law with the result summonses are being issued daily to delinquents.

Only five transients sought sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

BAND CONCERT MUCH ENJOYED

Gold Medallists at Waterloo Festival Are Assisting Artists

Two young artists, Master Bobby Young, saxophonist, and Ted Hirschey, clarinetist, gold medallists in their respective classes at the recent Waterloo Musical Festival, made a tuneful melodic program featured in the inaugural concert of the Belleville Municipal Band's summer series last night on Victoria Park, where a large crowd took advantage of ideal weather conditions to enjoy a real entertainment.

Spontaneous applause not only greeted the young artists' clever renditions of their various numbers, but musical Belleville's appreciation of their talents brought to the fore was exemplified in the reception given the youthful musicians following their introduction from the bandstand by Bandmaster Fred Perry. Master Young delighted his audience with a melodic rendition of "I Hear You Calling Me" and Ted Hirschey's clarinet bringing out to the full the sweet melody of "Sweet and Dainty" that had an harmonic band background in Mr. Reg. Hinchey's arrangement.

The ever popular "Beer Barrel Polka" was a tune that brought many nickels to musical machines throughout the United States and Canada than any other two pieces, was vociferously encored, "Chinatown", was a gem of popular pieces, was also well received.

The band was at practically full strength and has seldom been heard to better advantage. Their offerings at the conclusion of a program that was variable as it was tuneful, held the large crowd of spectators in their seats and automobiles until the last note of the Canadian National Anthem rang through the park.

Mr. Reg. Hinchey, assistant conductor of the band, in the absence of Mr. Fred Perry, conducted the program, wielded the baton in several of his own arrangements with Lieut. Jobson doing the conducting duties for the remainder of the concert.

The concerts will be repeated during the summer with the next one to be scheduled two weeks from last night.

95TH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

Mrs. James Woodley, 60 Octavia Street, in Fairly Good Health

Showered with flowers and cards bearing messages of good wishes from her family and friends, Mrs. James Woodley, 60 Octavia Street, today marked the ninety-fifth anniversary of her birth, in spite of her advanced years, Mrs. Woodley enjoys fairly good health and during the entire years had no serious illness.

Visited by friends today Mrs. Woodley was a dainty, fragile figure in lavender. Her room was bright with flowers, and the many congratulatory cards had a position of honor on her dressing table. Mrs. Woodley is proud of the fact that in a year when influenza visited the city and district she escaped illness all winter long.

"I wasn't sick a day since last year," she replied in answer to an interested questioner. "Nearly everyone else was, but I was fine!"

Every Sunday Mrs. Woodley enjoys motor drives with her son, Mr. George T. Woodley, and finds this cool summer whether ideal for her trips in the cool shade of the trees with eagerness. A recent visit from her son, Mr. Albert H. Woodley of Detroit, was an important topic with her, this morning, as she chatted with visitors. Other members of a devoted family, Mr. Phillip J. Woodley and Mrs. Jack C. Miller, were also in her mind as she pointed to their remembrances.

Most of her lifetime has been passed in Belleville, which she has seen develop into a thriving community, far different from the Belleville of her early days. Mrs. Woodley, a link with Belleville's past, is an example of the fine type of womanhood whose qualities of Christian zeal, kindliness, and steadfast endeavour were an inspiration in the earlier days of civic life.

Ontario Government Asked to Undertake Work as Relief Project

Hope of securing the approval of the Ontario Government in the matter of having further work on the civic bathing beach at the east city limits undertaken as a civic relief project has been voiced by Alderman Ormonde Butler, chairman of the City Welfare Committee, who has been working strenuously for this sanction for Queen's Park.

It is expected that a visit will be made this week by a representative of the Ontario Welfare Department to Belleville for the purpose of investigating the possibilities of the project and communication with the office carried on by Alderman Butler and city council indicate that some approval of this work will be given.

"We are hopeful at least," stated Alderman Butler.

This week services of the road grader of Thurlow Township have been secured by beach officials and considerable grading has been carried on. Due to the fact that no official sanction has as yet been received from the Ontario Government regarding relief labor on the beach only a few workmen have been engaged on the beach by the Committee under the hire system.

U. S. CATTLE BUYERS ACTIVE IN DISTRICT

United States buyers are still making heavy cattle purchases in the district and the trade will probably set a record for livestock transactions this season, it is believed by the local office of the Dominion veterinarian.

This week thirty more head of Holsteins sold by Scott Brothers from Campbellford district to Steen and Seamen of Hartford, Conn., were cleared through the office of Dr. O. J. Reed. Another shipment of the cattle to Wales, and from Glasgow, Scotland, is also being prepared by the same firm.

BARLOW REPORT

The grand jury's report "serves no useful purpose," Mr. Barlow comments. The pre-trial system he recommends as a means of saving time in the actual trial of civil cases.

Many Committed

Legal authorities and business organizations throughout Ontario were consulted in the survey and Mr. Barlow had a "lengthy discussion" with Mr. Justice F. H. Gordon, who is conducting a similar survey in Saskatchewan. Others who aided were Mr. H. Bancroft, K.C., of London, England, Attorney-General J. B. McNair of New Brunswick, Judge Moynihan of Detroit and Gordon Hyde, K.C. of Montreal.

Other than abolition of grand juries and the institution of pre-trial practice, the report recommends:

Abolition of juries in division court cases; retention of the 12-man jury in criminal cases; that civil action juries consist of six men, rather than 12; that a financial burden be imposed on parties seeking juries in civil actions; that substitutes be appointed to provide for the illness or death of a juryman; that substitute verdicts be entered in civil cases; appointment of assessors or experts to assist a civil court judge; foreclose on properties where the mortgagee fails to answer a writ.

Performed Real Purpose

Tracing the history of the grand jury system, Mr. Barlow says it performed a "real purpose" in the days when no proper provision was made for the inspection of public institutions.

"This duty, however, has long since fulfilled its purpose and the report of the grand jury in recent years has become so stereotyped and the inspection so perfunctory that it serves no useful purpose," he declares.

Magistrates are capable of deciding whether evidence warrants a trial, the report submits, and the Attorney-General could "in ordinary cases" refer the indictment rather than have a grand jury called on to perform the task. Because the Attorney-General's position is political there would be cases when it would be preferable that others prefer the indictments, Mr. Barlow says, and he urges that the duty then be assigned to the Crown Attorneys.

Grand Juries Expensive

"Furthermore, the grand jury is very expensive," he continues. "It has been estimated that the cost of grand juries in the province of Ontario exceeds $50,000 annually."

England has been without the grand jury system since 1933, and since then "their experience has been most satisfactory and there is no thought of returning to the old system." The grand jury was abolished in Manitoba in 1922 and in British Columbia in 1932, while in Quebec, Alberta and Saskatchewan have no grand juries.

Judge Moynihan gave the Supreme Court Master considerable insight into Michigan's pre-trial method of saving time in civil actions. Mr. Barlow recommends that it be instituted in Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and Windsor.

Hearing Before Judge

The plan calls for a hearing before a judge previously not more than two weeks before the actual trial, with the counsel in the case present. Mr. Barlow explains. The hearing eliminates "disadvantage" and the case is "groomed and stripped to its essentials for effective disposition."

The report says authorities before the 12-man jury should be retained in criminal cases, for if the number of jurors were reduced to six there would be greater danger of tampering and less chance of obtaining a fair cross-section of the community.

Dealing with the matter of juries in division court, the report says there "seems to be universal agreement" that they should be abolished.

Cut Jurymen

Mr. Barlow feels that the long-established privilege of jury trial on county court civil actions should not be "entirely taken away at the present time," but at the same time he believes a better calibre of juror can be obtained and expense reduced by cutting the number of jurymen from 12 to six.

He recommends that the fee to be paid by a civil litigant on demanding a jury "be very substantially increased."

The system in New York State of selecting additional juymen to substitute for and when a juryman becomes incapacitated during a hearing is cited as support for the recommendation that the plan be adopted in Ontario.

SETTLEMENT LIKELY AT HAND

Glace Bay, N.S., July 18.—(CP)—Maintenance men went down into Dominion No. 2 Colliery today in the settlement of the dispute which tied up the mine's 1,170 workers last night seemed imminent.

The strike started over sale of a company-owned house to Mining Inspector Mines Dewis. Miners contended the house had been promised previously to Joseph McKenzie, another inspector whose home was burned down some time ago. Superintendent J. C. Nicholls of Dominion Coal Company said, however, McKenzie had been offered the house first but refused to buy it.

MASSED MARRIAGE OF 107 COUPLES PLANNED FOR MONTREAL STADIUM

One hundred and seven white-clad brides and 107 blue-clad grooms will meet at Montreal's baseball stadium on Sunday morning and go away united. These mass marriages never before carried out on such a scale in this country will be witnessed by 60,000 spectators. They are sponsored by Jeunesse Ouvriere Catholic (Young Catholic Workers) and performed with the apostolic blessing of Pope Pius XII, after a thorough survey of members by Rev. Henri Roy, founder of the movement. Father Roy said he found at least 50 per cent. of young people marrying today not morally prepared, and 30 per cent. not financially prepared for marriage. He then hand-picked 107 "ideal" couples, of whom 11 are seen ABOVE, at the LEFT in the front row, a son Father Roy, and behind him his associate, Dr. Donat Voghel, physician and psychologist.

ROOSEVELT WANTS

No More This Session

Democratic and Republican party chieftains who attended the meeting said there was a definite understanding there would be no Senate move on neutrality until the next session. Adjournment of congress is expected in two or three weeks.

The President's intention to take his fight to the country, conferees explained, was voiced during a heated discussion with Senator William Borah, veteran Isolationist Republican from Idaho and a leading opponent of the administration's neutrality program. He opposes repeal of the arms embargo, key point in the President's drive to repeal the law.

The final decision to abandon efforts to revise the law at this session was said to have been brought about by an informal poll of those present, taken by Vice President John Garner.

Besides the President, Garner, Hull, and Borah, those who attended the conference were Democratic leader Alben Barkley, Republican leader Charles McNary, Chairman Key Pittman (Dem.-Nevada) of the Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Warren Austin (Rep-Vermont), assistant minority leader.

Two Statements

Two statements were given out by conferees.

The first quoted Senator Barkley as saying the consensus on the part of those members of the Senate "was that no action on neutrality legislation can be obtained . . . at the present session" and that a majority of the Senate probably consider neutrality legislation at the beginning of the next session.

The second said:

"The President and the Secretary of State maintained the definite position that failure by the Senate to take action now would weaken the leadership of the United States in exercising its potent influence in the cause of preserving peace among other nations in the event of a new crisis in Europe arises now and next January."

Earlier in the discussion Mr. Roosevelt was reported to have outlined the steps which the government has taken in attempting to preserve world peace. He observed that he could not say there would be war in Europe, but that the probabilities pointed in that direction. Both took issue with that statement.

Plainfield

Plainfield—Sunday School was held on Sunday morning with a record attendance of eighty-six. It being Missionary Sunday under the leadership of Mrs. Erie Denyes. A hymn opened this part of the service. A reading was then given by Mrs. Horace Palmer.

1,100 MEN IDLE AS HOUSE IS SOLD

Miners Say Company-Owned House Should be Rented to Miner

Glace Bay, N.S., July 19.—(CP)—The Dominion Coal Company's No. 12 pit, one of the largest in the Cape Breton soft coal belt was idle today as miners struck against the sale of a company-owned house. More than 1,100 employees were involved.

The tie-up started Monday but work was resumed for one shift yesterday, only to be stopped on the late shift last night.

Miners walked out protesting the sale of the house to Melvin Andrews, a miner. They claimed it should have been sold to Joseph McKenzie, another miner, whose home was burned some time ago. Company officials said they had offered to sell the house to McKenzie but he refused it.

The workers were informed yesterday Andrews had signed papers from the sale and they went back to work on the afternoon shift. Later they were informed the key to the house had not been turned over to McKenzie and the strike was resumed when the shift came to the surface last night.

NATIONAL PARK WILL BE OPENED

Event Takes Place During Week of Celebration at Charlottetown

Charlottetown, July 19—(CP)—Canadian statesmen who came to Charlottetown to celebrate the making of history found today they had made history themselves.

Five members of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's cabinet, attending the observances of the 75th anniversary of the conference here which led to confederation, joined yesterday in the first meeting of the Dominion Treasury Board to be held outside of Ottawa.

They met in the Chamber of the old Provincial Building where the Fathers of Confederation drafted plans for the Dominion of Canada in 1864. Revenue Minister J. L. Ilsley, Resources Minister T. A. Crerar, Postmaster-General Norman McLarty, Labor Minister Norman Rogers and Transport Minister C. D. Howe composed the quorum which transacted treasury business.

They met behind closed doors. Royal Canadian Mounted Police stood guard in the hallways.

As the week-long celebration reached its halfway mark, the scene shifted to the island's storied north shore where the Canadian National Park will be opened officially today. The park, laid out in country made famous by L. M. Montgomery's "Anne of Green Gables" novels, will be the first in the Maritime Provinces to be officially opened.

CHINESE REPORT MAJOR SUCCESS

Large-Scale Battle is in Progress in Southeastern Shansi Province

Shanghai, July 19—(AP)—Chinese military reports from the deep interior told today of major successes against Japanese forces long stalemated in Hupeh and Shansi Provinces, the present main theaters of the Sino-Japanese war-old Japanese-Chinese war.

These advices told of a large-scale battle is in progress in southeastern Shansi province. The Chinese reported the Japanese had lost 7,000 men there in the past fortnight.

On the other front, about 100 miles west of Hankow, the Chinese reported the Japanese had the invaders back from the Han River which they have been trying to cross since shortly after the fall of Hankow last Oct. 26.

The Japanese drive westward through Hupeh Province has been directed at the Chinese-held important mid-Yangtze ports upriver from Hankow.

It was impossible to confirm the latest Chinese reports but it long had been apparent the Japanese were stalled in Shansi and Hupeh.

Latest developments in the Anglo-Japanese friction in China—a Japanese charge that a British soldier died of Shanghai bayonetted a Chinese railway crossing employee—brought the issue of an anti-British boycott from the Japanese operators of the war-commandeered central China railways. The British military also called the charges "rubbish".

TWO INJURED AT KINGSVILLE

Kingsville Ont., July 18.—(CP)—Two Windsor women were injured, one seriously, when the car in which they were riding left the road over a low bridge near here last night.

Mrs. Ruth Beadle, 46, was taken to the hospital, in Windsor with a fractured skull and a fractured cut that required 50 stitches. Mrs. Grace Hill, 17, also received a head cut, while Mrs. Beadle's sister, Miss Ruth Thomas, was unhurt.

An inexperienced driver, Miss Thomas is believed to have misjudged the distance to the bridge while making a turn.

BODY RECOVERED

Alexandria, Ont., July 19—(CP)—Joan MacLennan, seven, drowned yesterday when she fell from a footpath along the power house dam into the Delisle River.

Relatives started a search after the child had been missing all afternoon. Leopold Gauthier recovered the body from the river on his sixth plunge after dragging operations with grapnels of her clothing to the surface.

Women to Fill R.A.F. Duties, Except Fighting in Case of War

London, July 19—(AP)—The Air Ministry has laid the foundation for an extensive scheme to substitute women in the air force for all but fighting duties in case of an emergency.

Under a plan announced by the Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood, and approved by the King, the women will be conscripted into an air force proper of all the lighter duties and thus release more manpower for front line duty.

The new service, which incorporates the 3,250 women in the air force section of the Women's auxiliary territorial service, will train officers and non-commissioned officers required to administer an expanded service to be recruited in wartime.

Great Britain has pursued a policy of replacing men with women for lighter defense duties, hence before air force activity has been open to women only in the civil air guard or the territorial services. In these all the training they received was a rudimentary knowledge of flying.

The new service places womanpower on an established basis as an auxiliary unit of the Royal Air Force and provides them with a definite standing in the air force setup.

For a time they will exist only as "tea and bottle washers" Wood, said; then they will take over various camp duties similar to those performed in the home of the housewife or in a business office by a secretary.

The next step in their training will embrace more or less full courses in handling various types of planes. In emergencies they probably would be required to fulfill such duties as ferrying planes from factories to flying fields, eliminating the necessity of using war pilots for this purpose.

Officials at present do not anticipate women being needed for the more serious war duties, although they admit some who have had training in flying undoubtedly would be able to handle light reconnoitering machines. Marriage is no bar to entering the service.

JAPAN EXASPERATED

Japan revealed her mind in the second the other day when there was a wild demonstration by the Nipponese before the British Embassy in Tokyo. It was reported at the time that the Japanese had rarely given way to such mass antagonism as they showed on this occasion. It recalled the Germans of the day when Germany found herself unable to advance and vented her spleen in the hymn of hate at England.

Japan, who was once the ally of England, does not find her present company of Italy and Germany imposing in their support. Indeed it is said even German aid goes to the Chinese, though Japan, Germany and Italy are the members of the anti-Comintern pact.

The very fact that Japan is not on Britain's side and in her friendship doubtless may have much to do with the lack of assurance the Japanese feel in their efforts to dominate the East.

Hence it is easy enough for Japanese to come to believe that Britain is helping Chiang-Kai-Shek. The Chinese despite the inroads of the Nipponese have not collapsed, their guerrillas fight an unrelenting war. So far Japan is showing signs of financial stress and after two years she can see no end to the struggle.

The company of Germany and of Italy which she keeps no doubt promoted the imperialism which Japan has declared for as against "the open door."

Japan lost the sympathy of the world when she went into Manchoukuo and began the series of events which have troubled the world of the past few years. When she attacked China for pure conquest and declared for a new policy in China she, in all fairness, got her own savagery. The course of the war has wiped out every vestige of civilization's sympathy for the imperialistic group in Japan. The good name she was winning has been lost. Probably even her allies, the Germans and Italians, despise the actions of the imperialists of Japan, however much the totalitarian principle marks the three countries.

Japan is angry. The nations know that. And anger means weakness. Japan's way ahead does not look so bright.

TENSION LESSENS

Tension in Europe is less strained and one of the London newspapers has declared its view that there will be no European war in which Britain will be involved this year.

For a year since the tense time of last summer, when war looked imminent, there has been peace and while there is peace, there is hope that no break will come. Had war broken out last autumn millions now living would have been dead, many more millions maimed, cities half in ruins, as all nations believe, even those who have seemed most warlike. Peace has her victories more renowned than war if the sacrifice in the end is not too great. Peacefully-inclined nations have armed themselves to the teeth and are armed as compared with the burden-bearing regimentation-weary Germans and Italians.

At this time there is a lull. Some may think it is too good to be true and be fearful of a new threat or crisis, but the armaments for peace are growing stronger.

The time has come when a Britisher may rise in the Commons and ask if it might not be timely now to declare "that Britain is prepared" instead of using the slogan "Britain must be prepared."

A new phase seems to have arrived, with the democracies armed and ready, not seeking a quarrel, but demanding the justice of peace and with the totalitarians taking a less vehement attitude. Even "peaceful conquests" of which Adolf Hitler boasted a year ago, are not possible now, else probably Danzig would have been numbered among the Nazi possessions. But it is a free city still. Since March of this year the democracies have taken a leadership which has thrown the Mussolinis and the Hitlers on the defensive.

This time when the tension is easiest is the very time which was picked by many as likely to witness a new crisis. Crises were easy to make a year or two ago, they are less likely to be moulded today. The policy of the Nazis is well known with their bag of tricks and plans and can deceive no one, for the Nazi runs true to form.

"INGLORIOUS MILTONS"

The poplar stretched her arms aloft
In sleeves of palest green,
And questioned in a whisper soft,
"Hast man, the toiler, seen,
And seeing, has he blessed
My care to be well dressed?"

The robin freed his scarlet coat
Of crumbs from what he ate;
Then tried his scale and stopped to note:
"Did that girl hesitate,
And pausing, has she heard
My love-song word for word?"

The poplar grieved: No one has seen
My bright new dress today!"—
The robin mourned: "My song has been A fruitless roundelay!"

"No, no, you're both quite wrong!
Miss Poplar, I have seen your dress;
Sir Robin, I have heard your song!
Grieve not, mourn not, distress;
Your noble effort, all shall know it,
And praise you for it!" cried the poet.

"WE INVOKE THY WRATH UPON REPROBATE MEN WHO COME TO THIS CITY TO CORRUPT PUBLIC OFFICIALS, BUY AND SELL LEGISLATION AND TRAFFIC IN THE PRIVILEGES OF GOVERNMENT. WE INVOKE THY WRATH UPON LITTLE MEN IN LARGE PLACES WHO STOOP TO CANNY SHREWDNESS TO THWART THE PEOPLE'S WILL AND TRANSACT THE BUSINESS OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS TO MISTRUST AND CONTEMPT."

Such was the chaplain's prayer which startled the Senators of Wisconsin one day recently, instead of the usual formal invocation which opens each day's proceedings. One aged Senator startled out of a catnap rose to his feet in righteous, or otherwise, indignation, and demanded to know if the chaplain for the day was a Christian gentleman. "I hope we never invite him to come again into the company of decent men." The Wisconsin Senate pays the chaplain three dollars per day and the job is passed around among the local clergymen. The offender was Rev. Allan Eddy, of Madison Plymouth Congregational Church, whose name was promptly purged from the patronage list. After the prayer the prayer walked out conscious he had started something. On account of the dismissal of Rev. Eddy several other clergymen refused to officiate, and one who did, instead of the regulation prayer read a Psalm:

BLESSED IS THE MAN THAT WALKETH NOT IN THE COUNSEL OF THE UNGODLY, NOR STANDETH IN THE WAY OF SINNERS, NOR SITTETH IN THE SEAT OF THE SCORNFUL.

The Madison Ministerial Association passed a resolution "We cannot participate in this duty as chaplain unless we are assured of freedom."

Then the Senate placed Rev. Allen Eddy's name back on the list and prepared to take with as good grace as possible whatever he had to offer in the way of an invocation when it came his turn again.

HITCH HIKERS ARE BECOMING QUITE NUMEROUS ON CANADIAN HIGHWAYS, and it is noticeable that many are well dressed. Equally noticeable is the presence of mixed couples thumbing rides, girls in slacks and gals in skirts teaming up with lads in the free ride adventure. Motorists visiting the United States recently state that they saw very few hitch-hikers there. Some states have passed drastic laws against the thumbing fraternity, following a series of serious crimes perpetuated by these road agents.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 19th., 1919.

Mr. Jack Leigh of this city is visiting friends in Stirling.

Mr. Albert J. Brown of Comber, Ont., is visiting his brother, Mr. George R. Brown, Town Line.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McDonald, St. Charles Street, are visiting at the home of Mrs. John Benson, Trenton.

Mr. William H. H. Ponton, an old Belleville boy, now of Panama, is spending a few days renewing acquaintances in the city. He will have shortly to visit his mother in Edmonton, Alberta.

Mrs. A. Lambert and daughter, Miss Sadie, of this city, sailed from Montreal today to spend some time in the Old Country.

30 YEARS AGO

July 19th., 1909.

Mr. Harry Johnson of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Bennett are spending a few days with friends at Hilton.

Police Officer Arthur Harman and wife will leave this week to visit friends in the Old Country.

Mr. K. Earle of this city is visiting friends in Napanee.

Child of Prince Arthur Newman is attending the Masonic Grand Lodge in London, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Woodley left today for Detroit, Mich., where they will reside.

Fire destroyed the residence of Dr. Moran at Redeemerville this morning. Mr. Walter Ostrom's residence caught fire, but the blaze was extinguished before much damage was done.

Mr. Harry Gonder coulda't make that 126-yard hole in one last Tuesday, though he tried until three. The Michigan City "pro" undoubtedly either didn't keep his left arm straight:

Or he didn't follow through properly;

Or he stared too long at the ball before hitting it;

Or he miscalculated the distance;

Or he used too open a stance;

Or he didn't time correctly the shifting of his weight from left to right and right to left;

Or he stood too close to the ball;

Or he didn't keep the crotch of his thumbs pointing exactly at his right shoulder.

Or he didn't look at the ball;

Or he hurried his backswing;

Or he stood too far away from the ball;

Or he didn't keep his toes exactly in line with the hole;

Or he misjudged the condition of the green;

Or his stance was not sufficiently open;

Or he tried too hard;

Or he looked up too soon;

Or he put too much right hand into it;

Or he didn't have the club face at exactly the correct angle at the moment of impact;

Or he stood too stiff;

Or he let his hand relax too much;

Or he didn't stand firm enough;

Or he used poor club;

Or he pressed at the top of his swing;

Or he didn't make proper allowance for the wind and the slope of the green;

Or he put on too much backspin;

Or he didn't play the ball just off his left heel;

Or he didn't put on enough backspin.

In short, he didn't concentrate. "Pro" though he be, he didn't quite get that smooth, easy, nonchalant rhythm, conceived in relaxation and executed in perfect confidence and peace of mind. Otherwise, how could he have helped making the hole in one?—Chicago Daily News.

Telling the Bees About A Death

Mr. Park is a great bee-keeper. He is sentimental about bees and quite impervious to their stings. Yesterday he had a small cut in his eyelid; he explained that he had just dug a bee-sting out of his side of his eye with his knife and that his arms were still full of them. Two years ago Neal tried to occupy the same territory in a neighboring farm house; he had gone to collect the swarms and found them fighting fiercely. They had taken a lot of getting because they were in a narrow slit behind a pipe. But they were fighting over all the roof, "wrestling and clinging and falling off the roof on to the ground in scores. You could have swept up a peck of dead bees off the ground underneath."

Then he went on to repeat the old superstition about "telling the bees." Bees, he said, were remarkably sensitive to the death of the man who owned them. If the owner died you had to take the key of his house and tap on each hive and say "So-and-so is dead." If you failed to do this all the bees would disappear in a few days. They would die or go away and "no one would see them go." When you took the key and told the bees their owner was dead, the queen would come out and hover round you, and you could hear a faint buzz. "Then you took the key and told the bees their owner was dead, the queen decended did the queen come out and hover round just the same? "No" he said, "you could not deceive them like that." He had not tried himself, but he knew a man who had. Anyway, there was no doubt about it; you must tell the bees; it had been proved times out of number, I believe a considerable ritual about "telling the bees" exists in various parts of the country. It was new to me at first hand, described with simple faith only an Essex man and Norfolk and Staleman and Nation, (London).

How Stuttering is Cured

As youngsters Ilsey was always a laugh when a stuttering boy got up to do some reading. I believe we thought stuttering was a mental defect. When I got older, I was one of a number seeking a certain scholarship; the student who won it over all of us stuttered very badly. I corrected my idea that stuttering was a mental defect.

However, it is only in the last 10 to 20 years that research workers studying stuttering (and many of these workers were not physicians) discovered that stuttering was due simply to nervousness. They discovered that under certain circumstances such as quietness of the home there was no stuttering, no hesitancy in speech. This showed that there was nothing wrong with the mouth or vocal cords or stutterer. The world is not against him.

Instead of waiting for children "to grow out of the habit" of stuttering physicians today recognize that the stutterer is a very nervous individual, and that the cause of stuttering in one who is self-conscious in the presence of others and who will try to cure him out of himself.

Dr. James Sonnett Greene, New York, in his edition as guest editor, Medical World, states that there are "thirteen million or one in every of the population of the United States who have some sort of speech defect, a voice abnormality. Of the stutterers alone number over a million." Dr. Greene says that careful investigation usually will disclose that the majority of stutterers are products of home in which the parents are themselves very nervous. The young stutterer is really an outward sign of the youngster's feeling of inferiority or inability to cope with things as well as others.

At the Medical-Social Clinic in New York of which Dr. Greene is a director, the child is treated as if no speech defect were present. The atmosphere surrounding him is one of "friendly" nature. However, as the same time, the surrounding atmosphere and circumstances have been so arranged that the child has to face up to the physician and the other stutterers of the clinic. The real thing in life that he has been trying to avoid. He learns to use the telephone in private party, to address the other members of the group, and to take part in discussions.

In short, stuttering is cured because the stutterer learns to speak in the presence of others without nervous tension.

8,094 RELIEF WORKERS DISMISSED

Chicago, July 18.— (AP)—Illinois Works Progress Administration headquarters reported today 8,094 relief project workers have been dismissed in the state for failing to report for work within five days after leaving projects to protest against new wage and hour schedules. Headquarters said 30,362 Illinois workers left projects originally but that 17,234 avoided dismissal by returning within the five-day period.

Where Canada Gets Her Generals

With Lt.-Col. A. S. Pearson in command, the Essex Scottish are in camp at Pinehill. Other militia units are also there, under canvas. They are taking field training to supplement the courses they have studied during the spring.

The militia camps are important because it is from the militia that Canada will get the initial drafts of soldiers in the event of war. And, if we can guess some of the figures now at Pinehill will be leading battalions, batteries or brigades into action.

It is only necessary to dip back to 1914 and look at Canada's three generals, who led the Canadian Expeditionary Forces First Contingent to France. The Canadians were under command of Lt.-Gen. E. A. H. Alderson, an Imperial officer of combat experience. He was the division's general.

The three brigades were commanded by Canadians.

Lt.-Col. M. S. Mercer, was promoted to Brigadier-General in command of the First Brigade. He was a lawyer who had been commissioned a lieutenant in the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto in 1886. In 1911 he had become colonel in command of the O. R. R. He was 55 when the war broke out. He had passed the militia staff courses. In 1908 had been aide-de-camp of the Canadian Bisley team, and had always been a rifle shooting man. He was given command of the First Brigade.

General Mercer was promoted to command the Third Canadian Division in 1916, and was killed at Ypres on June 2, 1916, while in the front line during an enemy attack.

Lt.-Col. A. W. Currie was promoted to Brigadier-General in command of the Second Brigade. He had joined the ranks of the 5th British Columbia Mounted Rifles as Sedan Garrison Artillery, in 1895. By 1909 he was colonel in command of the artillery unit. In 1913 he transferred to the infantry and assumed command of the newly formed 50th Regiment in Victoria, B. C. He also had passed the militia staff course. For seven years he had been president of the British Columbia Rifle Association. He was a real estate and insurance broker and was 36 when war broke out.

He had not intended to join the Expeditionary Force at once, owing to financial reasons. However, Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, prevailed on him to accept command of a brigade. General Currie was promoted steadily until he took over command of the Canadian Corps on June 9, 1917, and commanded the Canadians in France until the end of the war. He became Principal of McGill University at Montreal and died in 1933 while holding that office.

Col. R. E. W. Turner, V.C., was promoted to Brigadier-General to command the Third Brigade. He was a year old and a successful grocer and merchant in Quebec City when war broke out. He had been commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the 10th Queen's Own Canadian Hussars at Quebec in 1892. He commanded the famous Q.O.C.H. from 1901 to 1905 and for five years commanded the 3rd Cavalry Brigade.

He served in the South African War with the Royal Canadian Dragoons and won both the Victoria Cross and the Distinguished Service Order. He was awarded the V.C. for gallantry at Lilliefontaine. Although he had been twice wounded he fought a rearguard action to cover two guns of "D" Battery, Royal Canadian Field Artillery. He won the D.S.O. for swimming the Vet River under enemy fire. He was past president of the Canadian Cavalry Association and was a colonel on the reserve of officers when the war started.

He was the only one of the three brigaders with actual active service experience. General Turner later became Chief of the General Staff, Overseas Military Forces of Canada, with headquarters in London, England. He is the only one of the three original brigaders-general still living.

Canadians hope that the officers and men in the militia camps of Canada won't be called on to serve in battle. But, they are in training. And, it was from the militia that Canada drew her first volunteers in 1914.—W. L. Clark in Windsor Star.

General Ironside Inspects Army

Warsaw, July 19.—(AP)—General Sir Edmund Ironside, Inspector General of British overseas forces, today began an inspection of various units of the army Poland holds ready to meet any general invasion.

General Ironside is expected to spend more days at Warsaw. After that he will tour industrial areas south of Warsaw. He flew from London Monday.

Polish cavalry units were turned out today for exercises before the visitor. Poland has some 40 regular infantry, numbering 40,000 men.

There has been comment abroad that the Polish army is "top-heavy" in this respect and that the cavalry is inconsistent with the modern trend toward mechanized equipment.

Miss Jane Storms Recalls How She and Girl Friend, Selling War Cry's 52 Years Ago, Accepted Appeal of Builders "Won't You Help Us'

It was away back in the year 1887. On Pinnacle Street an imposing structure was gradually taking form. Workmen of those days laboriously piled bricks in wheelbarrows and wheeled them inside the building where the master-craftsmen of over a half-century ago placed them in position and mortared them. A few weeks later the new Salvation Army Citadel and the first official place of worship of the Army in Belleville was opened.

During the early days of the erection of the building, two laughing-eyed lassies, War-Crys' beneath their arms, stood outside the structure to watch the progress of the workmen. They smiled and spoke words of encouragement. One of the workmen laughingly inquired, "Won't you help us?" And the two girls, then the Misses Jane Storms and Ella Kinch as laughingly acquiesced.

Trudged in With Loads of Bricks

They laid down their baskets of the War-Cry, piled bricks into wheelbarrows, trudged away with their loads to the inside of the building. Three or four times they made their journeys, then amiliingly picked up their papers and went their way.

Interviewed today at her home at South John Street, Mrs. Jane Storms recalled the events of those stirring days. When told that the work of demolishing the citadel to make way for the new structure, had started yesterday, tears glistened in her eyes. She stroked white hair and bent her head as she murmured, "It's too bad. We had such good times there." Mrs. Storms joined the Salvation Army here when Captain Hansen was in command and has been a devoted member of the corps down through a half-century. She attends every Sunday night, except when it is raining.

'Could Wheel Bricks Today'

She smiled when she recalled an invitation given her by Major Alderman to wheel bricks for the new citadel. "I don't know but what I might do it. I feel fine with the exception of a touch of hay fever that comes regularly every summer. But I could wheel bricks today if I am serenity — two years of age" she laughed.

For a period of fifty-two years the building now being demolished has stood the test of the elements. It was built with funds donated by the late William Bleecker, father of Miss Ella T. Bleecker, now residing at 15 Moira Street. "I don't remember much about it," Miss Bleecker said yesterday, "father never mentioned it often, but I know that he gave the funds for the erection of the citadel."

Farewell Service

Although the last service held in the citadel on Sunday night took the form of a "Hallelujah Wind-up," as Major Alderman puts it, there were mingled feelings of joy in anticipation of worshiping in the handsome new structure that will shortly go into service and regret at leaving the faithful building that has housed Salvation Army worshippers for the past five decades.

The large congregation, present to their joy in an enthusiastic song-service during which the people marched around the auditorium of the citadel. Leaving the citadel, however, found many of the congregation, who have worshipped there for years, moist-eyed at parting with the all-familiar surroundings.

Yesterday morning, the furnace, which will be used in the new structure, was removed with other articles from the citadel, skilled workmen under the guidance of Mr. Harry Parry, Belleville contractor, started the work of demolition early in the afternoon.

Members of the corps will worship at services held in the Liberal Committee Rooms, Front Street during the period of construction of the new citadel. Major Alderman announced yesterday.

5-Hour Conference Held Over Tientsin

Next Meeting is Fixed For Friday

Tokyo, July 19—(CP-Havas) Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie met twice today for conferences totalling nearly five hours as Anglo-Japanese negotiations were resumed over issues arising out of the Tientsin blockade.

A foreign office communique at the close of the second meeting said the negotiators held a "discussion on general questions forming the background to the situation at Tientsin."

The next meeting has been fixed for Friday.

Domei (Japanese) news agency said Sir Robert "manifested a conciliatory attitude although he clearly stated the stiff opinion prevailing in Britain."

(The Associated Press, on the other hand, described the conferences as "blocked" and quoted an authoritative source to the effect that the negotiators had parted "angrily.")

20 GARAGES CLOSED

Port Huron, Mich., July 19—(CP) — All but one of Port Huron's 21 garages were cliked today due to demands of mechanics for higher wages and union recognition. One independent owner left a sign on the front door reading: "Gone fishing. Back in the fall."

CAPTURES MARSH HAWKS

Bamberg, Ont., July 19—(CP) — Edward Grube captured two newly born marsh hawks and now he is wondering what to do with them. The birds are fierce and only their cage keeps them from attacking anyone coming near.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Clouds Over Europe"

The following review is made by Holy Young, staff movie reviewer for the Toronto, Globe and Mail on "Clouds Over Europe" which recently played a two weeks' engagement at the Uptown theatre, Toronto, and which is next slated to the McCarthy Theatre:

An Irving Asher Production, distributed by Columbia, directed by Tim Whalen, with the following cast:

Tony McVane . . . . Laurence Olivier
Kay Hammond . . . . Valerie Hobson
Major Hammond Ralph Richardson
Jenkins . . . . . George Curson
Barrett . . . . . George Merritt
Henkinsop . . . . Gus McNaughton
Mackenzie . . . . . Frank Pettit
Dalphne . . . . . Sandra Storme
Karl . . . . . Frank Pot
The Baron . . . . Gordon Mc Tree

Here's just the thing for ideal summer entertainment. A good old-fashioned rip-roaring melodrama that is crammed with action and thrills, and at the same time a comedy that will keep you in a constant quiver of series of snickers, chuckles and guffaws. "Clouds Over Europe" is an English production and was originally called "Q Planes". At present it stands by that name. It can only hope that the vociferous reception it has met with in the United States (which will doubtless be echoed in Canada) will prompt the producers to give more on the same line with Major Hammond. You see, Major Hammond is the chief secret of this film's appeal. He's one of those wonderful characters, in the style of Nick Charles of "Thin Man" fame and Clive Brook's vastly funny amusing. As portrayed by Ralph Richardson he's one of the most colorful characters that ever walked across a screen . . . he's human, irresponsible yet efficient, whimsical, and a perfect silly ass without being offensively so. He's one of those type of characters that you get a crush on (like Dopey in "Snow White").

However, while Richardson steals the film he is far from being its only ingredient. There is a top notch cast headed by Laurence Olivier . . . who is currently in extraordinary demand over here for both stage and screen and lovely Valerie Hobson (remember the "wife" in "Drums")! Miss Hobson has a delightful role as a perky newspaper gob sister, and makes a very intriguing job of it, too. Mr. Olivier, while given first billing, is relegated to a rather unsympathetic juvenile role, but does it with his usual competence.

In addition you'll find other familiar English players in the cast (have you noticed how they're beginning to resemble those players now after all these years?) such as Gordon McLeod (he's the guy who subbed for Sir John Martin Harvey when the knighted actor was ill here in Toronto many years ago, and who made such a hit as understudy that he made a subsequent, tour as a star in his own right. Most recently you've seen him in the two Anna Neagle Victoria films as coachman John Brown) and Sandra Storme (the lady with the very starey name is England's star model. You may recall that she was taken all the way to Hollywood to pose momentarily on a pedestal in one of these girl-and-glamour scenes in an early Jack Benny "Artists and Models" film). Miss Storme plays the part of the girl friend with whom the Major is never able to keep a date.

It might be an idea to tell you that there is also a play on "Clouds Over Europe" and it's a swell old melodramatic thriller, all about German spies who have perfected a ray that puts aeroplanes out of commission. Every time the British send up a brand new machine with some startling invention on it, the ray brings down the plane and it disappears. That's where Major Hammond comes into the picture. He's a member of the Intelligence Department (there's a label on the door to prove it) and he sets out to solve the mystery . of the disappearing planes. The action stuff is thrilling and at times spectacular, and there's a spectacular finale when a British destroyer chases the tramp steamer that the spies use as a base of operations.

I think "Clouds Over Europe" is just about the most entertaining picture I've seen yet this summer.

AT THE BELLE

"LUCKY NIGHT"
"TELL NO TALES"

To sock or not to sock. That was the question that threatened Shirley na Loy's reputation as the Perfect Lady of the Screen—until Robert Taylor intervened.

The authors of the first on-starring picture for Miss Loy and Taylor, "Lucky Night" now at the Belle Theatre, thought it would be amusing for the Perfect Lady to bang a haymaker on the jaw of Bernard Nedell, the gambling lord in the picture, just before he bounces Miss Loy and Taylor out of his gambling place.

Louis D. Lighton, the producer, thought it an amusing incidence. Miss Loy socking a gambler—and Norman Taurog, the director, also approved it and went ahead with preparations to film it.

But Taylor thought otherwise. He regards Miss Loy as among the tops of the lovely stars and for three years it had been his secret ambition to be co-starred with her. When the time arrived it pained him to see the Perfect Lady put a gambler to sleep with a haymaker.

"She's always been the perfect something or other," Taylor argued. "Like any other Perfect Lady she would never clip a guy with a flash of dynamite. Think of her public before you let her do it."

As a result of Taylor coming to the defense, Miss Loy remains the Perfect Lady in "Lucky Night." Although she does not K. O. Nedell in the picture, she does what any lady would do. She slaps him—but s-plenty!

"WORKING LIKE A HORSE"

In this case a man really "worked like a horse". Oliver Fairbrass, a farmer near Omaha, Neb., had the misfortune to have four of his horses die just at haying time. He just hitched himself up with his 16-year-old mare, Queen, and "pulled 'till my eyes stuck out", Mrs. Fairbrass drove the "team" and haying went on as usual. Fairbrass explained that it took five hours to accomplish what should have been done in one.

RELIEF WORK OF MASONRY NOT OBLIGATION

Statement Made by Grand Master, W. J. Dunlop in His Address

RELIGION NECESSITY

Toronto, July 19—(CP)—William J. Dunlop, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario A.F. & A.M., told the annual meeting of the Lodge here today there is a tendency to stress unduly the relief work of the Lodge.

"Materialism, unchecked, will undermine the foundations of Masonry," he said. "We are somewhat reticent, as a rule, in stating the total amount of the funds used for the relief of our aged, infirm, indigent and destitute brethren or their families. This assistance must never be regarded—and sometimes it is, unfortunately, so regarded — as the right of a prospective recipient, or as obligation on the part of the Order."

The Grand Master said that during the year he received many letters from people, demanding assistance as a right, who believe relief in money should be forthcoming without question because they have been paid over a period of years.

"We must resist any tendency to exalt benevolence beyond its proper place in the varied and comprehensive service which Masonry renders to those who understand its mission," he said.

Mr. Dunlop said he ruled there is no objection to a band leading a Masonic funeral procession and that pall-bearers need not be Masons. He said he hoped that this ruling would be approved by the lodge meeting.

Visit Strengthened Ties

The Grand Master said the visit of the King, honored patron of Freemasonry, and the Queen strengthened Canada's ties with Britain and the visit to the United States "deepened the strong feeling of friendship which exists between the two great English-speaking countries."

Mr. Dunlop recommended that the Grand Master be permitted to use his own judgment in special cases and be permitted to award the veteran's medal "even if the requirements have not been exactly and technically complied with, provided always that at least 30 years have elapsed since the brother was initiated."

Religion is a vital necessity to every Mason, the Grand Master stated, and "our order is the handmaid of the church."

"Our generation worships acceleration," he continued. "We who are Masons must give time and thought to a better way."

"The type of religion which is overwhelming, all-absorbing, and almost fanatical, practised, taught and lived about by some extremists, may have driven many good men away from participation in the means provided for the practice of real religion.

"Sectarianism and the discussion thereof have no place in Masonry, but true religion is vital to every Mason," he said.

20 MARXIANS HELD IN DANZIG

Socialists Are Assumed to be 'Presumably' With Hostile Foreign Power'

Danzig, July 19—(AP)— Danzig police announced today that 20 Marxian Socialists, presumably associated with some hostile foreign power" have been arrested here.

The police said they had evidence explosives are being stored by the "Marxians" and that the alleged conspirators were prepared to blow up bridges. They asserted the prisoners would be charged with treason.

The announcement did not name the power with which the "prisoners were accused of having relations, but authorized sources said the police were trying to find out if the conspiracy extended into Poland and Russia."

Authorities said the 20 were arrested over the course of several weeks, some in the City of Danzig and some near the Polish border to the south.

Weddings

HOAGLAND—HILL

A wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hill, Trenton, Saturday, when their daughter, Jean Dewar Hill, became the bride of Mr. Douglas Hoagland, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hoagland, Winnetka, Ill. The house was decorated with white hydrangea and blue delphinium for the ceremony, which was conducted by Rev. J. H. Robins. Miss E. Perkin played the wedding music.

Given away by her father, the bride was wearing forget-me-not stiffened chiffon with white moiré, fashioned on simple directoire lines with sweetheart neckline and large puff sleeves. She had a full skirt with corseted waist and a Juliet cap of stiffened chiffon. She carried a bouquet of roses and blue cornflowers and was unattended.

At a reception afterwards, Mrs. Hill received, wearing black printed chiffon with a large black hat and a corsage of orchids.

After a wedding trip in northern Quebec, the couple will live in Perron, Que. For travelling the bride wore a navy blue sheer dress with a pink polka dot redingote, navy hat and navy accessories. The bride is a graduate of Victoria college, Toronto, and the groom graduated from Northwestern university, Chicago.

Film Records Toronto Boy's Outing At "Jack Hayes" Picnic

Mr. Patrick Hayes and the Misses Hayes have returned from Cobourg, where they motored on Monday with Mr. John Hayes, who was en route to his home in Rochester, New York.

Mr. John Hayes while in the city over the week-end entertained a group of friends, the feature of the evening being the showing of a colored film that had recorded the sports and fun enjoyed by 238 boys of Toronto at the "Jack Hayes" picnic held in Niagara Falls on July 6th. The boys, members of a club in the poorer district in Toronto, are feted annually by their special benefactor, Mr. Hayes at a Christmas week dinner and this year at the banquet they will see the pictures of their outing.

The film recorded all the excitement attendant on such an event as the two hundred boys, supervised by a number of Kiwanians, left on a boat for Queenston. Here they were met by Mr. Hayes and embarked on buses for Niagara Falls. Games, contests and a picnic lunch made the day a memorable one for the boys, many of whom had never been on a boat before. The entire film was ideal and the cameraman had caught the scenic beauties of the background perfectly on the colored film.

MARRIAGE CAUSES RIOT

Torsilla Michielli, 16, is barricaded in the apartment of Carmelo Locaspia, bridegroom, after it was found that their May-December wedding had aroused a storm of consternation in Greenwich Village. Locaspia was forced to run for his life before an irate crowd on the day of the wedding and now he finds that bricks are shattering the windows of his honeymoon apartment. Locaspia is 40, and it is the disparity in ages between himself and his bride which is believed to have so aroused the neighborhood.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

The Grotna Greens Are Going Fast

A few weeks ago the staid old town of Alexandria, Virginia, much more aristocratic and whooping than its neighbor, Washington, D.C., was the hope of young people who sometimes "marry in haste and repent at leisure."

But a day or two ago the Alexandria City Council adopted an ordinance requiring medical certificates of freedom from communicable disease as a prerequisite of marriage. This law will of course, slow up speed-marriages. And in addition to the cost of the license, there will be the physician's fee for the certificate. All of which helps put another Gretna Green out of business.

Nor is Alexandria alone in frowning upon the hasty marriage of people with communicable disease. A dispatch from Charleston, West Virginia, a week or so ago, states: "The marriage license business has fallen off so much in this state that county clerks have to look at the calendar to make sure it's June and the traditional month of brides."

Since May 26, persons desiring marriage licenses have had to present a physician's certificate showing that they are free from social diseases in an infectious form. And it's not that the applicants themselves are afraid that they can't pass the blood tests it's that they resent the publicity and the time involved.

The implication that there is any physical taint in their blood is resented by people who desire to marry. They feel their word should be taken for it without the insistance of an examination and a certificate from a physician. And applies to tuberculosis and other diseases as well as social diseases.

But how are we ever going to eradicate disease if people insist on becoming personal about such things? In European countries the control of diseases is far ahead of us, on account of legislation. Over there no one seems to feel that there is any degradation or implied indignity in the demand for health certificates. It's just a formality of the business of getting married.

No denying it, we Americans are an incorrigibly romantic people. We admit that marriage, children, and homes are the foundations of the state, and yet we try to evade one of the indispensable requisites of rugged health: Freedom from disease.

We seem to think that a certificate of good health would deprive marriage of all that charming frills which from time immemorial have been the right of the bride. Yet European countries while admitting the health certificate as indispensable, go in for many more charming wedding customs, some of which come down from the remote past, than we do.

Who doesn't recall the bridal procession wandering along country lanes and city streets, and in more countries of the world than Germany wearing their national costumes—if any such is left in this harum-scarum world today.

So the United States, always a bit slow about changing its way, is feeling grim over the failing off of its weddings. However, it will be used to the good common sense of a medical certificate, which is really a sort of long-life insurance. we'll probably accept it as we have accepted other remedial legislation with results, after we finish kicking.

Your Vacation Messages Reveal Your Taste

In the small fraction of the year this most of us have for our vacation, it is unreasonable expenditure of time to write many letters. The relaxation that our minds should be having should not be complicated by thoughts of duty letters.

Instead of spending precious minutes of our holiday bidding to this agitation, make up your mind (and warn your friends) that you will not before you leave) that you are not going to be so prodigal of your time that you go much need for rest and recreation. Unless your vacation is to be spent in search of supply of post-cards, plain and "picture" and use them to carry the messages that are reminders.

Post-cards are friends in need, conscience-savers to make sure it's June and the happy vacationist who is busy filling every precious two weeks.

The mother, father, sister, brother, close friend will be delighted with messages written on "scenery cards" . . . a card a day will do.

Your little daily message taken only a minute or two and can be sent or two. Yet what a difference this thoughtfulness will make to the person left home. Most of us don't ask long screeds from our precious vacationing, but want only a word—a visible proof that we are not forgotten.

A few simple words express affection, and yet they could be shouted from the house-tops. And much publicity may happen to a post-card.

And here is where etiquette steps in. For a post-card should be discreet and self-controlled. It expresses us "for better or for worse", and can be read by anybody who chooses to read it. That in itself is a responsibility.

Perhaps I needn't warn you . . . or should I? . . . how easy it is to let your pen run away with your manner, and especially with your sense of discretion. When Girl Writes Boy or Boy Writes Girl their pens should not divulge unguarded thoughts, sentences that may later rear their heads to cause embarrassment or even shame.

And don't let yourself buy, or let anyone else persuade you to buy, cards that are supposed to be funny and decidedly miss the point, or cards that will not be as funny when they arrive as you thought when you sent them.

Is Gift Necessary?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Please let me know if it is necessary to give a gift when invited to a wedding to the church only? Some of my friends think it is, but I think it is not.

W.

If you know that there is to be a reception, and you are invited, to the ceremony only, this would mean that you are not a very close friend of the bride or of the groom and therefore it is not necessary for you to send a gift. Usually if we are invited to the wedding reception, we do send a gift. And if we are invited only to the ceremony and there is to be a reception, we need not send a gift.

As a matter of fact no rule or regulation can be established about the propriety of when to send a wedding gift and when not to send one. As in the case of gifts for any other occasion, we naturally send a gift if we wish to, and don't if we don't wish to. And this is the only logical answer.

Staving Off Wrinkles Longer

By Helen Follett

EVEN THOUGH life is more strenuous than it was in the yore days, women stave off wrinkles for a longer time. They have learned to bear their burdens lightly, not mope and sob. They laugh more; gaiety has become fashionable. They live wisely, ply nourishing creams that keep the facial tissues toned.

The popularity of cosmetics has been a factor in retaining skin-tone youth. They keep the skin clean, for one thing. Powder is a protective agent against wind, strong sunlight and atmospheric dust. Friction necessary to the application of tinted lubricants acts as an exercising agent for the tiny fibres of the skin and the heavier ones upon which the tissues rest.

When cells collapse and lose strength, the skin is like a coat that is too large, so it falls into folds. It is wise then to plot out a nourishing diet and to get more sleep. Worry, too, is a cause of wrinkles; frets your gizzard pin and the beauty upkeep will be something terrible.

Avoid hot water because it is relaxing. Use water just warm enough to make a suds. Rinse with tepid water, then with cold. Be gentle when drying the face. Have the skin thoroughly dry before applying a cream, because a moist surface lets dirt against oils.

As soon as the tiniest break appears on a finger-nail, get out your emery board and give it a smooth edge. In the course of the day's activities you are likely to catch the break on some object or fabric, cause a wound that goes far into the flesh. Such a condition is subject to infection and that's a danger.

Method of Instilling Breath in Newly-Born Infants Compares with Ancient Procedure

One of the most recent discoveries of starting new-born infants off to their first breath is a procedure that midwives and doctors have been practising for centuries without knowing its full scientific significance. I know I have often done it myself.

I refer to the recent discovery that the administration of a gas mixture to the baby won't take its first breath is about the best thing that can be done. Actually the practice of breathing into the mouths of infants is as old as the centuries. "Blowing breath into them", we always called it. We did not know until recently that it was the gas mixture in our breaths that did the trick.

It is quite a thing to "blow breath" into a baby who looks as though he were dead or dying. It is enough to attend a young woman's first confinement. I found the rods in the end and went part of the way on a freight train. The father and I were in a state of panic, and drove me the remaining miles into the little clearing where he had built his cabin.

I was there in plenty of time for the birth, and the woman didn't have a terribly hard time—they are hardy women, these wives of settlers in the north. The baby was a normal-sized boy, but when I examined him I saw that he wasn't breathing. It was one of my first confinement cases, and I must admit I was a little panic-stricken about it all. I hurriedly tried to recall things I had heard in the university about such cases. . . . Suddenly I remembered my father. I had never seen him perform this trick of blowing breath into a dying child, but he had often told me of it. I knew, too, it was a last resort, so I wiped my mouth—my lips were pretty dry by then, anyway—and blew my breath gently into the little mouth.

Well, in just about a minute that child gave a gasp and a cry and commenced to breath. I can never forget that first wild moment and all my feelings of exaltation when it succeed. I have blown breath into dozens of babies since then, but it is this particular one that stands out most in my mind.

Today the more scientific way is to administer gas to the child by means of a rubber which fits fairly tightly over the face. A rubber bag runs from there into a flying-bar bag which contains the proper mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide. This bag is squeezed rhythmically ten or fifteen times per minute.

Of course this method requires considerable preparation which the average country physician does not have at his disposal. I have no doubt that many of these men will continue to follow the old-fashioned practice of "blowing" breath into babies who do not start breathing themselves.

Occasionally in hospitals, where very weak babies are born and the above method won't work, they insert a tube almost to the bronchi and introduce the gas away down there.

Fashion Flashes

GOING BIG is the combination of stark white with a dash of bright red. A classic suit of thin white flannel with a red and white pin-stripe in red is lovely with white or red accessories.

Three cheers for one of the accessories outfits given this season. A white flannel eight-gored skirt and a matching cardigan jacket piped in dark blue. A white felt or blue wool pullover might complete it.

Gray emerges as a popular summer color, especially in a shade with a bluish cast. Gray printed in white makes many smart frocks and ensembles in silk and cotton. A Gray lace is an evening favorite.

If you like to look your best in informal summer clothes, choose either a cartwheel hat or a diminutive model. A disc of white organdie trimmed with pale red currants and green leaves, worn well forward over one eye and held by a broad red satin band is provocative.

DENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

BY PETER BENEDICT

"Yes, I remember. I'm not likely to forget. His wanted it, for that same reason that he wanted Court Brandon, and no other place, for his colony. He wanted it because it was beautiful. Frankly, he cared more for those things than I did. But nothing less than the loveliest valley in the county would do for the people of his city; and nothing less than the loveliest hollow in it was good enough to offer them. He wanted it for a sort of natural park; that was all."

Catherine said, with the first sign of tension she had shown: "Why didn't you tell me this before? You could have saved us both from this horrible business."

"And fired myself; no, thank you. I prefer to do as he wishes, then tell him: I daresay he'll sneak my own death-warrant now," he said, with a shrug of his broad shoulders, "but it was worth it to have you know at last where you stand."

Catherine stood up, and gathered her coat about her. "Just where I stand! Yes, if it's any consolation to you, I know that now. Thank you for helping me to know it, Mr. Dyer," she said, with a shrug of her own shoulders, "I'll stay no longer to bother you. Good-by."

Mickey rose from his chair, and pushed the instrument into her hands, and sat upon the edge of the desk, watching her, as she dialled the exchange.

"Stanchester Central 7397 here. I want a call to London, please."

It did not take long, but in the silence while they waited, his eyes never left her face. He said: "What are you going to do?"

"You'll hear," said Catherine, with a wintry smile. "I'll not say another word until she spoke into the mouthpiece again, some six or seven minutes later. Then when he heard the number for which she asked, he gave an audible gasp, and after that listened with concentration—waited for the word, as she had half-invited him to do.

"Hullo! Is that the law courts? I'm sorry if it's irregular, but I want to speak to my counsel" She gave the number of the court, and the title of the case, with a wry twist of her mouth. "It's a matter of great importance. This is Mrs. Court speaking—I—wish—could see you bring Mr. Strang to the telephone, then, instead? You'll find him in court with the prosecution."

And after what seemed an age to the two people waiting breathlessly in the little Stanchester office, Lyddon Strang came.

"Oh, Lyddon, this is Catherine speaking. Does it matter where I am? Now, listen, and please believe that I mean what I say. Tell Beresford to stop the case — to withdraw it altogether. Say it was undertaken on mistaken premises. I'll take full responsibility for it all —I mean, the costs—and anything else there may be to it—under us—only the case has got to stop now —today. Yes— A faint smile curved her lips. "Yes, you heard me right. I can't explain now. Come up to Court Brandon, and I'll tell you all about it. But now please get it done as I want it done. I shan't rest until I know it's finished with—the whole miserable business. Thank you—goodbye, Lyddon."

The telephone rapped on its stand. "And thank you, Mr. Dennis," she said tranquilly, and pulling on her gloves moved towards the door.

Mickey sprang to open it; she smiled at that, but he did not care. She was a different woman to him now; and even if he was as far as ever from understanding her, he was nearer to admiring her.

"Do you—does that really mean that—the case is wasted costing? What about the land? You see, the chief said, with a shrug of his broad shoulders, "but it was worth it to have you know at last where you stand."

Catherine stood up, and gathered her coat about her. "Just where I stand! Yes, if it's any consolation to you, I know that now. Thank you for helping me to know it, Mr. Dyer."

But as she ran down the stairs from Adam's office she knew that she had lied, that there was no positive and inescapable thing left but all that would energy and enthusiasm. She felt it burning under her glove as she ran, the half-filled diamonded pigskin her engagement finger.

CHAPTER XVIII

PROBERT GIVES EVIDENCE

On the third day of the hearing the Court v. Probert, the absence of the plaintiff was noticed and remarked upon by several people, and from several view-points. The newspapers missed her because she had made the former two days bearable by her near presence, and without her the affair became instantly as insufferably dull as they supposed it had always been in reality.

Lyddon Strang missed her chiefly because he was in agony about the state of mind, her whereabouts, and the tone of the message he had had from her after her flight on the previous evening. Beyond all this personal and very real suffering, he had been badgered unceasingly that morning, not only by Joan and Henry Dunstan, whose combined thoughts ran rather to search parties than court cases, but also by Ronnie Beresford and Maxingham, who needed her continued presence before the eyes of the exclusively masculine jury in order to make the case sufficiently interesting to run the possible damages high.

He had put them all off with a thin story of an unexpected duty call back to Court Brandon, and assured them that she would be back during the day. Ronnie Beresford missed her somewhat less than the fickleness or otherwise of jurymen's memories, he liked Catherine very much, and was not averse to her notice.

But no one knew why the defendant should regret her absence; indeed, no one but Lyddon knew that he did regret it. Adam had signed him as they entered the court, and asked:

"Isn't Mrs. Court ill with you this morning? I hope she's not ill?"

Reassured on this point without any explanation, he had smiled at his vaguely irritating smile which seemed always to see a little more of the funny side of things than Lyddon could believe existed, and had been content to wait his own place.

Yet, as he sat listening to Wyndham's sarcastic drawl opening the defence for him, the court seemed to him singularly empty and dull without that blue dress, and those dark brown eyes continually watching, and that calm and implacable face turning now and then from one to her supporters to see other, without a smile, and with no apparent interest.

But he, him, too, the case had become dull; the causes of it seemed to him singularly empty and dull real things about the whole affair were two pairs of eyes that looked each other in the darkness beside the pool, in the moment before the darkness grew wet with rain, and odd how a fight which had begun with a blank had changed; and he knew that they had suffered a sea change than any shifting of principles could work upon them. He wondered if she felt anything of that transformation.

He rose to give evidence still in the contemplative mood to which the remembrance of her face meant more than the battle did fight for anything.

"On Tuesday, the 4th of September," remarked Wyndham, studying the effect of his long fingers against the papers spread before him, "you made the purchase upon which this case turns —you bought the three meadows bordering on Holly Lane, from the District Council."

"I did," said Adam.

"The project had not been previously mentioned to the Council?"

"No. It had been in my mind for about a week, though."

"And to whom did you go on Tuesday, the 4th of September?"

"To the chairman. Mr. Washburn, at the Council Offices."

"At what time was that?"

"At about ten in the morning, I suppose, when I got there. At any rate, the clock in the vestibule stood at about a quarter to eleven when I left."

"Did the chairman make any demur to your offer?"

"He would have preferred to have the proposal laid before the Council, I think, but as I said, I wanted it at once, or not at all, so he agreed to take the responsibility for the sale."

"Did he make any mention whatever of the plaintiff, or any claim she might be able to make on the said property?"

"No, and I'm sure he was aware of none."

"Did you meet anyone as you left the offices?"

"Yes," said Adam, "I met Mrs. Court just going in. I didn't know her then, but she was pointed out to me later by the same man."

I shall call witnesses, my lord," said Wyndham, "to show that Mrs. Court, on that same day, visited no less than ten members of the Council, and various other influential people also, and begged them to help her to get rid of Mr. Probert by any means."

DRAMA IN COURT

The court buzzed for the first time that morning, but this time the sound was vaguely pleasurable like the bees in the limes of Court Brandon.

"From this time until the day that you received the writ, did Mrs. Court give you any indication that she had or could have such a claim against you?"

"No."

"Therefore you had, of course, no opportunity to withdraw from your position. Did you pay a visit to her on that day, and make her the offer of which we have heard before—to buy the disputed ground from her at her own price?"

"Yes, I did."

"And after which, I understand, she refused without hesitation or attempt to come to an agreement?"

"She refused it absolutely."

Wyndham relinquished his witness at last to Ronnie Beresford, who had few but choice questions to ask him. There was now no doubt that the court was bored. When Catherine had departed the possibility of drama left with her. Not even the curious anxiety of the plaintiff could quite restore it.

"On the occasion of your first interview with Mrs. Court," said Ronnie Beresford, "will you agree with me that there was at least amounted a formal declaration of war between the two of you? You stood for belief in different things; that was all. And each of you fully understood the position. Am I right in saying that?"

"Entirely. Mrs. Court expressed absolute enmity, and I understood her point of view."

"This state of war, then, was mutually agreed to?"

"It was."

"And has she, in your opinion, conducted it in an honourable fashion?"

"Absolutely."

"Do you yourself, then, think that she owed you any further warning of the movements she intended to make against you, after that day?"

"No. She owed me no more consideration than she would to a state of war owe to each other; and so much she gave me from the beginning."

"It seems to me," said the judge, "a very remarkable arrangement."

"It was rather understood than expressed, my lord, but there's no doubt whatever that we both accepted it. And it has," said Adam, with a smile, "given us very have a trustworthy opponent, at any rate, considerable advantages over certain other business methods."

Ronnie Beresford turned over a note upon his table, and Wyndham continued to fill in the remaining precision, and no regard for the memory of Mr. Deeds, every line of his evidence. And at that moment a diversion was caused by an astonishing thing: drew every eye upon himself as he moved his quiet way to Lyddon Strang's side.

Everyone saw him at once, and instantly, from which the case itself could no longer interest. seemed to gather about him like a cloud, with a spurt of pace, and suddenly filling her voice; "there's nothing left of it. Nothing at all!"

But as she ran down the stairs from Adam's office she knew that she had lied, that there was no positive and inescapable thing left but all that would energy and enthusiasm. She felt it burning under her glove as she ran, the half-filled diamonded pigskin her engagement finger.

Victim By Request

BY THAYER WALDO

Giving her hair a final touch before the mirror, Carlotta Wills rose. Marie came forward with her coat and Carlotta slipped listlessly into it.

Dull fatigue lay heavy upon her; her body and mind were one great deadened weariness.

Six gruelling days of rehearsal, and the end not yet in sight.

Ten, twelve, fourteen hours on set at a stretch had been the program with everyone pressing on edge. And all because her scheduled leading bought at that fifty-thousand last week of filming to be stricken with appendicitis.

Carlotta thought of him, lying quietly in a hospital bed, and sighed with envy.

It would even be worth the pain she reflected, just to have such a respite.

Pulling the coat close about her, she turned and then stopped short, looking at Marie in sudden annoyance.

The maid still wore her cap and had made no move toward donning her street clothes.

"Well, what's the matter, Marie?" Carlotta snapped irritably. "Why aren't you ready to go?"

The girl stared at her with hard eyes, stammered: "Why, you—you told me I could have tonight off, Miss Willi. I—"

"Oh, of course—of course," Carlotta broke in, one hand going to her head in a vague, tired gesture. "I'd forgotten."

She felt a baffled sort of vexation. Here it was again—an utter loss of memory.

A dozen times in the past few days such things had happened.

This relentless grind was simply wearing her out, ripping her nerves.

Carlotta gave a hopeless little shrug and moved once more toward the dressing-room door, with a backhand took the knob, Marie called:

Flushing, Carlotta wordlessly took the purse and went out.

It was bad enough to be in such a state; to have one's maid a constant witness brought positive humiliation.

Across the deserted lot she slowly walked, heading for a little side gate where Somers would be waiting with the car.

Daylight had nearly vanished and the studio buildings hulked darkly against a fading sky.

The only light came from the laboratory windows, behind which, where they would work all night developing today's footage.

Approaching the gate, Carlotta glimpsed through its grating her limousine's long lines.

Somers, the chauffeur, was standing by the side nearest her, his uniformed figure motionless.

Odd, she thought, that he didn't see her and come forward to open the gate.

Without calling to him, however, she walked briskly, her back herself and stepped onto the sidewalk.

There was a sudden swift movement, and then something hard was pressing her back. A low, crisp voice said:

"Keep right on going and get in, please."

Her fat an instant Carlotta wavered and stood still.

Fear clutched at her sickeningly; the impulse to scream was strong. But the prodding from behind became firmer and she resumed walking, repeated sharply.

She moved toward the car door which Somers, tense and distraught looking, had opened.

"Get in, Miss Willis," the chauffeur gasped; "he got the drop on me and—"

"Be quiet!" the voice barked, adding: "Take your seat and drive ahead." Then to Carlotta: "Get in the coast. And remember—no false moves or you're finished."

Somers obeyed as Carlotta entered the car, and shrank into the corner of the cushions.

A man, tall and broad-shouldered, his face shadowed by hat brim and upturned coat collar, followed quickly and sat beside her. Then the car shot forward.

For the next dozen blocks no word was spoken.

As the first shock diminished, Carlotta began to consider the thing calmly.

She was, of course, being kidnaped. Surely an unpleasant situation, but somehow she felt a secret little thrill.

Whatever else, it meant a break in the daily, nerve-racking monotony that had lately been her sole portion.

Unnatural: Perhaps to view it so, but... The voice cut the silence:

"I'll cost somebody fifty thousand dollars to get you back. Who's that going to be?"

Carlotta started. Ransom—she hadn't thought of that! Fifty thousand dollars: a half year's salary, a fifth interest in the star's account; the studio would have to furnish it. Then, morning of steady work, and the chance finally to repay the amount. And just when a vacation had been in sight.

Tears of weary frustration welled in her eyes.

Then suddenly she remembered.

That hundred-thousand dollar policy she'd taken out last year—it was kidnap insurance!

Carlotta's face was gusty with relief. Nothing else about the situation seemed to matter.

She became conscious that the man was waiting an answer.

"I think," she said him, almost haughtily, "that you may have forgotten that my dangerous game you're playing. Courts are giving the limit for ransom."

"That's only when they catch you —and the odds against it are still pretty good. Now, will you answered my question."

Carlotta uttered a little inward him.

Momentarily the beam from a passing street lamp shone in; she had a fleeting glimpse of bold, dark features, and aggressively handsom: face with ironic eyes.

"Perhaps," she said, "I didn't intend to."

The man held master; an almost carefree mood was growing upon her.

Once more the adventurous aspects of this loomed uppermost.

After all, one couldn't be very terrified at being kidnaped by such an attractive man.

Opening her purse, Carlotta felt in it for cigarettes.

A bulky envelope met her hand; puzzled she brought it out and leaned over the car window.

Then, in one flash, all her jaunty freedom was gone.

Across the white rectangle were three lines of heavy black print; the first read: MR. ROGERS PRICE —INDEMNITY AGENT, and she didn't need to go on.

In that envelope was the kidnap insurance policy that had been sent her for signature; she had forgotten to return it.

Carlotta visibly slumped in the seat. Here was another of those awful memory lapses—this time a fatal one.

An audible little moan of anguish escaped her.

Then the man was bending closer, seeming to peer intently at the envelope.

He gave a low chuckle and said: "I'll accept that one for the joke and save you the trouble of sending it."

Carlotta glanced up sharply. He was holding out a card.

She took it and looked at the engraved lettering. It spelled: J. ROGERS PRICE.

"You see," he went on smoothly, "procrastination can be very hazardous in matter of this kind. So when you neglected to return the policy, I thought a little demonstration might prove salutary. You're not angry?"

Leaning forward, he picked up the speaking tube and said to the chauffeur:

"You can turn back now. This was—a mistake."

Carlotta closed her handbag with a decisive click and looked at him.

"Yes," she said, "I am angry—very. You'll have to be taught a lesson yourself."

With a quick movement she snatched the tube from him and spoke into it:

"Somers, you're taking orders from me again. Keep right on driving. This is an abduction."

J. Louis Comiskey, Owner Of Chicago White Sox, Dies From Heart Attack, Pneumonia

Most Colorful "Second Generation" Leaders in History of Baseball

54 YEARS OLD

Took Charge of Club's Affairs on Death of His Father in 1931

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—Death of J. Louis Comiskey, president and owner of Chicago White Sox, removes from baseball one of the most colorful "second generation" leaders in the history of the sport.

Victim of a heart ailment and pneumonia, Comiskey died yesterday in the same summer home at Eagle River, Wis., where his famous father, Charles A. Comiskey, died eight years ago at the age of 72. He had been ill a week.

Comiskey was 54 and the only son of the noted "old man," founder of the club. The body will be brought here tonight for funeral services Saturday.

Saturday's Game Postponed

By American League custom, the White Sox Saturday game with New York Yankees will be postponed.

Harry Grabiner, who started in the White Sox organization 26 years ago as an office boy, and served as Vice-President under both Comiskeys, will continue in charge of the Club.

News of Comiskey's death was received at Comiskey Park while the White Sox were winning the second game of a doubleheader with Boston Red Sox. No public announcement was made but at Grabiner's order the flag in centre field was lowered to half staff.

Comiskey spent all his life in the service of the club in a father-dominated 29 years ago. As a boy he had an ambition to follow his father's footsteps and at the early age of the heart ailment appeared early and as a youth he began what was a career in the business office.

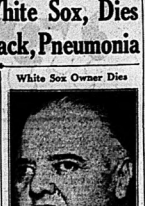
A Ponderous Man

He was a ponderous man, scaling as much as 300 lbs. at times, a factor which contributed to his early death. He had no great part in the affairs of the club until after his father's death in 1931.

In the next eight years, however, despite almost constant ill-health, he developed the White Sox back into a position they had once occupied since the team was wrecked by the Black Sox scandal in 1919. His clubs won the first four stars from Philadelphia Athletics, Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Lefty Grove.

Then in May, 1934, he elevated Dykes to the managership, replacing Lew Fonseca, and the White Sox skyrocketed immediately from the club finished in the first division in 1935, 1936 and 1937.

Comiskey watched with interest the growing popularity of night baseball and only a month ago reached a decision to floodlight Comiskey Park, its first night game will be played next month.



White Sox Owner Dies

Suffering from a heart disease for a number of years, J. Louis Comiskey, AL'VER., president and owner of the American league Chicago White Sox, died at his summer home at Eagle River, Wisconsin, Tuesday. Members of his family were summoned to his bedside. The Sox have been a Comiskey holding since way back, when the present owner's father, Charles Comiskey, the "Old Roman" ran from the playing ranks to take over the team.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

A lot of you folks have had a lot of thrills in your day, Some of you have experienced that tense moment when the batter faces the pitcher with two out and the winning run on third base and the pitcher winds up, then the batsmith cocks the apple out of the lot to win the ole ball game .... then you have had the experience when the coaghnets pound down the stretch, the finish line, nostrils dilated, and you have felt that swelling around the cardiac region (heart to you) when the cup on which you placed the next month's rent flashes under the wire by a whisker.

And in all probability you have seen the home team with their backs against the figurative wall when the 9 score is but back the forward lines of the opposing football squad, and on the first down, fail that lump in your throats when the home-town fullback gets upa away for a hundred and five yards for the winning touchdown .... and you have felt another one a hundred and one thrills not only in the realm of sport but in other phases of life as well ....

But brother, you ain't seen nuthin yet! if you haven't seen one of these speedsters they call 'em hydroplanes, cavorting around a water highway tearing up the joint goin at a speed of from eighty to ninety miles per hour.. and you have never gazed at these water-hoppers rip around a sharp turn in a cloud of silver spray, then straighten out and go to it like a greyhound' to leap down the straightaway, spume flying from bows that slip over the top of the water like greased lightning. Then you have the thrill of your life coming to you....

And that is what you will see when the starter's gun sends the water kangaroos away in their quest for honor, glory and gold trophies in the Regatta Rumblings here on Civic holiday.... when Mickie Fraser, the speedboat man of the waterways gives his "Tops 'rd" the gun, with another half-dozen of the 3-point-hydroplane-biting at his tail, you are in for the finest thrill of your life as the silver-haired veteran, who has the 226 hydroplane speedboats world record easily beaten, at his helm is not going to give it up without a struggle, and Jack Hanson, who has pulled "Tops" around the course at a speed of 72 miles per hour, and had the record in the well-known container, only to have his motor conk out when his hockey hornet up, will be out to get that mark back.

But don't think it will be a one-boat race .... Dave Foreman of Buffalo, and Chauncey Lloyd, whose mystery-ship the "Voodoo" streaked across the Pualinuk Lake finish line at 75 miles per, will be there to wrest any laurels of Cooper that may be hanging loose, all told there will be as many thrills that the World's Fair will be tame in comparison.

Yours,
"Rotary Joe"

Jimmy Powers, sports editor of the (New York) News, addressed an open letter to President Ford Frick today asking the suspension of Billy Jurges be lifted for the duration of the Giant emergency.

Jack Dempsey is well enough to take daily suns ride .... The Dodgers and Cards will give the yellow ball another try next Sunday.

JERSEY GIANTS BELT THE BISONS FOR THIRD TIME

Enjoy 2½ Game Lead Over Rest of Field in International

TORONTO LOSES

Three - Run Rally in Ninth Not Sufficient to Catch the Chiefs

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester's Red Wings have slipped from the International League lead and came within a hair's breadth of losing second.

The Wings aren't hitting the way they did early in the season and the bigger part of their pitching staff appears "shot." But they still have old Si Johnson and Mike Ryba on the job, so their plight could be worse.

Johnson and Ryba have kept the Red Wings from dropping close out of sight in the last couple of weeks. When Si got through to an 8-7 victory over Newark's Bears last night it was his fourth consecutive win and his first since the 13th of the season.

Ryba also has 13 complete games to his credit, including his last five starts.

Johnson was touched for 13 hits as he registered his 16th win against 7 defeats, and he gave the battery few good ones to swing at when the going was tough. The Bears fattened their stick blows effectively, driving out Al Hollingsworth with a four-run blast in the fifth then winning out with a three-run homer against Jack Haley in the sixth.

Six Games Behind Wings

The victory kept the Red Wings 2½ games behind the pace-setting Jersey City Giants, who won a game and a half margin over Buffalo's Bisons by taking care of the Bisons for the third time in four attempts, 13 to 6.

Montreal's Royals held off Baltimore's bid for sixth place by beating the Orioles 5 to 4 and moved their four-game winning streak.

Syracuse's Chiefs made it two with Toronto led the Syracuse Chiefs to a 4-3 decision over the no-pitcher with two out in the ninth. Moeie pitched three-hit ball for eight innings while Syracuse batted in three Syracuse runs. Mel Mike got into trouble in the ninth and Syracuse batted three times before Ray Benge stopped them.

Provincial Association Bowlers Visit City on 'Good Will Tour'

Friendly Game Played at Local Greens and Banquet Held at Country Club

LOCALS WIN, LOSE

Lawn bowlers from all sections of the Ontario Provincial Lawn Bowling Association visited Belleville yesterday in a "good will tour" sponsored by the parent association and President H. J. Sims, K.C., of Kitchener, with the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club members acting as hosts. An afternoon of lawn bowling was enjoyed on the local greens with the visiting bowlers being tendered a banquet at the Bay of Quinte Country Clubhouse last evening.

Prior to fraternizing on the local greens, the Provincial Lawn Bowlers Association "good will tour" was taken in the President's party to Gananoque, Ottawa, Kemptville, Brockville and finally Belleville before the party conclude their Eastern Ontario tour. "It is merely to create better bowling and become more acquainted with the provincial bowlers that is the object of the lawn bowling," stated President Sims yesterday as he headed the "good will tour" rink in a friendly match with local president Frank Correll's Belleville rink to win.

Just Friendly Matches

The visiting bowlers included President H. J. Sims of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association of Kitchener, G. Evans Atwood, Toronto, Vice-President, A. J. Langford, Secretary, of London, Past Presidents—Dr. W. Kropp, Woodstock, W. B. Cowan, K.C., Toronto, W. F. Kelly, Toronto, Dr. H. E. Carleton, Sifting and District Representative—F. C. Myles, Toronto, E. W. Skinner, Toronto, George Gimbels, Peterborough, C. T. Ross, Madoc, J. C. Burns, Marmora, L. Laidlaw, Toronto, as well as officials from Guelph, St. Thomas and other Western Ontario cities.

The "good will tour" was organized by President Sims to bring together the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association and the Provincial clubs throughout the province in friendly matches arranged for the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Locals Win and Lose

Although the visiting bowlers were given the preference of greens two feature matches were played in Belleville yesterday when President Sims' rink defeated a local rink headed by President Frank Correll of the Belleville Club, in a second match between a local rink and one composed of officials of the parent association the Belleville rink triumphed. The results of the rinks matches were:

Napanee Gibbards Ground the Fliers

Napanee, July 19. — Unleashing their biggest batting punch of the season, Napanee Gibbards Golf Club defeated Trenton Flyers 13 to 1, here last night in a Bay of Quinte Intermediate "A" baseball game and practically clinched a second-place play-off position.

The Flyers here held completely in check by the tight hurling of Gardner and Spratt, only three balls being hit to the outfield during the game. Three fast double plays served further to smother any Flyers' scoring chances.

McCutcheon, Napanee third-sacker, drove out a triple that landed 300 feet from the plate in right centre. The locals worked the squeeze play twice in the eighth inning with the bases loaded.

Big Innings Still Best Way To Win Ball Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Big innings are still the best way to win a ball game, if you listen today to any one of four teams in the Canadian-American Baseball League. Even the other four might admit it, if pressed for an answer.

For half of the league showed the other half yesterday how to do it all at once. Cornwall Athletics rallied for ten runs in one frame to take Ogdensburg; Amsterdam pounded seven in one inning to avenge; Cornwall broke out with five at once in topping Utica; and Ottawa shaded up four, five and three-run rallies to down Rome.

At Ogdensburg where the biggest boom was heard, the visiting Ogdensburg Colts had held the home stars scoreless for five innings and led, 1-0. In the last of the sixth, though, Cornwall drove Eddie Laker to the showers and continued on relief-pitcher Kovitz. They stopped at 19 and added three more later for a 13-1 triumph.

Seven-Run Outburst

A seven-run outburst in the seventh frame pelted Amsterdam Rugmakers from behind for a 9-7 decision over Oswego Netherlands. Pressured by Oswego Venturo's homer with the bases loaded, the rally enabled Rugmakers to protect first baseman Ben Cohen's four-hitter.

Cornwall Bisons also came from behind with their five-run rally in the eighth at Utica. The rally, started with Bisons trailing 10-8, featured Blackie Rogers' run from the box and gave Cornwall a 13-11 triumph as Braves got one back in their turn.

At Ottawa, a fur-run outburst in the third was more than needed to trim the visiting Rome Colonels but four of them scored on Ewen Davis limited the Colonels to four hits.

Once again the annual period of softball playoffs is rapidly approaching. Incidentally the local softballers have been quite fortunate in the matter of rain spoiling not a single game of the 33 game schedule having, as yet, to be postponed on account of wet weather, which is indeed a remarkable feature. As a matter of fact there has only been one postponement, the Shell-Tracey game of July 12th, when the 'Oilers' went to Napanee for an exhibition game versus a Kingston softball team. This postponement, however, will cause a slight delay in the O.-A. and City League playdowns, as the games will have to be played on Friday night. However, if the citizen juniors could pull out a win over Queens A.C. this evening it would not be necessary to play this lone postponement. The ten-aged kids have been playing better softball of late, although they have been quite luckless in some of their reverses. In all probability efforts to start the playoffs next Monday will be concluded at an executive meeting this week.

There was a great hustle and bustle and undercurrent in our city baseball circles in an effort to bolster the various clubs late last week, Saturday, being the deadline for the signing of O.-A.-A. players for the current year. Apparently the ball park was waiting for getting Lum Carson from the juniors, Carson being just over the age limit to play in the Provincial Junior playdowns. Point Anne got Phil Lott out of retirement to plug up the hole at third, with most probable insertion on Monday as the "Cementmen" beat the "Oilers". Last minute changes handed Bert Wannamaker Harry Knoll were those of ex-umpire Harold Bawden and Jimmie Fidwell. Bawden signed with the Trenton "Firemen" Cy Young and "Red" Townsend also had a finger in the pie and added Bert Wannamaker and Jimmie Fidwell roster, although the Oilmen did not qualify for the City League finals. Of the lot we'd imagine that Corbys got the best break out of the bag in Carney, who possesses more control than many of the local semi-pro baseballers.

Do you remember when Rogers Hornsby, playing for St. Louis Cardinals, set a National League home-run record by slamming out his 25th circuit drive of the season 17 years ago today. His record has since been surpassed by several, the previous record was made by Carey Orvaski of Philadelphia in 1915.

The Red Sox, who fire from St. Louis to Chicago in two charterd planes during the early season, will make no more hops by air. It was learned here. Several American League club owners, it is reported, objected to the idea and League President Will Harridge was said to have officially frowned on the plan.

Through denied the use of the airways in transporting his team, Owner Tom Yawkey of Boston chartered a special train to take his players from St. Louis to Chicago next swing around the circuit.

While getting in a little practice before he enters the Canadian Amateur Golf tournament in Montreal next week, Tommy Carruthers, Belleville's youthful golfing star, went around the Belleville Golf Club course in one hand Sunday. Tommy shot a 36, one over par in the first nine - holes, and a masterful 34, one under par in the second nine, giving him a 70, or par for the 18-hole match. Tommy played steady golf, seldom being more than one stroke off the course par. Incidentally Tommy is entered in the Canadian Amateur Golf championships this year, representing Belleville as he did last year. The 1939 Canadian Amateur Golf championship will be played over the Mount Bruno course of Montreal. No player can enter the Canadian Amateur championships unless a handicap of nine, thus Tommy will be battling with the best amateur golfers on this continent and he carries to Montreal the very best wishes of all local and district golfers.

The "good will tour" and visit of President H. J. Sims and his associates of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association to Belleville yesterday served as a dual purpose. First it brought the parent association in direct contact with the executive officers of the various outlying district, and secondly it brought the smaller clubs and their members in more intimate contact with the parent body. Other provincial sporting bodies could take a leaf out of President Sims' book.

J. Louis Comiskey, son of the late Charles A. Comiskey (the Old Roman) of baseball fame, died yesterday at the age of 54. J. Louis Comiskey headed the ultra-ritzy baseball club White Sox, inherited from his father in 1931, and has done much to rehabilitate the White Sox in the eyes of the Windy City fans in late years.

SPORTS ANGLES—Dr. Harry (Red) Baisiene denies he will retire from active rugby football to team the athletic .... It is said that Gabby Hartnett, who is regarded as the catcher's record for major league games served as catcher, is becoming "fed up" with his job as manager of the Cubs and wishes to relinquish the job .... If he does count Frankie Frisch in..... The Cards pushed the Giants into third place and the Cubs moved into second, but the Reds continue to run, which actually makes little difference in the National League race .... On the other side of the major league fence, however, the Yankees increased their lead by taking two from the Browns ..... Atley Donald, Yankee Recruit, Hurls Eleventh Straight Win To Make Record as 'Freshman'

On Other Hand Veteran Carl Hubbell Slowly Going Down Grade

CUBS NOW SECOND

Cards and Giants Are in a Third - Place Tie in National

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A young man going up passed an old man coming down today.

Richard Atley Donald is 26 years old and a right-hander. This is his first full season in the major leagues. Yet already the New York Yankee recruit has pitched 11 straight victories, one more than the best previous performance by a big league "freshman".

Carl Owen Hubbell is 36 years old and a southpaw. This is his 12th season in the major leagues, his 12th with New York Giants. This year "King Carl" has been able to pitch only one complete game, has won but two and has received only three starting assignments since June 4.

Today the Yankees, with Donald a vital part of their pitching corps, are eight games in front of Boston Red Sox. Donald has supplanted Harry Krause, who won 10 straight for the Athletics 31 years ago, as the most sensational first-year man in the big show.

Meanwhile the crippled Giants, slipping steadily, are tied for third place in the National League with Hubbell, the hop gone from his fast ball, the break from his curves, has lost five games.

Donald, lithe-lipped-born and a former student at Louisiana State, handcuffed St. Louis Browns with three hits yesterday and shut them out 2-0. An overhand pitcher with a world of speed and good control for a youngster, he walked only one man, fanned five and, when his job was done, had clamped the season's first coat of whitewash on the Brownies, last big league club to be shut out.

Hubbell Has Trouble

While Donald was delivering his fine performance (followed up by a three-hit combination job by Oral Hildebrand and Johnny Murphy that beat the Browns 4-3 to give the Yanks a sweep), Hubbell was having trouble. Terry Moore of the Cardinals cloaked him for a home run in the first inning. Three hits in the second and two more in the third were good for one run each. The Giants were beaten 5-3 and Hubbell was charged with his fifth defeat.

The Cards and Giants thus entered a third-place tie, Chicago Cubs moving into second on Glenn Fasseau's fine pitching that topped Brooklyn 4-2. Hack Wilson broke the tying runs on base in the ninth, Fasseau fanned three men in a row, including Manager Leo Durocher, to push Brooklyn down into fifth place.

Smart Pitching

There was good pitching right along the line. The league-leading Reds hit hard to bring Paul Derringer, who has walked only 14 men this season, his 12th victory, by 10-3 over Boston Bees, and Veteran Syl Johnson clamped down on Pittsburgh Pirates to give the Phillies an 8-3 decision.

In the American League Joe Krakauskas of the Senators scattered Detroit Tigers' six hits to tame them 10-2. Rookie Joe Dobson pulled Cleveland Indians out of a hole with a neat relief trick to turn back Philadelphia Athletics 6-3 in a night game, and Clint Brown, making his 34th appearance in a relief role, saved the second game for the White Sox, 5-4, after the Red Sox had clubbed hard to win the opener of a doubleheader, 13-10.

LEADING INVADER S AFTER CANADIAN AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

FRANK STRAFACI

TED ADAMS

When the shooting begins over Montreal's Mount Bruno course for the Canadian amateur golf title, the dominion's native sons will find themselves up against stiff opposition in their efforts to prevent the crown moving across the line as it frequently has in the past. Here are the three outstanding invaders whom Sandy Somerville & Co. will have to turn back to get their hands on the trophy. Adams won the crown last year, defeating Somerville in extra holes while Hass took the crown three years ago. Strafaci has been going great guns in United States for some time now and has won many important events including the North and South tournament.

GIANTS' LOU CHIOZZA RETIRES BATTER AT HEAVY COST

Lou Chiozza, utility infielder with New York Giants, is seen writhing on the ground, still clutching the ball, after his collision with Joe Moore, Giants' left fielder, after Moore had gone after a fly ball back of third base, and collided. Chiozza got the ball to relief the batter, but in the collision suffered a broken leg, sending him out of the game for the rest of the season and adding to Manager Bill Terry's troubles at third base, a jinx spot in the Giant infield. Moore is also on the ground in this picture but continued playing. Umpire Beans Reardon and Mel Ott are running toward the injured players. Chiozza was playing shortstop in this game because of the 10-day suspension of Bill Jurges.

AS AUSTRALIANS DOWNED PHILIPPINE DAVIS CUPPERS

International tennis picture time is here as the competitors in the running for the 1939 Davis Cup grow fewer and fewer. Only survivor are Germany in the European zone, and Australia, Cuba and Canada in North America, from which countries will emerge a challenger to meet the cup-holding American team. This picture shows Jack Bromwich of the Australian team (nearest camera) as he wears in the net against Felicisimo Ampon of the team from the Philippines during their series played at Long Beach, California. Bromwich was defeated in three hard sets in this match, winning 8-6, 7-5, 6-3, as the Aussies swept on to victory by taking all five matches.

DETECTIVES PROBE ALLEGED SPYING

British, French and Americans Collaborate to 'Certain Amount'

Paris, July 18 (AP)—Sources close to the Prefecture of Police said today that "a certain amount" of collaboration among detectives of France, Great Britain and the United States is being maintained in connection with the French investigation of an alleged German espionage and propaganda ring in France.

The names of fifty suspects compiled by the British Foreign Office were reported here to have been communicated to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington as well as to the French Surete Nationale.

The collaboration was reported being maintained in connection with simultaneous investigations into propaganda campaigns in each country. French authorities were reported to have extended their drive against German propagandists to provincial cities, with raids at Strasbourg and Lyon. Details were kept secret.

Palestine Jews Begin 10 Hour Strike Over Ban

Jerusalem, July 18—(AP)— Jews throughout Palestine, in protest against Great Britain's six-month ban on Jewish immigration into the Holy Land, began a 10-hour strike today. At 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT) they closed their shops and shuttered their windows.

Only a few Jews holding special passes from their local committees appeared on Jerusalem streets, mobile police took special precautions in the city.

(Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald announced July 12 that no Jewish immigration quota for Palestine would be issued for six months because of the large scale on which illegal immigration is being carried out).

RECOVERS FROM GRIPPE

Havana, July 18—(CP Hav.)— Bruce Hall, Canadian Davis Cup singles player who has been confined to bed with a slight case of grippe for the last two days, is expected to leave the Anglo-American hospital here this afternoon.

At the hospital it was said the tennis star should be in condition to play in the Canadian-Cuban Davis Cup matches beginning Friday.

WATCH CANAL BANK FOR SLIDES

July 3rd Slide of Clay Has Not Yet Been Dredged Out

Welland, Ont., July 18 (CP)—Canal authorities today watched the west bank of the Welland Canal three miles south here for further possible slides of earth. They said transmission lines skirting the edge of the recent earth slide have been moved back as further slides are possible even though not anticipated at the present time.

Nearly 34,000 cubic yards of clay slid into ship canal July 3 along a 500-foot frontage. It was the first major disturbance since 1935 in the $120,000,000 engineering project.

E. C. Little, superintendent of the southern section of the canal, said no plans have yet been made to dredge the canal. He said the bank likely would be lowered soon to reduce the pressure at the cave-in point. Traffic through the canal has not been affected by the slide.

HITS DOZING 'LUNGE

Lindsay, Ont., July 18.—(CP)— Sonny Saville, 13, catches fish the unusual way. He saw a big muskinonge dozing on top of the waters of nearby Simpson Lake yesterday and hit it with a stick. The dazed fish swam some distance away, but the boy discarded his clothes and followed. Another blow killed the fish and the boy had captured a 21-pound fish the biggest here this season.

'MIRACULOUS ESCAPES' IN MOTOR MISHAPS

Rimouski, Que., July 18—(CP)— Talk of two "miraculous" escapes in motor mishaps is going the rounds in this lower St. Lawrence River area.

Alphonse Levesque suffered only minor injuries here when his automobile was struck at a level crossing by a Canadian National Railway train. The car was carried more than 200 feet.

At Father Point, Joseph Martin's four-year-old daughter escaped injury after falling in front of a truck which passed over her prone form. The wheels of the truck passed only a few inches from the little girl.

Both mishaps occurred Sunday.

PICKEREL SWALLOWS ANGLER'S WATCH

Winsted, Conn., July 18—(AP)— Sure, it's a fish story, but no less an authority than a police chief vouches for it.

Chief Hugh Meade of Torrington said he was fly-casting at Highland Lake here today and just as a pickerel was about to grab the lure his gold wrist watch slipped from his wrist into the water.

The fish abandoned the fly, said Chief Meade, gulped down the watch and swam away

WALL STREET

New York, July 19 (AP) — The stock market had a narrow path today with most leaders holding to the minus side.

What selling pressure there was came at the opening but buyers soon appeared and first losses were diminished. Towards the fourth hour weakness again developed and prices neared their lows. A few favored shares managed to achieve net gains however. Activity was dull.

Profit-taking seemed the primary cause for the price weakness.

In the meantime brokerage houses were calling back from vacationing partners and employees in anticipation of a continuation of the unusual volume of the early part of the week. Public anticipation in the market, as represented by out-of-town orders, generated optimism in the financial district.

In the Canadian group Hiram Walker and Lake Shore inched ahead while Dome and International Nickel fell back a trifle. Dominion 4s in the bond market were neglected.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 19 (CP)—In quiet trading today the market bordered narrow losses in the early session. The sell-off in New York imparted a note of caution to the Toronto trade and bids were lowered in steel, food and miscellaneous industrial groups and narrowly in the mining section.

Steel of Canada and National Steel Car weakened more than a point each. Base metal leaders, Nickel, Noranda and Smelters dropped small fractions. Gold shares were inclined to improve. Consumers, Aunor, Kerr Addison, Little Long Lac and Chesterville ruled higher.

Prices weakened a few cents for the more active western oils, including Home, Calgary-Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian.

Graded Eggs Improve — Demand Picks Up

Graded egg prices advanced slightly Tuesday on the Toronto open produce market as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Cheese was unchanged, while butter to the retail trade eased.

The egg market showed a steadier undertone and demand was improved. Grade "A" pullets, which seemed scarce, were selling to wholesalers at 24c and to retailers at 21c. Trading was light on the butter market. Demand was chiefly for top grades. Buyers appeared to be purchasing for immediate requirements only. Fresh receipts were light and a were kept moving fairly steadily, so that there was no accumulation. A few tubs of Western butter were reported at 23c. Retailers bought No. 1 creamery prints at 23¼c to 24¼c and undergrades at from 21½c to 23c.

4 HEAD CATTLE STOLEN BY NIGHT

Modern cattle thieves, travelling in high powered motor trucks by night, are reported to have raided pasturing herds of cattle near Angiess, North Lennox County. On more than one occasion one or two cows have been reported missing from a herd of over 100 head, but last night four head disappeared and Provincial Police were immediately notified of the theft.

Numerous farmers are pasturing their cattle on Crown grazing lands north of Angiess, but it was not until today, when the entrails of several head of cattle were found secluded in out-of-the-way parts of the pasture lands, that farmers became certain that cattle rustlers were undoubtedly active in that section of Lennox County. The cattle taken last night were established as the property of Anthony Hunt, Angiess.

Today Provincial Police checked thoroughly all drivers and butchers in the southern part of Lennox and Hastings Counties in an effort to locate the cattle reported stolen last night.

"These cattle rustlings were first reported to Provincial Constable Fred Barrett at Napanee, but it was not until the discovery of the entrails of four cows early today that we became certain that cattle rustling was going on near Angiess" Sergeant Harry Thompson of the Provincial Police stated today.

Later Provincial Constable Barrett informed the Ontario Intelligencer the entire herd was grazing on Crown lands and in a heavy bush.

"The only way into these grazing lands is by a trail and we feel certain that the cattle were killed on the range, their entrails removed and the carcasses carried out to waiting trucks. There were several cases of cattle rustling in that district reported to the police a few years ago also", Constable Barrett revealed.

HOUSE, GARAGE AND CAR BURNS

Car Owned by A. Peterson and House by Laurel Farrow at Rosanna

Fire of undetermined origin, completely destroyed a garage and large double frame house owned by Laurel Farrow at Rosanna on Shakespeare shortly after two o'clock this morning. A car owned by Arthur Pettigrew of this city, housed in the garage, was also a complete loss.

Gerow and residents of the vicinity were awakened by a red glow and flames shot upwards from the blaze in the building. Neighbors who rushed to the scene fought the blaze that threatened the immediate surroundings as dry timber-like grass rapidly ignited.

A hydro pole near the burning building caught fire, but was saved by the efforts of the Belleville Fire Department who answered calls for help after receiving permission from the Chairman of Fire, Laurie Lewis.

The fire originated in the garage, it was stated by fire department officials today. Peterson dashed to the scene of the blaze but on arrival the structure was a blazing mass that effectively prevented any attempts to bring out the car.

TENSE MOMENT IS EXPEIRENCED

William Lockyer Witnesses Suspension of Two in Parachute at Fair

"It was one of the tensest moments I ever experienced," Mr. William Lockyer, Bleecker avenue, said yesterday in commenting on the extraordinary predicament two Brooklyn acrobats found themselves in when the parachute at the New York World's Fair failed to function properly a few weeks ago, and they were forced to spend the night suspended in the air approximately one hundred and twenty feet from the ground.

Mr. Lockyer and his brother Sidney Lockyer, Picton florist, were present when the unique occurrence happened.

"Fifteen thousand people milled around the ground directly below the parachute," Mr. Lockyer stated. "Firemen rushed ladders to the scene but they were short by a few feet. The next morning a sleeplack climbed high above the crowd and sliding down one of the wires, cut the stranded dudes and allowed the unfortunate or rather fortunate couple as later events proved, to float to the ground."

"The couple were wined and dined the next day," Mr. Lockyer added. "Grover Cleveland Whalen, manager of the Fair and Mayor LaGuardia feted them at the Terrace Gardens, while newspaper reporters and photographers swarmed around them. They certainly got plenty of publicity."

"No, I don't think it was a publicity stunt staged by fair officials," he added, "for the cables were really twisted in a snarl. There was no doubt about that. And they did not do the stunt for any monetary purposes because the papers stated they were Brooklyn bluebloods and worth plenty of money."

"The young man in the occurrence must have had quite an imaginative mind," Mr. Lockyer said, "for when he was being interviewed by the newspapermen, his lady friend was heard to remark: 'Now don't lie, you didn't do anything of the kind,' whereupon the young man's face grew extremely red."

8 GRASS FIRES IN THREE DAYS

Fire Chief Warns Against Danger of Children Setting Grass Afire

Eight consecutive grass fires in a period of three days brought a sharp warning from Fire Chief William Lynch today.

Fire squads and apparatus raced to a grassy flat between Station and Reid Streets yesterday where flames razed a large grassy area. No property damage was done but firemen were forced to fight a strenuous battle before the flames were finally reduced.

"We have been fortunate thus far in that no property damage has resulted from these fires," Chief Lynch commented today, adding "You we have been lucky. The grass is very dry, and so are buildings. If flames get a foothold in a district where houses are close together serious results may occur.

He warned parents regarding the actions of playful youngsters in setting fire to idle grass and urged that every precaution be taken to guard against grass fires that may prove to be the forerunners of disastrous consequences.

EXTENSION OF PACT IS URGED

Canadian Delegate to Empire Chambers of Commerce Sees Hope for World

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 19—(CP Cable) — "If we can succeed somehow in launching a movement similar to the Ottawa agreement on a world scale we would have the greatest hope of solving the problems facing the world today," C. Stanley Maclean of Toronto told the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire today.

The delegate of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce described the Ottawa conference as the "most successful attempt made on a large scale to relieve the conditions of depression." In an extension of Ottawa, he said, lies the best hope of the world ,economically and internationally.

The congress voted unanimously a long resolution submitted by Mr. McLean on behalf of the Canadian Chambers.

The resolution said it is desirable to expand intra-empire trade and the best instrument to use for this is to maintain and modify existing trade agreements.

It declared that in preparation for modification of agreements it is important that the governments consult those engaged in affected trades and that the present agreements themselves are not sufficient to maintain permanent expansion of trade must be based on quality products and continuity of supply.

Where such a resolution is carried, the time has come to extend the agreements by concerted agreement into the world field. Such extension is desirable as a means to advance general economic welfare but was still more desirable as an instrument for consolidating world peace.

The first step to this end, it continued, shoul dbe multilateral agreements such as the recent tripartite pact involving the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada.

5-FOOT

Engineers Coming

Engineers from the Department of Marine and Fisheries are expected here shortly to direct operations during the first stage for repair of the weakened dam.

If the dam goes out the five-foot difference in levels of Lake Rossseau and Lake Muskoka would be equalized within a few hours, marine men here said. All locks on the Lake Muskoka system would become useless and channels through which boats usually ply would become so shallow as to be useless on Lake Rosseau and the upper lakes. The threatened drop of four or five feet in Lake Muskoka's level would flood property on the shores.

To save Lake Muskoka properties it would be necessary to open the locks at Bala with a resultant flooding of properties on Moon River.

Tons of Relief Vouchers Burned

Six tons of relief vouchers in bales and securely and solidly packed were removed from the upper section of the city hall yesterday, and representative vouchers that have been given out by the welfare office for the past three years went skyward in wind and smoke at the north end city dump yesterday afternoon.

Part of the six tons of paper went in a white blizzard of flying papers carried by the wind in a strong wind which clutched and carried them for a considerable distance. The remainder formed a heavy blanket whose smoke was visible for miles as far.

Work of burning the vouchers which came out by the city works department was supervised by Warren Sexsmith, one of the chief executives of the office.

Weighty that the bales taken through the string-wrapped bundles than a strong wind swooped down on the huge pile scattering the slips and carrying them aloft where they flutered and drifted like thousands of tiny kites. Many of them borne hundreds of feet in the air left in the general direction of Prince Edward County, a sight that was watched with interest by many citizens unaware of the official disposal of the vouchers.

Meanwhile, Great Britain's air army is under "stand by" orders. Awaiting instructions which will send hundreds of bombers on new mass flights over France and possibly on a 4,000-mile roundcountry trip to Poland via Egypt, Turkey and Rumania.

Plans for the longer and more spectacular flight are still in the preparatory stage, authoritative sources said, depending on international developments and endorsement of the governments concerned. Britain apparently has decided on the long southern detour, it was said, rather than raise delicate diplomatic problems by sending bombers over Denmark and Sweden.

The second mass flight of British bombers over France is expected within the next few days.

Nazi Propaganda

Paris, July 19—(AP)—Some French quarters today viewed optimism voiced in Berlin over the possibility of a peaceful solution of the Danzig problem as Nazi propaganda aimed at separating France and Great Britain from their ally, Poland.

The Independent newspaper L'Ordre saw the reports as "Berlin's latest challenge of the war of nerves" but declared it showed "tremendous progress" by the Franco-British bloc.

London, July 19—(AP)—The News Chronicle in a dispatch from Warsaw today quoted Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz as saying that "Poland has decided to fight for Danzig even if she has to fight alone."

"We will exhaust all methods of settling the question of Danzig peacefully," the Marshal was quoted as saying in an interview. "Then if Germany persists in her plans for an Anschluss, Poland will fight even if she fights alone and without allies."

Captain of Tanker Associated Says He Found All in Lifeboats

San Francisco, July 19—(AP)—First details of the sinking of the 4,000,000 gallons of gasoline-laden Japanese freighter Hokuyo Maru and rescue of the passengers and crew of members with loss of three lives were received today by wireless from the skipper of the rescue tanker Associated, owned by the Tidewater Associated Oil Company.

In a message Captain L. E. Hawkins reported he arrived at the scene of the sinking, about 1,200 miles east of Yokohama, six hours after the vessel sent out her last distress signal.

He said his tanker, loaded with 4,000,000 gallons of gasoline, approached in a dense fog and found the survivors—108 passengers and a crew of 100—in lifeboats floating amid wreckage from the 8,218-ton Hokuyo Maru. He did not say whether there were any passengers among the missing persons.

When the survivors were taken aboard, Captain Hawkins said she learned fire had broken out in the Hokuyo Maru's nitrate cargo.

The Associated Press today until another Japanese ship, the Florida Maru, took the survivors aboard and continued to Japan.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Tabeteau
Ontario Meteorologist

Soil atmosphere! As all soils are more or less porous they contain in their interstices gases which form the soil atmosphere. These gases may govern the biochemical activity of the earth materials, biological processes, or from the earth's atmosphere itself. The quantity of soil atmosphere varies because of several things acting singly or together. Wind or air pressure, since both vary, may drive air in or draw it out. Rain or irrigation, by filling the interstices will do the same thing, or evaporation may allow more air to go in. Temperature changes causing compressions and expansions perform similar functions. This soil atmosphere is necessary for plant-life.

75 SCIENTISTS FIGHT SAW-FLY

Mission Into Gaspe Woods is to Collect Cocoons From Spruce Trees

Quebec, July 20—(CP)—In a campaign to rid Quebec forestlands of the destructive saw-fly, the Provincial government's entomological bureau has sent an expedition of 75 young men into Gaspe's wooded Gaspe where millions of the insects annually wreak their greatest havoc.

Work of the party whose members were selected from the ranks of unemployed under the Quebec youth training plan is not to give the saw-fly actual battle, but to complete the groundwork of the governments campaign.

Their mission simply is to collect cocoons of the saw-flies, found almost numerous in some regions in Gaspe Peninsula as 2,000,000 per acre of spruce, which the insects attack exclusively.

Shipments to Belleville

A vast collection of the cocoons will be made and shipped to the Dominion government's parasite laboratory at Belleville, Ont. There a particular breed of parasite imported from Europe will be injected into the cocoons, reared and prepared for a trip to the Quebec forests.

Once the parasites are healthy enough the saw-fly cocoons containing them will be shipped back to the spruce forests and spread about the saw-fly breeding grounds.

In this farm-conscious section, ers they will be laid about the spruce groves and "when they emerge the fight to save the province's thousands of dollars in timber will be on.

How much the spruce destruction by the saw-fly amounts to is unestimated. Steps to prevent that destruction were begun last year in Quebec when the importations of the parasites from Europe were experimentally.

Quebec's natural enemies of the saw-flies are birds and forest residents but officials of the government entomological department believe they do not eliminate more than 66 per cent of the insects' larvae.

Million Dollar Disposal Plant For Kingston's Plan

Kingston, Ont., July 20—(CP)—Controller Guillet and Finance Committee of city council will recommend to council next the passing of legal steps be taken in connection with the water and sewage disposal plan as outlined in the report recently submitted by Gore and Storrie, consulting engineers, Toronto, and that a vote of the ratepayers on the question be taken at an early date.

Drew Favors Deportation of Japanese If Anti-British Policy is Adopted

Midland, Ont., July 20—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew believes that "Canada should say in unequivocal language that the language that the adoption of any clearly defined anti-British policy by Japan will be followed by the immediate deportation of all Japanese nationals in Canada."

The Ontario Conservative leader told the annual meeting of the Simcoe East Conservative Association last night that "for once in our history we should make a stand in an international affair.

"We Canadians have been inclined to wait for a lead from Great Britain before expressing any opinion on international affairs," he said. "For once let us make up our mind. We have as direct an interest in the Japanese problem as any other part of the British Empire.

"We, too, are on the Pacific Ocean. Our trade to the Orient is of great importance and we have a larger number of Japanese living in this country in relation to our population than any other Dominion.

Col. Drew said Japanese immigration to Canada was allowed because of friendly relations between Great Britain and Japan.

"We have been told in the last few days by a spokesman for the Japanese government, that there need be no misunderstanding of the Japanese people," he said. "I am quite hate the British people as they have been charged," he said.

"...if the Japanese people hate us and their internal and international policies are governed by that hatred, then the basis upon which we permitted Japanese immigration has been destroyed by Japan herself.

Canada should say "in clear and understandable terms," Col. Drew asserted, that if the Japanese "declare a definite course of antagonism to British people, then we shall be obliged to order all of the Japanese in Canada to leave our country. We can get along very well without them."

PREMIER HEPBURN WILL COOPERATE IN CERTAIN CASES

Will Not Oppose Federal Aid to Municipalities if Recognized by Municipal Board

ASKS A QUESTION

Premier Wants to Know What Will Happen When Scheme Ends?

Toronto, July 20—(CP)—Premier Hepburn will not oppose acceptance by Ontario municipalities of federal aid in public works projects provided such projects are first recognized by the Ontario Municipal Board as a necessary and "in the interests of the taxpayers."

Amplifying the terms on which the municipalities might receive federal aid in these programs, Premier Hepburn told executive members of the Toronto Mayors' Association during a conference yesterday that the federal offer to contribute one-third of the cost would only take the form of a direct grant to the municipality before the work is started.

The municipal board, set up "to control capital expenditure," has no intention of releasing the provincial brake on municipal debt, he said, and the municipalities would have to convince the Board that further debt was in the taxpayers' interests.

Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto said during the meeting several projects which Toronto was considering under the scheme were of vital necessity.

Principle Unsound is Claim

Mr. Hepburn replied that he considered the underlying principle of the Dominion scheme unsound and that the scheme was "simply an incentive to spend, and spend, and spend."

The Magistrate forbade LePalm to drive a car for a period of 11 months.

LePalm's man has already been punished terribly," said Acting Crown Attorney P. D. Kerr, K.C. "It was not one of those hit-riding accidents but was rather due to the accused's unfamiliarity with urban driving."

He complained "neighborhood hoodlums" had taunted the Germans for being members of the bund and declared:

"After all, it was nobody's business what we did in our own homes. All we did was to dev'op German culture."

The candidates, born about the time he died, have given what were considered indications of the divine spirit.

The other candidates were born deeper in Tibet.

OPINION SOUGHT

Members of the Hastings County Bar Association were hosts last evening to one of their most distinguished guests at their dinner held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, the Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney General of the Province of Ontario, who visited Belleville yesterday to present personally the award of the Province of Ontario to Mr. Harold Bawn and Earl Bradshaw for the apprehension of a robber at Tamworth in May last. Presided over by Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., President of the Hastings County Bar Association, the dinner was one of the most successful of similar events held. The guest speaker, the Hon. Gordon Conant was introduced to the assembly by Mr. H. E. Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings and a particularly interesting address was given the large gathering by the guest speaker who spoke at length on proposed reforms in existing legislation which have been proposed by Prof. H. Barlow, K.C., Master of the Supreme Court of the Province.

Not Dismissed Lightly

Reforms which would lighten the burden on the taxpayer without impairing the administration of justice, or depriving any citizen of all rights or liberties, should not be dismissed lightly, the guest speaker declared. Such attitude on the part of the legal profession, he added, will not commend them to the people.

JAPAN DEMANDS STATE OF WAR BE RECOGNIZED

British Stand is That Discussion Must be Restricted to Tientain

JAPAN'S INSISTENCE

Attitude of Japan May Prove Decisive for Anglo-Japanese Relations

Tokyo, July 20—(CP-Havas) — Tokyo newspapers reported today that Japan has refused to modify her demands on issues arising from the Tientain dispute and that tomorrow's conversations between Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie may prove decisive for Anglo-Japanese relations.

Japan insists, according to the Asahi, that Britain shall:—

1. Recognize a state of war in China.

2. Cease all hostile actions toward Japan.

3. Place no obstacle in the way of measures necessary for the "maintenance of peace and order and the existence of the Japanese Army in China."

The continuance of differences between the two negotiators at the end of their five-hour talk yesterday was confirmed by the press.

This morning Arita conferred with Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma and War Minister Seishiro Itagaki. It was reported Ambassador Craigie and Robert Craigie is said to have received instructions from London for the moment, of carrying the discussion beyond the local issues at Tientain.

Germans in Tyrol Worry Over Fate in Hands of Axis Powers

Bolzano, Italy, July 20—(AP)—Some 200,000 German-speaking Italians whose Tyrolean Mountain homeland has become the centre of gravity of the Rome-Berlin axis worried over their ultimate fate in the Fascist government's plan to Italianize the region.

Those Italian Tyrolese who were an Austrian people before the post great war settlements made them Italian now are gloomily apprehensive that they may be ousted from Bolzano Province along with 10,000 German citizens and other foreigners whose expulsion already has been ordered.

Officially the Tyrolese know only that they will be offered the opportunity of joining the German Reich in being transported into the Reich. But what worries many is a fear that if they reject the chance to become Germans they will have to move elsewhere in Italy.

Representative Tyrolese whose families have lived here for generations said the necessity of choosing between two such fates would be little less than a "mass tragedy".

Authoritative German quarters said they had no information on probable treatment of Tyrolese who refuse to break in Italy. Tyrolese said that even if they were permitted to remain in the province, it probably would be with the understanding that they would be "one hundred per cent Italians."

They feared this would mean complete elimination of their language, Italianization of their names, suppression of their local German language newspapers and prohibition of religious services and instruction in German.

'We Believe There Are No Problems Which Could Not be Solved by Peaceful Means,' Prime Minister Says in Letter to Voters

M. P. IS CRITICAL

Vernon Bartlett Says 'Grudging Way' in Which Britain Has Discussed Credits With Polland 'Nurtures Doubts in Minds, About British Stand Against Aggression

London, July 20—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain asserted today there is every indication that Britain's new-regained power "is restoring confidence to Europe and in those countries which desire to live in peace and security."

He expressed this optimistic view of the international picture in a letter urging voters to support Cecil Pike, government candidate for a seat in parliament in the Colne by-election.

"The National government," Mr. Chamberlain said, "has made it clear to the world that it is resolutely opposed to any attempt to settle questions of international disputes by force. While we believe that by negotiation problems which could not be solved by peaceful means, we shall not hesitate to take any steps which may be necessary to carry out our solemn pledges to resist aggression."

POLISH-DANZIG TROUBLE BREWING

Killing of Polish Soldier Today Only Increases the Tension

Warsaw, July 20—(AP)— The shooting by Danzig police of a Warsaw city official to 14 months imprisonment and the reported arrest by Polish police of a Polish customs officer brought a new strain today in Polish-Danzig relations.

Polish authorities in Danzig were said to be making a protest to the Danzig Senate in both cases.

The officer reported arrested was described as a Lieutenant Colonel. No reason was given for his detention. The Warsaw official is Jan Golcs, arrested a week ago when, police said, he drove his car on to Danzig territory by mistake.

Allegedly found carrying a revolver, the Warsaw man was held on charges of smuggling arms into the Free City.

Tension Increased

Danzig, July 20—(AP)—The killing of a Polish official near the Danzig frontier village of Pestelhau this forenoon undoubtedly increased tension between the Free City and Poland.

Police charged that the Polish soldier, Vitolo Budziewicz, was shot in the Danzig border official on Polish soil.

Free City authorities said the Danzig customs officer, Max Stein, had fired in self defence.

CITY ANGLERS USING CRABS FOR BAIT

Crabs, crawfish, or as they are more familiarly called in the eastern section 'crawdads', have been a heavy coin this year and many of the city's anglers have turned from the orthodox worm and minnow for bass to these wide-nippered tempters. Shallower sections of the Moira River have been bombarded lately with numbers of men and youths employed in catching the crabs for which a ready sale exists at dockers and anxious fishermen.

LAKES ALMOST FREE OF DEAD SHAD

Once again the lake is almost free from the dead bodies of millions of small fish which have floated on the surface of the lake and bay for some weeks past, it is reported by local fishermen who declared the fish so thick in the lake near shore a week or so ago that boats and solid lanes through their floating bodies. This year the same condition prevailed as in 1938 when the same disease was observed in the Bay of Quinte.

Every summer these small silvery fish appear as silversides or shad die and float along the lake's edge for miles, piled by the waves three and four inches thick on the beach. It is thought by fish authorities they die when the lake water becomes too warm in the summer. The fish are a species of herring which is native to the ocean and which have become land locked in Lake Ontario sons ago. They sometimes grow to ten inches in length, according to official bulletins, but the average length is six inches. They entered the lake in the early stages of the earth's forming which accounts for their presence in the summer. It has been in New York States, authorities believe.

DEMOLITION WORK IS WELL ADVANCED

BAY SIMPLY DOTTED WITH PLEASURE CRAFT

Perfect weather conditions have favored boat owners this week after an extended season which threatened to become one of the windiest summers on local records. In place of the half gales and strong winds experienced during the several weeks only gentle zephyrs have this week been ripping the surface of the bay, Yesterday afternoon the bay was filled with pleasure craft of all sizes, those accompanis were fishing bent or picnic bound for nearby points.

FLIGHT OF STEPS BEING REPAIRED

Long flights of wooden steps leading to the side of Mount Pleasant hill, one of the lesser known short cuts in the city leading to Great St. James Street, are being repaired this week by the city works department. Many planks are being renewed and bannisters reset by the workmen.

HITCH-HIKERS USING NEW FORM OF APPROACH

The gentlemen of the appealing thumb, familiar to motorists everywhere, is apparently developing a slight change of technic, a more pleasing and effective change it is said. Their old flourish of gesture is not to be entirely discarded as a great deal of it, is evidently no longer all sufficient, and presumably they are to be seen less frequently as of yesterday with simplicity of the thumb alone. The impression has been suggested by the sight of two youths standing in the highway on the south side of the hill top, one of them holding up a large cardboard sign which was neatly written the single word "Please".

WRITTEN APPLICATIONS ONLY ACCEPTED

Hundreds of written applications for jobs have been received by district residents hopeful of securing jobs when factory operations start up again in connection with that of the Bata Shoe Company at Batawa. Persons in this district only who attempt private interviews at the factory, are turned down, it was stated by a Bata official in charge of the employment office here. All applications must be made in writing, while those who seek personal interviews are merely wasting their time, the local man has been informed.

28-POUND 'LUNGE CAUGHT IN RIVER

The upper section of the Moira River gave up one of its biggest fish early last evening a 28-pound lunge which was caught just above the Corbyville dam by Les Jenkinson Evans Street who had been casting from the shore with an inexpensive plug. The fish was duly weighed and examined by a number of interested friends.

GARBAGE LITTER THROWN FROM CARS

District farmers of the Belleville area are again registering a perennial summer complaint of garbage litter thrown by the wayside and along side roads from passing cars. This season the pollution of the roadsides and private properties by tin cans broken bottles and evil smelling refuse is particularly marked, it is declared, and the only remedy, according to the state, seems to be a strict warning is to ask for police aid in the matter.

'Over too Soon' Comment Of Boys Leaving the Camp

Wonderful Time Spent by Boys for Two Weeks at Moira Lake

ALL WELL-BROWNED

Campers returned from two weeks at Belleville Boys' Camp, Moira Lake, browned by the sun and in joyful mood. "Over too soon" was the only complaint while all were enthusiastic over their holiday and camp experience. "We will be back again next year," called the boys as Director Shortt bade them "safe journey" as they filled the cars and truck to start homeward.

The highlights of the camp were the splendid weather, the good health and spirit of campers, an excellent staff, the visit of Lieutenant to transform the old recreation hall into a thing of beauty, the visit of Rotary Club for a regular club luncheon at camp and games with the boys afterward, the Sunday evening camp and council being directed by Pete Beach and ably assed by a host of cottagers and friends, the camp fire ceremonies, put on nightly under Gratton Kemp, the contribution of the week under leadership of Alfred Cooper, handicraft woodwork and carving under Harold Wilson, the athletic meet (an international Olympic meet) under the time Chief and Pete Beach—the Aquatic meet directed by Jimmie Seymour and the games of Commissioner Ellis.

Reports of these events will appear in this paper.

The following journeyed to the camp and gave instruction to Robert Adams, "First Aid"; Dr. Locke, "Nose and Throat"; R. D. P. Jackson, "Safety"; Lieutenant Seaman K. Edwards, "Functioning of the Eye and Care of Eyes."

A total of 90 were in camp and enjoyed the outing, the meals, the activities, the hills, the lake and the all-round training and instruction. All will look forward to the celebration of the "out of doors" and be better prepared to live closer to themselves in the open and be better prepared to face studies or work.

Sunday School Picnics

Tabernacle United Church

Tabernacle United Church held their annual Sunday School and congregational picnic yesterday afternoon at Mr. Uriah Church's grounds, Oak Lake. The weather was ideal and approximately 300 children and parents were there to enjoy themselves.

A complete afternoon's program was arranged for the entertainment of young and old. Swimming was enjoyed, and there was much entertainment at horse shoe pitching. The sports events were keenly contested while the able promptin Shorey vs. Shorey baseball game was the feature in itself.

The booth did a flourishing business under the supervision of Mr. H. Graham, Mrs. R. Johnston and Mrs. Phillips. Free ice cream was furnished to all the children.

Archibald, superintendent of the Sunday School, taking a leading part in looking after the welfare of the picnickers.

GASOLINE DEFINED TO KIWANIS CLUB

Norman Day of Toronto Special Speaker Before the Club

The principal product of petroleum, gasoline ,was clearly defined for members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday by Norman Day, a member of the Toronto Argo Gas Company, and brother of Mayor Ralph Day, of Toronto. The address was enjoyed and was followed by a question period.

Frank Scott told of the wonderful trip the boys sponsored by the Club had at Metro Lake and that the Club would like to do the same by looking after those boys when opportunity arises. Bert Sharpe head of the club were expressed to Herb Fox and Cliff Barsgar for their assistance in looking after the boys from camp. Len Fonard in charge of the Kiwanis Kiddies Camp announced in Peterboro last week, told the Club of their efforts to find the kiddies' camp and of the splendid results obtained by the Celgerson Memorial Camp. Mayor Mc-Foxard, an insurance adjuster in this city, was in full charge of the meeting.

Mr. Day told his audience the maximum boiling point of gasoline was from 395 to 400 degrees and how octane and heptane were used proper proportions to get the best results in quick starting, pickup and flow to the motor. He gave statistics for a good gas. The speaker stated that gasoline was a cheap commodity and that the industry had grown from a billion gallons a few years ago to five and that five billion gallons will be used. He explained how petroleum was a ready supply of gasoline and that it would be many years before this supply is used up. The speaker in a technical way explained the distillation, crude oil and upon which all companies base that quality of their product. The address was enhanced by the fine display shown to the majority of the members present and are constant users of this product.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

Whatever other effects the first regatta of their many to be staged in lites has had on the 'Rotary Admirals' the enthusiasm that has marked their efforts so far in making this, their first nautical venture, a success, has taken at least ten years off their young lives.

There is a springiness apparent in their respective gaits; eyes that glow with a brightness reminiscent of the days of their youth; even the appetites have increased if their attacks on the viands of the Hotel Quinte at their weekly luncheon on Monday was any criterion . . .

But behind their lively, springiness of gait, appetite and what have you, there is a deeper more serious meaning . . . They are not devoting their time merely to see a group of speeding motor boats chase down a course as fast as they speed . . . They are not spending their money and time simply for the pleasure they will get from doing so. . . They will, however, derive pleasure in more ways than one. . . Pleasure at the fact that they will be giving the public of Belleville and Ontario, a day's sport that for actual thrilling qualities will equal anything of its nature seen in these parts . . . And, deep down in their hearts they have that satisfaction of knowing that through their efforts, helped by the support of an ever- generous Belleville public they will be bringing success that will go a long way to help to many a crippled child.

But as at all times they are not forgetting to provide a day of splendid entertainment for the people who are summoned to appear today. His Worship found Carmont guilty of failing to produce his licence, a lesser charge, however.

Several charges of speeding and other infractions of the Highway Traffic Act concluded a lengthy proceedings.

POLICE COURT

Peter Lee, Kingston, was convicted of keeping a common gaming house, in the operation of a slot machine, when the accused was represented in County Police Court, held before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., today. A fine of $10.00 and costs was imposed and paid, by Mr. Ormonde Butler, solicitor for the accused. Mr. Lee did not appear as Mr. Butler tendered the plea of guilty.

The case arose out of the operation of a slot machine in a service station immediately west of Belleville on Highway No. 2. The machine was found in operation of a provincial Police and ordered demolished following today's conviction.

A charge of failing to return to the scene of an accident was read by Crown Attorney J. C. Donnan K.C. against one Rosa Sweet. The accused was not present, but represented in court by Jacob Goodman, local barrister, who requested a week's enlargement in the matter. The request was granted.

Earl Hay, 20-year-old farmer residing at Harold, appeared with his head swathed in bandages and charged that he did unlawfully attempt to commit suicide. The accused was not represented by counsel and pleaded guilty when arraigned by Mr. Donnan.

"I am not so sure this man is capable of pleading guilty or not. I'll remand this case for one week pending a medical report. I would suggest that this man be examined by Dr. Ross of the Ontario Mental Hospital", interrupted His Worship as he refused to accept the plea made.

After being called three times in and out of court and failing to answer to his name, Frank Carmont, Hamilton, was convicted of failing to produce a driver's licence and a fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed.

The world is better that she lives."

THE SALVATION ARMY

Today Belleville is witnessing the strength of the feeling backing the Salvation Army. Time came for a new citadel to replace the outmoded one of over fifty years of age. The Salvation Army while preaching everlasting truth of salvation moves with the times in the citadels it occupies. Modern buildings are made for modern purposes and incorporate modern trends. A new hall was necessary and the support lent the cause accomplished the purpose.

Now the old hall, scene of many a meeting of which the results can only be weighed in the scales of the spirit at the end of time, is disappearing before the wreckers. A certain sadness is created by its disappearance and change. But new times means new homes for this great religious organization, which has had its work to do in a world whose needs are still very great.

And so in a few weeks signs of the new temple or citadel will be apparent and in a few months it will have been completed and be ready to occupy and for the full measure of work which it is intended to do.

ASSURANCE AND TRUST

A woman of seventy-five years, lost for three days in the mountain wilderness of Pennsylvania, found her way home. She said she was not panicky at any time, adding "Organization, with me," and though she stumbled over rocks and spilled all the water she had in the pail she was carrying, she was unperturbed, she ate berries and so subsisted.

This was the lack of fear in the face of the ordinarily awesome experiences of being lost in the forest must have been due to a mind wrich was at peace. As she said, she had faith and that counts a great deal, even in such a scene. Doctors of today claim that much of the unsettled mental condition of people now is due to lack of absolute conviction and faith. With this woman, not strong and having reached the age of seventy-five, her faith was her guarantee.

In fact that is what is needed by everyone—the assurance that all will be well. That at least inspires the faithful to overcome obstacles which otherwise might triumph.

Mrs. Emma Steffey possesses what many unfortunately lack today—inward satisfaction and conviction and trust. She did not have to put her trust in many modern things which are very good in themselves, but which if not properly used as agents and if allowed to become master of the individual's destinies, are the ruin of the individual spirit. No doubt as she rocked in her rocking chair throne on her humble cottage porch yesterday she had more inward satisfaction and peace of mind, than have her city twin, many ambitious persons, heads of state, business executives and people who should ordinarily be happy. A poet once put the words in the mouth of a king, "Uneasy rests the head that wears a crown." There are undoubtedly uncrowned heads that have peaceful rest, though they have and ask little of this world's possessions. To them their mind and soul are kingdoms in which dwell their families and friends and a good share of humanity.

HEALTH OF GERMAN PEOPLE

Ottawa Journal says we have heard much of what Nazism has done for Germany, but less of what it has done to Germany and to German human beings. It cites an analysis made of German vital statistics by the New York Times. The Journal says:

"Since Hitler came to power in 1933 cases of diphtheria and scarlet fever have virtually doubled; of spinal meningitis actually trebled. Food poisoning increased from 1665 in 1932 to 3,674 in 1937. Death rates between the ages of one and five went up 12.5 per cent for girls and 20 per cent for boys between 1932 and 1936.

"Said Goering: 'We must have more cannon and less butter.' They have had more cannon and less butter and with the cannon they have a population in physical decay, more starved children, and more children's coffins. When one adds the spiritual degradation of the people, the chains on their minds and their consciences, the brutal suppression of anything like free thought, the regimenting of a whole nation behind the chariot of war, the measure is had of what Adolf Hitler has done for—and to—Germany".

These figures are revealing. It is the constant iteration of the health sciences and departments of democratic countries that the death rate among the young mothers should be reduced. No nation is proud of an increasing death rate among the children and deterioration of the general health.

OLD HORSES

Old horses turned out in the sun
Make us feel sad and glum,
Because someone took care to see
How their last days were spent.

Somehow I think they like to see
A roof of summer sky,
Green trees that spread their cool green arms
Fully as much as I.

How peacefully they crop at grass
Or roll in scented clover,
Remembering good days of work
That now in age are over.

I want to find a meadow, too,
When busy days are done,
And fill my hours with miracle
Of wind and sky and sun.

RUBBISH RECEPTACLES SUGGESTED BY THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

and Merchants Association and provided by the City Council are certainly pruning their wings. These receptacles, which adorn the principle corners of the business section, (adorn is right, for they are unobtrusive and neat in appearance), are being used daily by the citizens and it is seen daily depositing paper from chocolate bars in the receptacles, and when children fall in line there is hope for the grownups, for children have been blamed in the past for much of the waste paper strewn about the streets. A member of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, who has been observing the public attention given the rubbish receptacles since they were put in use by using them, and the business section is cleaner in consequence, but he still observes people who do not seem to have discovered the civic cans provided for waste paper. One act this fine citizen has noted is a transient poking through one can near the post-office looking for cancelled stamps or anything else which might be turned to account.

EMPTY CIGARETTE PACKAGES THROWN FROM MOTOR CAR windows, besides banana skins and other rubbish, on the streets, raises the ire of a Sidelight Fan who protests vigorously against the practice. He also draws attention to the dangerous habit of throwing lighted cigarette and cigar butts from car windows. The thought of a trained valued at $800, recently, near Belleville, was attributed to a grass fire started from a cigarette or cigar butt thrown away by a careless smoker from a moving motor. Action in cases such as this is thoughtfulness for the other fellow may save considerable loss and suffering.

ATTENTION IS CALLED BY SEVERAL SIDELIGHT READERS TO THE FINE JOB THE BELLEVILLE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, under City Engineer Charles Mott, is making on city roadways. Roads are being constructed about the city which look the equal of paved streets and for much less money. More power to the Public Works Department if they can give us good roads without the high taxes headache paying double for them.

WITH THE TOWN CLOCK REFUSING TO STRIKE AND THE TRAFFIC lights refusing to function looks as though Belleville was getting ready to entertain a host of Old Timers at another Old Boys and Old Girls Reunion. Certainly the silence of the Town Clock has been remarked by many householders as a distinct inconvenience.

AMONG THE ODD THINGS NOTICED IN THE BELLEVILLE MERCHANDISE MARTS recently was a pile of rubber cushions with a sign bearing the name "Fanny Parkers," and the price. Vacation time brings thoughts of comfort and parking on a rubber cushion should help some.

SEA SERPENTS AND OTHER AQUATIC MONSTERS are furnishing publicity to various summer resorts as per usual—and as per usual cautious summer campers are having difficulty getting shots at any of the alleged monsters.

YOUNG MEN WHO THOUGHT THAT THE SPEEDBOAT RACING was peculiarly a young man's game, have been disillusioned by the alacrity with which oldsters are taking up this brilliant sport. Several of the young lads in their sixties and seventies are bringing their speed boats to the Bay of Quinte for the Belleville Rotary Club Regatta, Civic Holiday, and will demonstrate what speed really is.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 20th., 1919.

Yesterday was Peace Day in all parts of the British Empire in accordance with the command of His Majesty King George V and in Belleville the day was strictly observed. Mayor Platt proclaimed the day a public holiday and there was a general cessation of business. The day's programme commenced with a union religious service on the court house terrace. The service was arranged and in charge of the Belleville Ministerial Association and the addresses and arguments took part: Rev. Dr. Scott, Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, Rev. Dr. Ramsay, Rev. W. Elliott, Rev. A. H. Foster, Rev. William Marvin Wallace, Rev. George Marshall and Adjutant Goodhew. Many citizens were present and a large number of members of the Great War Veterans' Association marched to the service headed by the 15th. Battalion Band. The music for the service was rendered by the Salvation Army Band. In the afternoon a Peace Parade took place in which were decorated floats, automobiles, bands of the 15th. Battalion Band, the Salvation Army Band, members of the Sons of England Society, the Fire Brigade and members of the Great War Veterans' Association. Mr. C. B. Flint was Marshal of the parade. The streets were lined with people. Mr. Flint, at the conclusion of the parade the 15th. Battalion Band, under the able direction of Lieut. R. Rincher, gave a concert on the terrace at the court house. In the evening there was a community dance on Front Street which at ten o'clock there was a grand display of fireworks at the entrance to Victoria Park. Ald. Charles Hanna worked hard, early and late, to make the celebration a success and much credit is due him for the excellent manner in which the celebration was carried out. Mr. Charles Cook and assistants had their work well in clearing Front Street for the dance. Fire Chief Brown was a busy man and was of great—assistance to the committee. The connection with the parade prizes were awarded: Best Decorated Car, William Young; Best Industrial Truck, Green and Company and E. H. Bancroft; Best Industrial Truck, The Ritchie Company; Best Decorated Wagon, B. A. Sanford; Best Decorated Bicycle, H. Lennox; Special Prize, Miss Violet Pennarik; Special Prize, Miss Pringle, Earl Grey, age 3 and G. Gardner, age 4.

In Defence of the Skunk

If the skunk was the originator of the use of "scunk" as a verb it still be said in his favour that he never employs his nauseating attack except in defence and then alone —and only man, thoughtless dogs and mischievous cats are the enough to disturb him—he is said to be a gentleman, sticking strictly to his own affairs and minding severely family life. With all his faults, the term of opprobrium connected with the expression "skunk" as generally applied, the skunk is likely a useful and engaging member of the animal world.

Yet with all this, there is something about a skunk which precludes popularity for him as a pet. Not as far as poultry keepers and game conservationists are concerned, is the belief. Skunks are known among the worst menaces to ground nesting birds, with an inordinate appetite for eggs.

There are skunks, like dogs and foxes, which develop a taste for eggs, a taste which once acquired will be pursued to the bitter end. So fixed an egg yield around a farm while such an egg-eating skunk makes his home beneath the ranch buildings. But while individual skunks may become egg destroyers, as individual dogs do, such skunks and such dogs are decidedly in the minority.

As a whole, skunks during the spring and summer months can be regarded as an ally rather than a foe, to farmers. In a recent extensive investigation into the food habits of the species, visceral contents of 300 skunks killed during the summer revealed that their diet was over 50 per cent grass-hoppers, small rodents such as field mice and gophers comprised over 10 per cent, and small birds two per cent of their normal diet. The balance of food eaten consisted mostly of vegetable matter, berries, grains and weed seeds. Only seventeen of one per cent of the stomach contents was bird eggs, according to the average of the 300 stomachs examined.

It was pointed out, however, that occasional isolated instances show a great proportion of egg in the diet, bearing out the contention that skunks, when they may become addicted to this fare in preference to all others. On the other hand, the tests showed that skunks continued to find insects as long as the ground remained unfrozen with snow, some stomachs late in the fall containing as much as half a pint of grasshoppers—evidently taken at about the same time in one meal!

On such a showing the skunk from agriculturist's point of view has a definite economic value. Where it becomes a menace to life or farm buildings there are obvious reasons beyond the egg-eating proclivities why it should be destroyed.—Calgary Herald.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Eating More Calcium—Lime Foods Prevents Early Fatigue

The one outstanding criticism by food experts of the ordinary diet found in the majority of homes is that it does not contain enough minerals, particularly calcium or lime.

Perhaps you have thought of lime only as being one of the necessary elements to form the bones and the teeth, and of some use in tooth powders, and to overcome an acid condition of the blood and tissues.

One of its most important uses recently discovered is that it is a real heart stimulant or tonic.

Dr. F. Martin, Basel, in the Swiss Medical Journal, reports his studies on the influence of calcium during the training of athletes. "The young athletes were mostly city dwellers who lived in modest circumstances and who showed frequently a deficient in calcium. Moreover, working in offices during the day they had little opportunity to benefit from fresh air and sunshine.

Dr. Martin made a test on young runners who ran 400 metres or about a quarter mile. Of a group of twenty-seven athletes, fifteen underwent training without use of calcium; the other twelve were given large doses of calcium during the five months of training (December to April)."

The reports of the results of the tests in the men and the end of the training showed that the heart rate of the athletes was not only less in those using calcium but came back to normal (after running the 400 metres) in much less time than the athletes who had not used the calcium.

This proves that fatigue of the heart is less from doing a certain amount of work in those who use calcium regularly as compared with those not using calcium.

It is not suggested that the average individual should use calcium in the usual drug form—calcium lactate and calcium gluconate—although calcium preparations are greatly used by those who are tired or run-down physically.

The suggestion is that most normal individuals would do well to simply use more of the foods that are rich in calcium such as dairy products—cheese and milk; egg yolks; green vegetables—lettuce, cabbage, turnip tops, spinach; cauliflower; carrots; beets; turnips; tomatoes; fresh fruits—strawberries, raspberries, rhubarb, oranges.

HITLER'S GIFT

This 2,500 German and Austrian Jewish Refugees who are now in Shanghai are Herr Hitler's gift to this city. Hundreds more are reported to be en route, reaping a rich harvest for the subsidized German and Italian steamship lines, whose governments are in some degree assisting Ramsees II, the Pharoah of the Exodus. The modern German Pharoah differs from the Egyptian despot in one important respect, however. He does not refuse to let the Chosen People go. He makes it impossible for them to stay, and sees to it that they are robbed of all but a mere fraction of their possessions before they flee.

Never in history—although it is supposed to live in an era of advanced civilization—has there been such a systematic, brutal persecution of a section of a population on religious, and spurious racial grounds....

Some sixty per cent of the Jews who have reached Shanghai have almost immediately had to apply for relief, having exhausted their remaining sources — after paying the Nazi confiscators of their passages—Oriental Affairs — (Shanghai).

For Service to the Empire

On only one occasion has the Victoria Cross, most highly prized of all British medals and decorations, been awarded for an act of bravery, not in the presence of the enemy. The Victoria Cross was given to Private Timothy O'Hea of the First Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, during the Fenian Raids in Canada, when he helped extinguish a fire in an ammunition railway car in 1866. On all other occasions the V.C. has been awarded for bravery in the face of the enemy.

The Victoria Cross was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856 as a means of rewarding individual men and officers of the army and navy who might perform some signal act of valor in the face of the enemy. On the cross, when it is awarded, is the date of the deed. The name, rank, regiment or ship of the recipient is engraved on the back of the clasp through which the ribbon passes. The cross was originally instituted only for men and officers of the army and navy but was subsequently made to apply to sailors and men of the East India Company's service, to civilians who took part during the Indian Mutiny and later to officers and men in the Colonial forces and in the Indian Army. In 1856 it was ordained cases of great bravery, not in the presence of the enemy were admissible, but only one such case has been given on the cross thus far. The V. C. takes precedence over all British Orders and Decorations.

The Most Honorable Order of the Bath was founded in 1725 and was revived by King George I in 1726. The Order is divided into a military and civil division, and there are three classes in each: Knights of the Grand Cross, Knights Commanders and Companions. The name of this Order is derived from an important portion of the ceremony when the esquire, previous to his investiture, has the blade of the sword of service presented to the Knights of this Order were enjoined to have their thoughts exalted to the event of death.

One of the more widely known decorations is the Distinguish Service Order—D. S. O. It was established in 1886 for officers in the army and navy who have been specially mentioned in despatches for valuable service in the field or before the enemy. The decoration entitles the recipient to use the letters, D. S. O., after his name.

The Conspicuous Service Cross was instituted by King Edward in 1901 as a means of recognizing meritorious service performed by warrant officers of the permanent staffes of His Majesty's Fleet. In 1914, the name of this decoration was altered to the Distinguished Service Cross and its award was extended to all naval and marine officers below the rank of lieutenant commander.

The Conspicuous Gallantry Medal was originally instituted for the seaman. This order but was reinstituted in 1874 and is now available in any war for petty officers and men of the navy, non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Marines who may at any time distinguish themselves. This medal, when instituted during the Crimean War was equivalent to the Distinguished Conduct in the Field medal, which was awarded to the army. The original medals were made from the Meritorious Service Medals with the last two words erased and "conspicuous gallantry" engraved thereon. Only about seven of these medals were issued.

On December 21, 1914, King George V instituted the Military Cross, during the Great War. It is awarded for distinguished and no person is eligible to receive it unless he is a captain, a commissioned officer of a lower grade or a warrant officer in the army, Indian army or Royal Marines. The cross is only awarded after recommendation by the secretary of State for War. The Military Cross is worn after British Orders and before war medals. Recipients may use the letters "M. C.", after their names and each time a bar is awarded bars are issued for further gallantry.

The D. C. M.—Distinguished Conduct Medal—was instituted in 1845 for the embodied army of non-commissioned officers and men of the army. The date of the action for which the medal is given is usually engraved upon it while bars bearing the dates of any subsequent gallant actions may be awarded.

Another Great War medal is the Military Medal awarded to non-commissioned officers and men of the army for individual or associated acts of bravery. It was struck in March, 1916, by King George V. It may be awarded to women on recommendation of a Commander-in-chief in the field for devotion to duty under fire.

The Meritorious Service Medal was established in 1845 for the army and four years later for the navy, which may be awarded to sergeants of the army. By Royal warrant of June 10, 1854, the, grant was extended to all soldiers above the rank of corporal and later in 1916 to R. A. M. C. orderlies, C. Q. M. sergeant and to men. Finally by Royal warrant of January 3, 1917, it was established as the medal be awarded to warrant officers, N. C. O's and men who were duly recommended for the grant. In Canada no financial grant accompanies the medal.

Elizabeth Park New Addition To Picton Beauty Spot

Picton, July 20—The new Elizabeth Park situated on the bay shore just above the yacht club, is one of the beauty spots of Picton and is attracting many visitors daily. It supplies a long-felt need in Picton as a cool place where children may be taken. The view of the harbor which is visited by many attractive launches and pleasure craft, is superb. One wonders why this pleasant ment was delayed for so many years when the expenditure of a few hundred dollars has achieved such results.

Breakfast Suite Presented To Madoc Bride and Groom

Madoc, Feb. 20—Friday evening, July 14, was the occasion of an enjoyable event when over one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Caskey to honor Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Caskey following their recent marriage.

During the evening some of the guests derived much enjoyment from the dancing while others spent their time in playing cards and visiting.

About eleven o'clock the gathering was called to order by Mr. John McCaffery and Mr. James Pitts read the following address:

"Dear Margaret and Kenneth:

"Once again we have come as on similar occasions, to extend to you our congratulations on your recent venture of matrimony, and to tell you that we join in your happiness, and wish you every joy and blessing in this many years to follow.

"Kenneth, you have grown up in our community as "one of our boys", and we have come to admire you as an upright example of young manhood, of which any community might be proud. Your home training has been exemplified by you as a man of "Quality" and has always stood out as a symbol of good-will, and neighborliness.

"Margaret, you may be a stranger to many, but others will not soon forget your brilliant career in the Madoc High School, later at Normal and then as teacher. The loss to your community will be our gain and we feel confident that you will also carry on into your married life, with the same efficiency that you have shown in your past.

"We congratulate you both on your choice of partners, who will be your helpmate in the struggles and triumphs of the passing years.

"As a small token of our good wishes, we ask you to kindly accept this gift, with the hope that it may find its place of usefulness in your home and carry with it an earnest desire to share with you the happiness and prosperity which we trust will be yours.

"Signed on behalf of the community—Daniel O'Connell, James Pitts, James Wilson, Wilfred Forestell and Lawrence Fowler."

During the reading of the address presentation was made of a silver piece breakfast suite.

The young couple also received numerous other gifts including crystal, silver, and money.

Mr. and Mrs. Caskey thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and expressed their appreciation for the generosity of the donors.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Two Sisters and the Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past half year, I've been going with a very fine girl of whom I have become very fond. Recently her younger sister, age 17, arrived here from boarding school. In the few weeks I've known her, I've become deeply attracted. I still like the older girl but not in the same way. My affection for the younger sister has become strong, and I've lost the inclination to go with the older girl.

She has noticed this change and has been deeply hurt and I think jealous. I don't want to arouse any bitterness between these two, and yet definitely I prefer the younger girl, while I do not want to lose the friendship of either.

As I see it, I have three courses—go with the older sister and lose the younger or vice-versa; go with the younger, and perhaps lose both; try to forget both of them. I'm not yet 20.

J. J.

Inasmuch as your affections drifted from the older sister to the younger, it is very likely that you could find mutual interests in a third girl in the not-distant future. You're not yet 20 and a child, and, generally speaking, at this age, girls are like flowers in a garden, they are there for the world, and your fleeting glance for the time being.

So I would like to take this siltation of the two sisters so seriously. It would be tragic if you caused a permanent breach between these two girls, who are held together by more real ties than your passing fancy appears for either of them. For the present, at least, why not let yourself become interested in someone else?

Does It Pay to Bank on Bush?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met him about six months ago and found him entertaining. Since then he was attentive to me I never showed I cared for him.

One day when I was peevish, I told him I had my eye on another fellow, which really wasn't true, just flirtatious. Since then he has let me alone and has gone with another girl. But I really am in love with him, and I know he likes me, but you think I can get him back? Does it ever pay to beat around the bush?

Deeply Concerned

Well, my dear, you did no beating when you told that fib and said you were interested in other one you weren't interested in at all. The result is the usual lover's reprisals. He became attentive to another girl. He may be play acting, just as you were, or he may be serious. That's the question to find out. Why not be especially nice to him when you meet? When they really care, they catch at any straw.

Married Women Without Children Selfish?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I work part of the day and sometimes wonder that women who have no children fail to understand a working mother has no time for movies or going places.

Recently I was in the hospital, and after I came home, two married women could not understand things. She would fill in her time visiting me, but never gave me and wife the slightest thought.

I can't help but feel aggravated when such things happen. I'm sure I'm not wrong in my judgment. Do you think childless women, these days of modern living, over twenty years, are inclined to be selfish?

A Reader

I think marriage has very little to do with the disposition in regard to selfishness. Innately selfish people are that way, whether they are married or single. I've known many such thoughtlessness on your sister's part, that she did not offer to help you after you had been ill in the hospital. And it's not hard to how you feel about it. But I wouldn't cut her off from my affections on this account. Which recalls the old adage "Evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Watch Your Vacation Voice, Conversation

Vacation-relaxation has a particularly unfortunate way of revealing itself in our voices. We have only to listen to some people. Is it rasping, large or small, and to listen to their unconfined voices, to realize they consider that they cannot have a good time unless they screech, shout and unnaturally high pitch they guffaw. When they would originally be in a modulated voice in vacation-time they shout, they scream.

If you have any inclination to be one of these unruly offenders of the peace, please, summer, control yourself by keeping a constant watch over this: High spirits are glorious and indicative of a holiday mood, but high pitch is not.

It is true that the people who feel a responsibility to entertain and have a good time have the dull habit of screaming four or five times a day. Their voices are piercing. They seem to feel that these phrases, especially if repeated often enough, form a willy background of conversation!

Try for American slang to express your pleasure, at least when the expression is first coined, that it is clever. It is sometimes a virtue of these phrases. I am sure that if I should urge you to cultivate a quiet conference, instead of using a slovenly heterogeneous collection of slang-phrases in my conversation, you will probably maintain that I am a bore. Don't be a bore during your holidays. But I don't want you to be satisfied with that point of view.

Take instead, the point of view that in order to be attractive to people, you are given a golden opportunity of expressing interesting ideas, of making thoughtful observations, of commenting on occurrences and people and situations in such home is appropriate.

Good Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I enjoy your column and now I need some advice too.

Are the housewarming parties still being given?

2—If so, what would be a nice gift for a girl who is going to be married four years? Should we send a gift, even if we are not invited?

If so, how soon after they move into their new home should the gift be sent? Should it be sent the first time we call on them?

3—I have been invited to a party but have no partic for housewarmings, but that the friends are just supposed to come and bring a gift for visiting. The person who told me this said the invitation was a gift situation. She did not know if it was necessary or not.

1— Indeed housewarming parties are still being given, and for a popular they are, too. I think that a housewarming is one of the most delightful and festive kind of parties . . . the idea of greeting and admiring someone's new home or home is a grand reason for giving a party!

Customarily the invitations are sent out by the hostess and host of the house, and sometimes a party is planned by the friends of the hostess and host. I like the former plan better.

2—It is, of course a proper, generous and friendly gesture to send a gift for the new home or to take a gift when you go to call on it if there is to be a party, when we go to the party. Any item for the new

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

That May morning when the Quintuplets were born I remember pointing with some surprise that all their babies were breathing at birth. It never occurred to me that the little girls could be born of one mother at one time without some or all of them breathing with difficulty. Certainly one would never expect all five to have normal strength.

Then I realized that there is a difference between a baby that breathes at once and a baby that breathes with difficulty.

When I saw the five babies breathing I realized that this fact of their first breath, it isn't hard for you to imagine how weak that breathing was? For days it would become so weak that time and again we thought it would stop. It was then that we began to take advantage of some of the discoveries of science, turning to the use of carbon dioxide to counteract the depression and stimulate their respiration. I feel sure that several times in those first few weeks this use of carbon dioxide mixture saved their lives—at least, some of them.

You would think that oxygen would be just nothing for a child gasping for breath, but scientists have discovered differently? A certain amount of carbon dioxide is carried in the blood—usually about five per cent. This varies with the amount of carbon dioxide we breathe so when the carbon dioxide in the lungs is reduced, the amount in the blood is reduced also. It has been found that the amount carried in the blood is an important factor in deciding the strength of respiration and the regulation of circulation. When you decrease the amount of carbon dioxide, there is a natural lowering of the elasticity, or tension, of the muscles all over the body. This causes faster circulation and the breathing to become weaker.

In this case a smaller amount of air will be moving in and out of the lungs. It also means that the blood will be flowing slower and slower through the lungs, to pick up oxygen. If this situation carries on, the patient will shortly die because of insufficient oxygen.

The reverse of this phenomenon is also true. If there is an unusually large amount of carbon dioxide in the lungs, the solution of it in the blood will increase too. This will result in an increased muscle tone, stronger circulation and stronger breathing.

This, in general, is the action of carbon dioxide used on babies who have difficulty in breathing. A child who cannot or his own strength fully expand his lungs will have periods when his breathing will be slower and slower. The danger is that if he goes too far, or stays weak without fully expanding his lungs, he stands in great danger of contracting pneumonia from which he cannot hope to recover.

"For five years all but a few weeks. They were bought from John Kerwin, at the Home Farm."

"Yes, I remember the purchase perfectly."

"Was the farmer Kerwin aware of any such story as that which we were told yesterday about the hedge and the strip of the large field? Had he ever heard of the Richard Poole claim?"

The answer to this question was never made; for Lyddon Strang had come quietly back to his place, and was talking in a low and agitated voice to Ronald Beresford; and at this point their colloquy had become so evidently lively that it had drawn all attention, even the jurors, from the matter in hand. The judge leaned forward and asked across the court: "What is it, Mr. Beresford? Has anything happened to affect the case?"

"Yes," said Ronnie Beresford and rose to his feet, with every eye in court upon him. "My client has authorized me to withdraw the entire case, at her own responsibility."

In the excitement which followed it was some moments before anyone noticed the immediate, and most spectacular, result of this pronouncement. The defendant had risen. "Catherine!" he cried, as she sprang to his feet with the rest; and that in itself was startling enough.

But the most dramatic gesture had been provided unobserved by Councillor Washburn, who, upon the word "withdraw," had quietly and completely fainted.

CHAPTER XIX

JOYLESS VICTORY

Adam Probert and Lyddon Strang left for Court Brandon by the same train that afternoon.

Adam was aware of it, for he STORY—FOUR ETC. had seen Lyddon enter his first-class compartment a few moments before the train drew out. For two very different reasons they were each of them anxious to get home as quickly as possible. Adam to his neglected work, and Lyddon Strang that he might seriously interfere with the bewildering Catherine who had suddenly thrown down the walls of Peril, and left attackers and defenders gasping.

"If only," thought Adam Probert, "if only I could really get inside that mind of her!" And he supposed that the intensely keen mind which he watched and envied Lyddon Strang was due to a detached curiosity in keeping with what he had always considered his proper character. The ability to satisfy that curiosity, to take Catherine Court aside and ask her point-blank: 'What does all this mean hand and a cigarette between his lips, and looked from one to the other of them with some amusement, but no very keen interest.

"Then how," demanded Mickey, "did she get the tip? If you let nothing drop, then who was it? When she came to me, she already knew half of what I could tell her. Where did she get it from?"

Said Adam, coming unnoticed into the doorway: "That's what I want to know."

They swung round as one man, and in silence watched him enter, and close the door.

"Hullo, Bran!" he said abstractedly in passing, and came to the table, and dropped gloves and hat upon it, and extracted and lit a cigarette before he spoke again. "Well, now I'm here is someone going to tell me what it's all about?"

"I only wish we could," said Kenworth, pushing his spectacles up on to his forehead, "Mickey here knows the end of it, but where it began we can't imagine."

"It's over, anyhow," said Mickey, with a spurt of triumph. "What does it matter how or why?"

Adam watched the smoke curling upward slowly from his cigarette, and said, "It matters a great deal to me. And I want to know at least all you can tell me before I do anything else. What is this mystery? Did Mrs. Court come here and ask questions?"

"No," said Mickey. "She came to us in Stanchester."

"And what did you tell her?"

"What do you think? What I've wanted to tell for the last couple of years—that the day you played your scene with her about that blade of grass, I told her you were making nothing out of the settlement, and I told her who the people in the houses were, and I told her every other thing I could think of, about the whole boiling. She asked me, and she got it. What did you expect me to do?"

"Just that!" said Adam, with a tired but angry note. "I suppose it's no use arguing with the issue now. It's done. But why you couldn't respect my feelings, and put the woman off with half an answer, I can't imagine." He sighed, raising his eyes to Mickey's face with a speculative smile. "I suppose it's no use trying to fire you, either; you wouldn't go."

"I would not," was his reply. Mickey Dennis leaned forward, still amazing a little of his cheerful humour. He perceived that Catherine was where she had no right to be, for ever uppermost in Adam's mind, putting out all other interests behind the barrier of her presence.

Mickey said, protestingly: "But seriously, what does it matter? It's her affair what she chooses to do."

"Perhaps," said Adam, and got restlessly, and walked to the office window; it was still broad daylight, and the slow hour of the winter afternoon, and he saw the beams of the town against the sky shadowy black beneath their sparse leaves. The red tiles of his house were running upward one above another no longer gave him unclouded pleasure. He thought of this surrendering without a word; it isn't like her. And I wanted to see the end of it."

"You have seen the end," said Bran.

"A bad anticlimax, then." He shrugged his shoulders in sudden, savage resignation, and asked: "What's been happening here while I've been away?"

"Oh, everything's gone smoothly," said Mickey cheerfully, "since those tree-stumps further up the lane almost any time now, if you'd like to see them yourself."

Some positive interest came back to Adam's eyes. He turned back to the room. "You've got both ends of the lane covered, of course?"

"Oh, yes, with men and notices. Though there's never anything on the lane at this hour, and there's no midway opening into it between here and the farm, not even a field. They're not minor sleuths, but you never know, of course. Let's go and have a look at Brillen

EX-ENEMIES.

They went, all but Bran Galway, who had business in town, and had already put in a longer time than he had meant to give to Adam's affairs that day.

The tree-stumps, one of them older by far than the invasion of the valley, lay rather more than a hundred and fifty yards from the farm gate in the lane, and well away from the nearest houses, these few yards within the hedge. The one was the broken remains of an elm of terrific age, which had blown down in its own moment some four years before. The remaining three Adam had had felled, and the raw holes of them stood up yellowish white among the grass. Two of the four were together, and probably joined under the soil, the other two stood a dozen yards or more apart, and needed each a charge.

They saw the first shot go up as they approached, a charge nicely calculated. The old elm stump exploded in a flurry of soil and splinters, and stood gathered and bare where it had been for several minutes.

Bran met them with a satisfied grin.

"That goes one of 'em. Glad to see you back, Art. Probert, and all settled so well. Seems it fizzled out, after all. Three women!"

Adda wrenched the smoky cloud from her face, and said thoughtfully: "Three women or at least of the one woman who had brought all the strange things to pass, and had accomplished above all that had believed could not be accomplished—to turn his mind away from the work he had made for himself. That," she but known it, was her triumph.

They stared into the double stump next. It was the nearest to the house, and the nearest to the hedge, still only a yard within it. Once there had been an archway of boughs over the lane at this point, where the two trees which were one all but interlaced their branches, and those of a young ash which jutted from the hedge completed the ash remained, and, delicate distinction, the ash must not be touched.

Belleville "Orphans" Score Second Victory in a Week Over Leading Picton Squad

Timely Hitting, Smart Fielding and Good Pitching Features Win

SCORE IS 9-7

Belleville Squad Scored Three in First and Never Headed

Pounding the offerings of Picton's ace moundsman, "Friday" Dalnard, for a series of hard base knocks in the clutches, the Belleville "Orphans" rang up their second win over the league-leading Picton squad within a week as the Wilkins-led locals took the long end of a 9 to 7 score to fortify their Bay of Quinte League play-off chances yesterday in Picton.

Meeting together the clutch-pitching of Joe Kelleher with some sparkling fielding and additional and appreciated timely hitting, the Belleville team turned in some enterprising baseball to beat Picton, a 5-7 reverse, a defeat that was hard taken by the home fans, it was the third defeat of the season handed the league leaders by the Belleville nine, the only others to have been chalked up against the Picton first place team this season.

Belleville pounced on the deliveries of the league-leading pitcher of the Bay of Quinte loop, "Friday" Dalnard in the initial frame to score three runs and from that point the locals were never headed, although the Rorke-coached home squad never gave up and chased the Wilkinites to the wire in a close finish.

Score Three in First

With one out McQuaid doubled in the first and Weeks and Weeks rapping out singles and Churchill rounding out the trio with a double to score three runs. Picton scored two in the bottom half of the first on doubles by Abbott and Evans and a single by Burley, Belleville added a run in the third as McQuaid strolled and went to third on a single and Weeks put out trying to score, Collins going to second on the play. McQuaid was safe on a fielder's choice as Burley threw into the dirt trying to head off Collins at the plate, Weeks taking second and scoring as Churchill drew a throw to first, Picton driving close behind garnered two in the home half of the third on hits by Durstin, McQuaid and Evans. Belleville pulled away again in the fifth as Churchill walked, Weeks singled and Barrage hit his first base hit of the year, McQuaid and Collins hit in succession to score two, but Picton and Belleville added one more in the seventh without the necessity of a hit, an error by Dalnard, a passed ball and a fielder's choice sent Churchill home. Picton made their big rally in the seventh as Abbott singled, McQuade did the wise and both advanced as Collins tossed out Evans. Burley rapped a hard single down the left field line, her struck out Dalnard and then threw out right to abruptly halt the rally.

Collins Leading Hitter

Stan Collins with four hits in five times at bat led the batsmen of the day, McQuaid, Weeks and Churchill came next with two hits each, Picton had seven batters, Barrage and Churchill came through with much-needed hits, Barrage timely blow for Belleville, however.

The timely sensation of the day was supplied by Eddie Plumfier in left for Belleville, the sensational running catch of Dustin's long drive that was hit in Lockyer being crashed off second in the eighth, Riggs had five putouts in centre, with Lockyer and Evans fielding chances in the infield faultlessly. All-in-all the Belleville team played their best game of the season. Dalnard whiffed seven to Kelleher's six in the other box, Kelleher passed but one. The win ventilated Kelleher's record by obtaining a Quinte loop play-off berth.

Belleville Club Wins Friendly Game From Picton Golfers

In a friendly golf tournament played at the Belleville Golf Club yesterday, the home club defeated the Picton Golf Club by a score of 30 1-2 to 14 1-2.

Playing a regular golf on their own greens, the Belleville players excelled in both driving and approach. Fifteen players from Picton and Belleville participated in the tournament which supplied excellent golf throughout. Purely an exhibition match, the games were thoroughly enjoyed and some exceptionally fine play seen.

Following the match the players fraternized in and around the "19th hole" for a social gathering.

2. Alaska—(H. Semark).

"B" Class

CORBY'S SCORE 15-6 WIN OVER DAIRY JUNIORS

Victory Places Winners Tied With Oilers in Games Won

ETHIER LED HITTERS

Third-Sacker for the Juniors Had Perfect Day With the Willow

As the result of numerous extra base hits, the Corbys A.C. rung down the City League softball schedule with a 15 to 6 win over the Citizens Dairy juniors at the Flats last evening to pull up even, in the matter of games won, with the league leading Shell-Agnus nine. However, the 'Oilers' have a postponed game with the Dracup Tires tonight, when a win for the 'Oilers' will clinch the top rung of the league ladder for Skipper Sexton's charges.

Corbys opened the scoring with two runs in the second and added to their count in every subsequent inning, except the ninth. The teenaged kids made their final bid in the sixth as they scored three and left two stranded on the runways.

Con Harris hurled eight innings for the victors, only allowing Carson taking over in the ninth. Harris was credited for three runs and eight hits, while Carson gave up two runs and two hits. Steve Hook hurried seven frames for the Juniors and was replaced in the eighth by Mac Jones, a recent addition to the ranks of Belleville Junior O.A.S.A. entry.

Arnold Ethier, third sacker of the Juniors, led all hitters with a perfect day's batting average, getting four hits in four official times at bat. Ethier also with three hits each for Corbys, as Kiser pounded out two doubles and a home run. Reid had a triple and single, while all of the Juniors' hits were of the one base nature.

The score by innings:

Giants Wallowing Around In 5-Game Losing Streak Using First Sacker for Hurler

Latest Addition to Hospital List is Pitcher Walter Brown

HIT BY LINER

White Sox Fool Everybody by Taking Double Bill From Boston

By BILL WHITE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If you're thinking of coming to New York to see the Giants, you can take either the Eighth Avenue subway to the Polo Grounds or a cab to Polyclinic Hospital.

Either place you'll find lots of familiar Giants faces, which is the main reason why the Bill Terry's outfit is wallowing around in a five-game losing streak and also why it finished yesterday's 10-3 licking at the hands of Pittsburg Pirates with second-string first baseman, Johnny McCarthy, pitching for them.

With only Zeke Bonura at first and Alex Kampouris at second in their accustomed positions—all the rest of the places are filled with transplanted hired hands—the Giants are in such sorry shape they have asked to have Billy Jurges, their scrappy shortstop, reinstated. That's so they can hold Jimmy, the bat boy, in reserve in case somebody zips in front of a truck.

Lou No Surprise

So it was no surprise that the most crippled club in baseball lost yesterday's game. Still it was a surprise, considering their recent run of luck (all bad) that their newest casualty was the hospital brigade, Pitcher Walter Brown, wasn't more seriously hurt. He slowed up Jake Vaughan's line drive with his right wrist—which bent but didn't break.

Brownie was back at the Polo Grounds today, leaving Harry Danning and Lou Chiozza to play the Polyclinic infield all alone.

In the less crippled sectors of the League, Cincinnati Reds made the Dodgers go overtime again (this was No. 9), which was merely prolonging the Brooklyn agony until the Reds could get a 4-3 victory. They did it in innings when Bill Hershberger singled over a drawn-in infield and sent two mates scampering home.

Cards Beat Phillies

By a similar score, 4-3, the Cardinals defeated the Phillies in the longest night game two hours, 28 minutes) played at Shibe Park this season. A three-run outburst as Hugh Mulcahy of the Phillies gave up four hits in the first inning did the damage.

FOXBORO HOLDS OUTSIDE CHANCE TO GAIN BERTH

Team Defeats Shannonville 6-5 in Last Scheduled Game

LATTA WINS

Cannifton Bowled Over by Latta Nine by 18-4 Count

Foxboro, July 20 (Special)—Still retaining an outside chance of getting into a playoff berth, Foxboro defeated Shannonville in their last scheduled game of the season when on the home diamond they eked out a close 6-5 decision over the "Hawks." With last night's win Foxboro can now tie with Shannonville for the cellar position if they can win from Latta in a replay of last Friday night's tie game. There seems to be some technicality standing in the way of playing this game, however, and despite the fact that President Ed. Shorey had previously ordered the game played this coming Friday night, if necessary, there now appears to be a nigger in the wood pile and, instead, a meeting has been called for that night. The way things stand just now it appears that Foxboro will be all alone when it comes to a show down on Friday evening, because with Shannonville being the only team which they can defeat, they can conclude if they will be agreeable to something which might put them out of the playoffs.

Sore of Second

Latta made sure of second position in the standing, when they played Cannifton three games last night and pounded out a decisive 18-4 victory over the league leaders. The game was played at Cannifton, however, and presenting as it did no interest to either team they simply went through the motions to finish the schedule with a record of eight wins against four losses. Latta comes next with six wins against five losses and a tie, while Shannonville have won five and lost seven, with Foxboro just one point behind with four wins, seven losses and a tie.

Interesting for big runs in the first inning the Foxboro lads hopped into an early lead against their shadowed foes that last night and were never headed as Ken Peacock held the visitors to a run apiece up to the fifth when a couple of errors, two bases on balls and a hit batsman netted three runs to make it interesting. Outside of the fifth, however, Foxboro's big runs were in the picture and had it not been for the sterling work of Joby on the mound, would have been beaten by a far greater margin.

Foxboro scored four times in the first stanza on three hits, one an two errors, a hit batsman and two singles got them away to a good start. Shannonville came back with in the third when a base on balls followed by a single scored Sharpe from first base. Foxboro added one more in their half and made it six in the fourth when Joby was safe on an error, took a base on balls and scored on a single by Sharpe. Shannonville then got three in the fifth and added another in the sixth to tack just one run of tieing it up as darkness settled in to end the game.

Peacock held the Shannonville lads in check for seven innings, as Barnhardt, struck, out twelve and walked four, while Joby struck out five hits, including a triple with one aboard by Stewart in the third, struck out eight and hit two batsmen.

The lineups: Shannonville: Reid 2b; Cook ss; Dies 3b; Juby p; Houston c; Meister cf; Sager lb; Meade rf and Barnhardt p.

Foxboro: Guay c; Breese rf; Ashley rf; Stewart 3b; Peacock ss; Wright lf; Peacock p; Faulkner 2b; and Wm. Joby lb.

Chuck Barnett's Corbys A. C. softsellers mathematically tied the Shell 'Oilers' for first place in the city softball loop with that 15 to 5 win over the Citizen Juniors last night, as we find the Corbys and 'Oilers' both having won nine games. However Corbys are through with their part of the regular schedule and have three games remaining while the feature-ed nine is left with a postponed game with the Dracup Tirenen that is to be played tonight. Why all the rush at this last moment, when these two teams have had a full week to get together, is somewhat puzzling. Oh, day won't make too much difference in the play-off dates. However, as it stands now, the 'Oilers' must win tonight because in case Dracups win, no doubt a sudden death game between Corbys and the 'Oilers' will be ordered for the morrow. Corbys fattened their individual batting averages last night, but the Juniors got in some mighty fine experience. Coach Cy Young signed a new pitcher in Mike Powers, former Ki-Y player.

It's a good thing for Skipper Roly Rorke and his league-leading Orphans that all of the Prince Edward County Clubs' Bay of Quinte League games are not with the Belleville "Orfuns" for we are certain in every game of the west ironsider the home town fans are concerned. Never before, however, Wilkins-led locals stepped into Picton and handed the Rorkemen a very bitter dose to swallow in the league race, as we mentioned yesterday. Not only did the Belleville win mark the second in a week over the Picton nine, but it was the locals' third victory over Picton and seconds for all of Skipper Picton's three league losses. Three of baseball's sensibilities were flagrantly and lastly some fine clutch-hitting, airtight fielding and a combination hard to beat. What more can you ask for? Well, the locals can beat Picton most any day, but have difficulty with the Picton nine, a championship club that have yet to beat Roly Rorke's league leading team.

There were some outstanding features in yesterday's Belleville win at Picton. There was Eddie Plummer's sensational, circus catch in the eighth, that culminated in a double play, Belleville completing the fast two-ply plays yesterday. Actually it was a big day for Eddie Collins who had four hits in five tries with Kitty Abbott robbing Collins of a fifth with a fine running catch. Collins also handled nine fielding chances faultlessly. Picton put big Collins 12 to 11, but the locals made 13 fielding chances, offerings when hits meant runs, while Picton's was successfully bearing down when the breaks were coming too closely. However, the locals are not out of the woods and assured of a play-off berth as yet, but they are at least satisfied in little more encouragement and moral support in future games, if only by reason of their two successive wins over Picton within a week.

Umpire Don Thomas brought with the wrath of the Picton fans upon his head for banishing Catcher Ernie Shannon in the sixth. It seems Kelleher was trying to score from first on McQuaid's double, but was out as he slid into the plate. Arter tagging Kelleher out, Shannon deliberately hit the umpire. Rather the player who was lying helplessly on the ground. Umpire Thomas rightfully ejected Shannon for unnecessary and deliberate rough play.

Today we find Gabby Hartnett going "up" with his job as manager of the Chicago Cubs, but do you remember, Charles Leo Gabby Hartnett replaced Charlie Grimm as manager of the Cubs one year ago today. Grimm had lasted two seasons after rumors started that he was to be replaced, but a week after stating Grimm would only be released if a "better man" were found, Owner Phil K. Wrigley announced the manager-ial change.

The lighting equipment at the Municipal Park in Cleveland where the Indians play their baseball games, is said to have cost $50,000. The plant consists of six towers carrying 712 individual and powerful lamps of 1,000 watts each, which with an overload of ten percent will give 134 foot candles power in the infield and 106 foot of such power in the outer garden.

It is reliably stated the broadcasting of major league games is chiefly in on the public receipts in uncertain manner and another year will see less broadcasting of major league games in both circuits.

Charles A. Comiskey, 13-year-old son of the late J. Louis Comiskey, is perhaps the youngest major league baseball club owner in history. Upon the death of his father this little young Comiskey inherited the Chicago White Sox baseball franchise in the American League. The White Stockings were organized 39 years ago by the late Charles A. Comiskey, better known as The Old Roman, and he had also remained in the family ever since.

Formal articles for the Louis-Paster bout at Briggs Stadium on Friday night, August 18, were signed Only Promoter Mike Jacobs, Nicholas Dandolos, Clarence Rowland and the managers of the two fighters were present. The agreement as to the financial cuts were made public, but why should anyone care? It is a good guess more iron men than he ever saw will be in the ring on that evening and that "morning after feeling" the chief concern on Sept. 21st and without extra charge.

That grand old man of baseball, Connie Mack, will not be present at the Baseball Hall of Fame to be held in his honor in connection with the 100th anniversary observance at Cooperstown, N.Y., next Monday. Mack, manager of the American League manager is slowly convalescing at his Philadelphia home. A pure case of "the absence of the guest of honor."

A goodly number of the N.H.L. hockey players gathered at Hastings, Ont., Dit Clapper's home town, and made merry at softball and other sports during a gala day's celebration yesterday. The participants hided their time between angling in the Trent for those finny beauties and sleeping a mashhall around for the amusement of hundreds of persons, who gathered for the occasion. Dit Clapper's new boss Chuck Conacher's team 12-9, with Mail and Globe Vern DeGeer as chief scorer.

HOUSE MEMBERS RUBBER STAMPS SAYS MAYOR BONE

Would Appoint Independent Business Men to Parliament

NEED EMPIRE SPIRIT

Toronto, July 20—(CP)— The first and most important remedy to present-day conditions is to appoint independent business men to parliament and to break up the "Liberal and Tory gangs, many of whom are unfit to govern anything" declared Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville in addressing the Rotarians Club on Wednesday.

"Fifty intelligent business men, elected from all over Canada would support or oppose legislation as they saw fit," he declared, "instead of being rubber stamps like all our members are now.

"Nothing else will, in my opinion, correct our present defects quicker and force both parties to adopt a decent platform. Naturally they both use all possible propaganda to support the two-party system where the winning party can get back into power, draw their salaries, give jobs to their friends, sit back and do nothing as before," declared the mayor.

"What we need badly is an empire spirit," stated Mayor Bone, "it realizes that each of us is an important unit in the greatest empire the world has ever known. And I would just like to add that, in my opinion, if Premier King was a real live person with a blood circulation and ordinary breathing apparatus he would, without his habitual hesitation, throw away the word 'honorable' from Ian Mackenzie's name. We could and should have spent the money on defense that we have thrown away on relief. The result would have been jobs, self-respect both for the individual and the nation, and a well set-up manhood, fed, clothed and in good health."

Speaking of the immigration laws, Mayor Bone stated that the Canadian and United States systems were both devised by people whose mentality could not possibly exceed that of a ten-year-old boy.

"England accepts refugees and has acquired wealth and industries by her reasonable policies in immigration," he stated. "Our trade unions have the government buffaloed. Why Premier Hepburn went to Australia God only knows. If he had only gone to England he would have learned among other things how they take care of excess population themselves, how they take care of Spanish, Czech and Jewish refugees and meet other places in the empire and have for two or three years now reached the greatest peak of prosperity ever attained.

"I want the workless man and woman and the hopeless boy and girl avenged," he stated. "These peoples' lives have been made miserable and hopeless and they have been sacrificed in vain. There never was any occasion for it, and there is none now. The moral-poltcia type of politician must go or away goes democracy for sure, and the sooner the better."

MAYORS CONDEMN HEPBURN'S REFUSAL TO WORK WITH DOMINION GOVERNMENT

Members of the Ontario Mayors' Association in Toronto yesterday, sharply criticized Premier Hepburn's stand in refusing to cooperate with the Dominion Government in its offer to pay a certain percentage of the cost of public improvements and public works. Mayor George W. Gordon of Kitchener asked, "Why should the public suffer for the whims of one man?" Mayor David Croll of Windsor declared, "The province, for reasons of its own, won't contribute to the relief program. Nothing must be allowed to block necessary civic improvements." The mayors were slated to confer with Premier Hepburn today. Here are seen, from the LEFT, Mayor Croll, Mayor H.R. Cory of Trenton, president of the association, and Mayor Stanley Lewis of Otlawa, who flew to Toronto for the Conference.

CAMPAIGN OPENS PREMIER HEPBURN

3. Create a new culture and bring about of "the golden age." Dr. Frank Bruckman, founder of the Oxford Group and prime mover in moral rearmament outlined the principle of adapting individual good will to public life.

H. W. (Bunny) Austin, British tennis star, said "new hope for the future" has been generated in the United States through the plan. Other English speakers included George Muff, Labor member of parliament, and Bill Rowell, representing London's unemployed.

Chinese, Japanese Greet

Chinese and Japanese representatives shook hands; union labor leaders greeted officials of employers' organizations; Ruth St. Denis, the dancer, called the meeting "the supreme hour for which this wonderful bowl was created."

Messages were read from public and industrial leaders.

Many prominent Canadians were among the 300 persons arriving Tuesday on a special train from New York.

Leaders of the movement announced Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Canadian Minister of National Defence, had sent a message of good will in connection with last night's meeting.

Hon. Ian Mackenzie's Message

"Although my present duties are primarily concerned with the provision of armaments for the security of my country," he said, "I realise that permanent peace can only be established amongst nations by rallying our people around the banners of friendship, tolerance, mutual understanding and mutual trust. Let us hope such ideals will prevail in the minds of the leaders of all nations."

Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States arrived yesterday. He said "moral rearmament is a fine movement and is a contribution to general progress."

He came to attend a directors' meeting of the Huntington Library at San Marino.

BODIES STREWN

The scene of the crash was about 18 miles north-east of Toronto and 10 miles east of where five persons were killed in a two-car crash July 3.

The Ragen car came suddenly upon a car driven by Foster Kelsey, 22, of Toronto, proceeding in the same direction, swinging quickly to the left. Ragen brought his machine head-on into one driven by Ross Andrews, Markham hotel proprietor.

A rear wheel and a bumper were torn from Kelsey's machine. Andrews' car turned on its side at the roadside and Ragen's landed upside down in a ditch.

Both Legs Broken

Bits of the bodies of Ragen and the two girls were found far from the car in which they had been riding. The only other passenger, Parkin Coates of Toronto, was taken to a Toronto hospital, both his legs broken.

For hours attempts were made to identify the victims. When Ragen's identity was established his brother, Fred, who owned the car, was unable to say who had accompanied him on the ride.

Ragen's car were his fiancee, Sadie Robinson, 18, her nine-year-old sister, Wan, and Lorraine Gardner, 14, all of Toronto.

"The lights of an oncoming car dazzled me," Kelsey said. "I pulled over to the right as far as I could go and slowed down. I was so far over that my off wheel was running on the gravel. I did not realize the car was coming behind me until it hit my left wheel and bumper."

Mutual Assistance Pact With Russia May Be Signed Aug. 4

London, July 20 (CP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today he hoped to be able to announce conclusion of a British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact before parliament recesses August 4, but he said "we certainly have not got an agreement yet."

Mr. Chamberlain made his statement in reply to questions in the House of Commons on the Moscow negotiations. He was questioned also on the Far Eastern situation and on Danzig.

"The British and French Ambassadors in Moscow had a further meeting with M. Molotoff (Soviet Foreign Commissar) on Monday," said Mr. Chamberlain. "Their reply is now being considered by His Majesty's government in consultation with the French government."

No Knowledge of German Proposal

Asked whether the government had any information "regarding the proposal for a loan of £25,000,000 from the German government to Russia," Mr. Chamberlain answered "no sir".

Wedgwood Benn, Labor, asked whether the Prime Minister had "noticed the suggestions made in the American Senate that the Brussels Conference might be recalled."

This was an apparent reference to a resolution introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Arthur Vandenberg urging the administration to call a conference of nine nations to pass judgment on Japan's military campaign in China. It proposed that the Brussel's conference of 1937, now in recess, be recalled for the purpose.

"I have not noticed that," Mr. Chamberlain told his questioner.

THE HOP HARVEST

Several thousand men, women and children were attracted by the hop harvest in the Derwent Valley at Tasmania. Every year for more than a century the annual harvest has provided city families with an opportunity for a working holiday in delightful surroundings. About $300,000 is paid each year in cash to the pickers, and the individual amounts earned are an important item in the annual income of many. The industry has seen important changes. Growers of the Derwent Valley have shown a readiness to introduce the best possible methods of drying, and it is because of their enterprise in this direction that their hops have held their own with the best in the world — Australian Press Union.

More Gold Coins Found On Farm

Bronson, Mich., July 20 (AP)— A second "strike" of gold within a week on a farm near here threatened today to precipitate a legal battle for possession.

Frank Belote, whose three young sons unearthed $1,800 in gold coins from a buried jar last Sunday, pulled $1,120 more from an old metal cylinder beneath his front porch yesterday. Like the previous discovery, the money was in gold coins of $10 and $20 denominations, bearing dates prior to 1902.

Belote turned the money over to Sheriff Homer Burns, who deposited it in a bank.

Laddie Kregger, owner of the farm which Belote rents, refused to confirm or deny reports that he had made a find of his own. Both Kregger and Belote retained attorneys to defend their respective claims to the money.

Michigan law provides that after due advertising of the discovery without production of a claimant who can prove ownership, circuit court may award half the money to the finder and half to the county.

Kregger issued orders that Belote was to do no more digging on the farm, to which Belote calmly replied: "How are you going to farm without digging?"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, 20—(CP)—Toronto stock market reflected Wall Street's hesitating performance through the early hours today, showing practically no price change in the average for the industrials, base metals and western oils and only a mixed pair for the golds. Volume in the first hour was down to the smallest in seven years and scarcely improved in the two succeeding hours.

Foods were firm to strong issues in the industrial section and the steels, senior oils and utilities mainly firm. Smelters was the strongest of the base metal leaders and among the cheaper group, Ventures and Coast Copper were higher by 20 cents. In the western oils, Home and Foothills weakened narrowly.

Better prices ruled in the gold group for Coniaurum, Preston, Central Patricia, Moneta and McKenzie.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 20.—(AP)—Quiet strength of Aircrafts and Specialties kept the stock market on its feet today although many leaders occasionally wavered.

Profit selling on the recent upsurge died down after the opening and buyers began to nibble at selected issues. While these were plentiful near the final hour, advances running to a point or so were well distributed. Dealings were slack throughout, compared with the Monday and Tuesday volumes. Transfers, for the five hours were at the rate of approximately 750,000 shares.

General Motors Announces J. E. Johnson Sales Head

Oshawa, Ont., July 20, (Special Despatch)—J. E. Johnson, previously Assistant General Sales Manager for the Chevrolet Division of General Motors of Canada, becomes director of sales for General Motors Products of Canada Limited, in the most important of a number of appointments announced today by H. H. Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager.

Mr. Johnson's appointment is the culmination of a brilliant career with General Motors. He joined the Chevrolet organization in 1923, and was promoted rapidly through the sales organization, being successively manager of four zones. In 1934 he became Regional Manager of the south-west region and on April 1, 1935 was elevated to the position of Assistant General Sales Manager.

Now, while still a young man, Mr. Johnson caps his distinguished record by becoming the director of sales of Canada's largest automotive organization. He assumed his new duties today.

Other concurrent executive changes are the appointment of C. E. McTavish, formerly General Sales Manager, to be director of the Parts and Service Departments; and of E. J. Umphrey and Roy D. Kerby to be General Sales Managers respectively of the Chevrolet-Oldsmobile and the Pontiac McLaughlin-Buick Divisions.

In announcing the appointment of Mr. Johnson to be director of sales, Mr. Carmichael referred to the unexcelled sales record established by Chevrolet during Mr. Johnson's connection with that division, and declared that with his executive experience and exceptional ability he would bring to the automobile industry a valuable field an invaluable fund of knowledge.

One of the deans of the automotive industry in Canada, C. E. McTavish comes to his new position as director of the Parts and Service Departments with a background of lifetime spent in the industry and twenty-three years spent in various capacities with General Motors of Canada. In his new position he will supervise the sale of all General Motors Parts and Accessories, as well as United Motors Service, G. S. Spark Plug and Packard Cable products, with headquarters at Oshawa.

Mr. Umphrey, one of the youngest sales executives in the Canadian automotive industry joined General Motors in December 1919, and after a rapid series of promotions through the sales organization, he was appointed Assistant General Sales Manager in February, 1937.

Well known throughout all branches of the automotive industry in the Dominion, Mr. Kerby was first associated with General Motors in March 1918. He became Assistant General Sales Manager in December 1933 and his appointment as Public Relations Manager was announced a year ago.

Local Plant Sees Increased Demand

Increased expansion of business and production of the plant of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation is responsible for the hiring of 30 extra girls for training purposes tomorrow, it was stated this afternoon by Mr. Arthur Young, general manager of the local plant.

"No, it isn't just a temporary rush: we hope that the work will be steady. The thirty extra girls will be trained for the departments in which production is being increased," declared Mr. Young.

An advertisement for the girls to apply at the office of the plant on Friday appears in today's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer.

TWO WOMEN

rected them to a drug store where a purchase was made.

The men allegedly represented themselves as orchestra players, and offered to show the girls around the district which they did during the afternoon. In the meantime a proposed driving to a clubhouse in the country to dance.

Stop an Lonely Road

One man drove the car, and when they reached a quiet, lonely near Thorold town line he allegedly stopped the vehicle, turned off the lights and said: "This is a business trip, not a pleasure trip." One girl was pushed out of the car, with one of the men, and the other remained in the car. The assaults and robbery followed, the girls told police.

Finally they got possession of the car keys and drove to a service station where they reported the attack. Yesterday, the girls appealed to the city police and an investigation got underway.

Penniless, the girls were given food and lodging by the police and sufficient money to return home after the court proceedings today. They promised to come back Aug. 15.

Some circles had a more pessimistic outlook.

Vernon Bartlett, Independent member of parliament and writer on foreign affairs, said in the Liberal News Chronicle that "the grudging way" in which Britain has discussed credits with Poland "nurtures doubts in Polish minds about British determination to make a stand against aggression."

He added that Bulgaria, "one of the key states of Europe," had not received rather cool treatment.

Although Mr. Chamberlain told parliament yesterday he hoped a pact with Moscow would be concluded before parliament adjourns, Mr. Bartlett spoke of the Moscow talks in this way:

Mindful of Mr. Chamberlain's drive to clean up important legislation in time for adjournment August 8, the House of Commons worked through the night and into the daylight hours today.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with Itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning that proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKenzie or any druggist, a package of Hemrold and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemrold is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

ATTY.-GENERAL

"You have probably seen from the press that at my request Mr. Barlow, K.C., Master of the Supreme Court at Osgoode Hall, has made an interim report dealing with some phases of practice and procedure which have continued the Hon. Gordon Conant. "That will prove to be so bold as to say that all the recommendations of the report be adopted, but I do feel that many of them have a great deal of merit, and that practically all of them would effect a considerable saving to the citizens of Ontario.

"Furthermore, and what is probably of just as great importance that would simplify and expedite the administration of justice very much. I commend to the consideration of all lawyers Mr. Barlow's report, copies of which are available at my department on request. But more particularly, I ask for expressions of opinion regarding the recommendations. Reforms in any field of human activity can be brought about only by study and discussion. Improvements in our practice and procedure are no exception to the general rule. The lawyers of the Province will be doing a real service to their profession and to the province at large if they will carefully consider and give expression to their conclusions regarding this report," Mr. Conant said.

Mr. Conant referred to the profession of law in general.

Most Vital Among Professions

"As you are of course aware, the lawyer is the only profession to obtain their status under statutory authority, which creates what is in effect a close corporation, setting up special rights, privileges and perquisites. Lawyers must not misuse their special position. The legislature in its original grant of power still on our statute books with the various amendments from time to time, not to favor one class or group of citizens, but for the benefit of the people of the province as a whole. To maintain and raise the standard of the profession and to protect the people against unqualified practitioners. Lawyers must not shelter themselves behind the protection of those laws in an endeavor to promote or continue only that which is best for the profession in a narrow, selfish way. Lawyers must be willing to entertain and the laws which protect them by making such changes and reforms as are best calculated to serve the people and promote the practical and expeditious administration," he declared.

Time to Cooperate

"There is a tendency" continued Mr. Conant, "among the profession when any reforms are suggested, to dismiss the subject peremptorily with the statement that 'nothing can be done.' That attitude on the part of lawyers is not to be encouraged. The lawyers of this Province will do well to cooperate in connection with the reforms now suggested, and I hope they will not hesitate to make constructive criticism," Mr. Conant said.

Speaking on behalf of the Hastings County Bar Association for the presentation of the address to Mr. Conant by Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C. who stressed the fact, that the legal profession welcomed the kindly and suggested reforms, which would be for the benefit of the profession and better the profession, which was so ably represented at last evening's meeting.

A brief address touching upon several legislative measures by Hon. Mr. Conant was also given by Judge C. E. Deroche.

AT THE McCARTHY

"CLOUDS OVER EUROPE"

Forget the headlines. . . join the laugh fiesta. . . and you'll roar with laughter.....as the screen's newest comedy team, Laurence Olivier and Ralph Richardson (star of "The Citadel") Laurence Olivier (star of "Wuthering Heights), which is also coming to the McCarthy Theatre, and Valerie Hobson (Heroine of "Drums.") You will call "Clouds Over Europe" the funniest comedy entertainment, plan now, see "Clouds Over Europe" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

In addition, songs of the trail, tender tunes that tell of love, of adventure, colorful outdoor scenes and a fine drama of the early west are combined in the exciting Charles Starrett musical-western production "Call Of The Rockies" companion feature presentation at the Belleville Theatre.

"Call of the Rockies" also features Art Mix, recently with Cole Brothers Circus, who appeared in Belleville a short time ago, The Song of the Pioneers, a unique musical quintet, Iris Meredith and a host of other well-known outdoor favorites. Filmed in Cinecolor a delightful color merrie melody cartoon entitled "Thugs With Dirty Mugs", replete with breathless and suspenseful action.

It's one of the most unusual dramas ever to reach the screen. Five separate stories with five separate sets of characters are told, each intensely dramatic in itself and all building to a high climax of action and drama.

The picture reveals the efforts of Melvyn Douglas, as a doggedly determined reporter, to bring to justice a group of criminals guilty of murder and kidnapping. A hundred dollar note, part of the ransom money, falls into his hands by accident. Step by step he traces the bill back to is original source. In breath-taking sequences, with death at his heels as the stakes in the issue, his relentless course through the highway and byways of a great city until the final nerve-shattering climax.

AT THE BELLE

"Lucky Night"
"Tell No Tales"

A new co-starring team is frolicking across the screen of the Belle Theatre, and an audience hilarious with laughter has placed the seal of approval upon it. That team of Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor strikes a new note in joyous, stream-lined comedy in "Lucky Night".

The picture unfolds the accidental meeting and later marital adventures and mishaps of Cora Jordan, played by Miss Loy, and Bill Overton, portrayed by Taylor. Cora, the spoiled daughter of a millionaire steel magnate, walks out on her fourth engagement to hunt for a job. She takes up with playboy Bill, and together the gaudy pair and fight their way through a series of uproarious complications to marriage, separation, remarriage and happiness.

Taylor demonstrates that he is as effective in comedy as he is in dramatic roles. Myrna Loy brings all her powers of charm and versatility to the screen, alone with a delightful series of ultra-fashionable gowns. Nicely produced by Louis D. Lighton and enacted by Lionel Atwill, Virginia Bruce, covering all the high spots and night spots of the big city. "Lucky Night" is brilliantly directed by Academy Award winner, Norma Taurog.

"Tell No Tales"

Striking a keynote of distinct originality "Tell No Tales" featuring Melvyn Douglas at the Belle Theatre proves to be dramatic entertainment of the highest order,

Honor Marsh Hill Teacher on Retirement

Sterling, July 20—At the conclusion of her final term as teacher at Marsh Hill school, Miss R. Bird was honored by the pupils and their parents as well as members of the local school board at the school when messages of appreciation and best wishes well were expressed to Miss Bird who has achieved an enviable record during her years of faithful service as teacher.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. M. Sine who briefly addressed those present. Following an enjoyable period of community singing Miss Doreen Dawson read the following address:

"Dear Miss Bird: Today is the last day of school. Examinations are over, promotions made and everybody ready for a holiday. The pupils have always enjoyed the summer and been ready for school again in September expecting all the faces of the friends to be present "except of course the entrance class". This year they bid adieu to the teacher who has started them on their way to knowledge, and when they return they shall miss her kind face and cheery smile.

"The teaching profession is a very high one. Sometimes we forget what a responsibility a teacher has. She has boys and girls five days a week for about forty weeks in the year. We simply hand them over to her during school hours. She has a chance to start building up character as well as the instilling of knowledge.

"We as parents expect so much from a teacher, and often forget that she has received a special training to guide her in her work and so we often try to give advice when it is not solicited. A teacher is only human and co-operation or a word of praise, helps along a great deal. Don't let us forget this.

"Miss Bird has ever proved faithful to her calling, being as a real mother to the children in her care, advising and correcting with discretion and insight, because no one knows better than a teacher that the treatment used for one child will not do for another.

"The district of Marsh Hill school has ever been a high one, and Miss Bird has kept it to this high place during her eight years as presiding genius.

"We cannot let you, Miss Bird, leave us without telling you of the appreciation of all you have been doing, so we have met here today with you in the school to ask you to accept this gift as a mark of our esteem and we hope you may enjoy many a trip.

"(Signed) Alex Tanner, Chairman of Board of Trustees; M. B. Sine, Secretary-treasurer; Fred Reasman."

Miss Eleanor Tanner and Miss Jean Coulter then presented Miss Bird with a handsome twin travelling set, Miss Bird although taken completely by surprise, thanked the people for their gift and spoke of the great pleasure which she had derived from teaching in Marsh Hill. Her school career had commenced in the same school house in which it was conducted.

She then gave her pupils a surprise by presenting each pupil with a certificate of promotion. The following eight pupils were particularly surprised to receive entrance certificates as being junior fourth pupils they had no idea they were trying the exams for that purpose. However they were greatly delighted. They were Gordon Tanner, Bernice Herman, Raymond Dafoe, Ross Curtis, Marjorie Besley, Everett Lott, Joyce Sine and Grenville Sine. The four senior pupils who also successfully tried and received certificates were Cyril Herman, Jean Coulter, Doreen Dawson, and Bill Reasman. It might be mentioned here that all twelve pupils passed with honours which is a great credit to Miss Bird, the pupils and also to Mr. Sine and Mr. Tanner as members of the board for a few words. Mr. Sine took the opportunity to introduce the new teacher, Miss Sharpe, by letter to the pupils and others present. Mrs. G. Sine and Mrs. P. Reasman, Mrs. Vanderwater and Mrs. Detlor also spoke a few words congratulating Miss Bird upon her career as a teacher and wished her much happiness in her well earned rest. The part of the program closed with the singing of the National Anthem and Mistletoe was served consisting of ice cream, cake and fresh strawberries.

Interesting Union Services.

Continuing the union service for the congregations of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the former church was well filled on Sunday morning for the fine message delivered by Rev. H. V. Walker who is filling the duties of sermons on "Messages from God," a combined choir representing both churches led in the singing under the direction of Mr. C. L. Chute, organist of St. Paul's Church and during the services Mr. William Reynolds assisted in the rendition of a baritone solo, "Softly and Tenderly." Next week's service will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with special music by a group of visiting singers from Toronto.

TAMWORTH

To the two men the Attorney General offered his personal congratulations and extended the thanks of the people of Ontario for their help and co-operation in the matter of preserving law and order.

"Lawbreakers may at times circumvent the law temporarily and elude the police, but not the alertness nor the surveillance of the ordinary citizen upon whom we are dependent at times. I am pleased to extend my congratulations to you on your good citizenship, and may I hope that your act may prove an example for the benefit of others," stated the Hon. Gordon Conant shaking the hands of the men warmly.

Many Officials Present

Present at the award were Judge G. E. Deroche, Mr. R. D. Parmelee, K.C., M.P.P.; Magistrate F. J. Buller, K.C.; B. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney; Inspector Gardner of the local Provincial Police force and members of the force; Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C.; Chief of Police Alex Kidd, and members of the city force. The City of Belleville was represented by Aldermen Lazier Lewis the absence of Mayor Bene.

Slightly ill at ease though perfectly composed during the glare of publicity and the reading of the citations, the two men accepted the personal thanks of the Attorney General and the appreciation of the Province with the briefest acknowledgement.

"We appreciate this reward," and I hope that through this public presentation others may be better encouraged to uphold the law" declared Mr. Bawn.

"It is a grand thing to help keep down crime and I say sure that there are many others, who will be encouraged to co-operate with the police in this matter" affirmed Mr. Bradshaw.

Citation Read

The citation read by Inspector Francis Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police follows:

Whereas the police-in-council dated the 5th day of May, 1939, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario has authorized the payment of a reward or making of an award to every person who performs any outstanding and particularly meritorious act involving risk to his person or property in the apprehension or pursuit of any criminal who has committed any violent or serious crime, and

Whereas it appears that Earl W. Bradshaw of the Village of Tamworth, Ontario, did on the 28th day of May, 1939, perform an outstanding and particularly noteworthy act within the terms contemplated by the Honorable the Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario in the said order-in-council, in the following manner, that is to say:

Harold Bawn, 18, unmarried, and Earl W. Bradshaw, 27, married and with one child are residents of the Village of Tamworth, Ontario.

Harold Bawn was returning home about 2 a.m. on May 28, 1939, when he heard a noise in the mill owned by Earl W. Bradshaw, in which he was employed, and which is situated opposite Bradshaw's house, where Bawn boards.

He entered the mill and was confronted by a man who struck him with a .22 calibre rifle, went with Bawn into the mill, the door of which had been unlocked. They found two men just inside the mill in the act of breaking open the safe. Bradshaw covered the men with his rifle and ordered them to put up their hands. One man ran to the rear of the mill, jumped through a window, and escaped. The other, named Harold Fraser, was captured by Mr. Bawn and Mr. Bradshaw. The police at Tweed and Belleville were notified and Fraser was lodged in gaol to answer a charge of breaking and entering.

And

Whereas pursuant to the direction of the Honourable the Attorney-General, His Honour Judge J. E. Madden, Major-General V. A. S. Williams and Acting High County Constable F. W. Barrett did consider the facts and circumstances of the said case and did determine and decide that a reward of $25.00 be paid to the aforesaid Earl W. Bradshaw, and

Whereas the Honourable the Attorney-General has been pleased to concur in the decision of the Board as cited above,

Now therefore be it known that in accordance with this decision, and in pursuance thereof, the Honourable the Attorney-General, on behalf of the people and the Province of Ontario, doth hereby extend to Earl W. Bradshaw, of the Village of Tamworth, Ontario, a reward of $25.00 (Twenty-five dollars.)

FIVE RESCUED, THREE DIE AS MERCY PLANE CRASHES INTO ATLANTIC

A dramatic photo made in the Atlantic ocean 150 miles southeast of New York as the coastguard plane V164 sinks beneath the waves while members of the crew of the ketch "Atlantis," which lowered a boat, worked quickly to pull aboard five survivors of the crash. Trapped in the cabin of the plane are Lieut. William Lee Clemmer, 34, ship commander; Aviation Machinist's Mate John Radan, Jr., 29, second in command, and George Temple, Priest, 36, of the "Atlantis" crew, all three of whom died as the plane sank. The V164 crashed while attempting to take off after the pneumonia - stricken Priest was transferred to the plane from the "Atlantis". The five survivors, two of whom were injured, were brought to Staten Island by the coastguard cutter Campbell, which took them off the slow-moving "Atlantis".

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen — Science Service Meteorologist

Oceanic Currents — Currents over the seven seas do not change nearly so abruptly along any parallel of latitude as they do the continents. That is because there are no mountain ranges there to break up their smooth surface. They do, however, change due to the great ocean currents; those flowing north in our hemisphere are generally responsible for the relatively high temperature for the latitude, and those flowing south for the low. The most notable ones in the Atlantic Ocean are the Gulf Stream causing high temperatures in the northeast Atlantic, and the Labrador current causing low temperatures along eastern Canada and the United States.

Eight Fliers Killed In Three Crashes

London, July 21—(CP)— Eight fliers were killed today in three crashes in which four Royal Air Force planes were involved, bringing to 164 the total of military aviation fatalities since Jan. 1.

Two persons were killed when an R.A.F. plane crashed near Lechenfield, Yorkshire.

Two planes collided near Deal, Kent, killing two occupants of one and the single flier in the other.

A small plane dived into the North Sea near Bridlington drowning two men.

Mrs. A. Schouten Driving Chickens to Shelter; as Hail Like Marbles Falls

HAIL KILLS FOWL

Regina, July 21—(CP)—Hail the size of marbles fell with such force in the Tate District, 25 miles north of here, that Mrs. A. Schouten was knocked unconscious Wednesday as she was driving her chickens to shelter. Members of her family also suffered bruises.

Hundreds of fowl were reported killed by the hail. A strip of wheat five miles wide and 17 miles long was pounded into the ground.

A hailstorm Wednesday also struck Muntz District, 80 miles southeast of Regina, causing a loss estimated at $500,000, with trees stripped of leaves and window panes broken. Machine sheds and granaries were reported smashed by the cyclonic winds accompanying the storm.

It is estimated 40,000 acres of crop suffered from 25 to 100 per cent damage.

Entry of 250 Czecho-Slovak Key-Men Of Bata Shoe Co. to Canada Protested

Montreal, July 21—(CP)—A resolution protesting "energetically" against the entry to Canada of the Czecho-Slovak technicians for the Bata shoe firm was adopted last night at a mass meeting of workers in the shoe-manufacturing industry here.

Lionel Thibault and O. LaCroix, Labor Union officials, presided before the demonstration which was attended by 150 persons.

Philippe Girard, Vice President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, told the workers that a projected establishment in a Canadian plant by the Czecho-Slovak firm would increase unemployment in the Dominion.

"Bata is bringing 250 key-men into the country," he said. "Why? You know how to make shoes. Each one of you here tonight should write a letter of protest to the Minister of Commerce at Ottawa."

The company has taken an option on a mine at Penhold, Ont., near Trenton for a factory.

GERMANS THINK DANZIG ISSUE WILL BE SOLVED

Tense Feeling Between Danzig and Poland Over Shooting of Soldier

Official Poland Seeks to Keep Opinion Within Bounds Over Incidents

By LOUIS LOCHNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, July 21—(AP)— German official circles expressed anew today their conviction that the question of Germany's demands for the Free City of Danzig would be solved in a peaceful manner without compromise on Germany's part.

A foreign office spokesman made a statement to this effect, despite admitted international tension and at a time when Poland and Danzig are seeking to fix responsibility for a border incident in which a Polish sentry shot dead a sentry by a Danzig Nazi official.

Poles accused the Danziger of shooting across the frontier without warning but the official Danzig explanation was said to be fired in self defence.)

German Opinion Optimistic

German official opinion is that it is only a matter of months until peaceful negotiations begin to incorporate cemeteries to prevent their neglect or commercialization is being studied by Attorney General Gordon Conant in collaboration with Hon. Harold Kirby, Minister of Health, it was announced today.

The statement was an announcement accompanied the report of R. B. Whitehead, K.C., Ontario Securities Commissioner who, some time ago, was assigned the task of investigating the administration of cemeteries throughout the province. The report indicated Mr. Conant said, that there was "no real cause for alarm in the situation" which was investigated because of complaints.

Precision Against Abuses

"The Securities Commission offers ample protection against the abuses that have developed in the past people will take advantage of the service available," he said. "It have instructed that it is required to pay special attention to any complaints that may be received in the future.

"Since the investigation was commenced representations have been made to me that municipalities should be given the right to incorporate cemeteries. The suggestions result from the neglect some cemeteries privately owned and the commercialization that has developed in others. I think there is considerable merit in this suggestion and in consultation with Mr. Kirby I am considering the possibility of legislation to that end."

65 Cemeteries Examined

In his report Mr. Whitehead said "that of 65 cemeteries examined there were only two or possibly three which might be said to have operated on their basis as purely commercial enterprises. These cemeteries were 'memorial parks'".

Dainty Wisp of a Grand Old Lady, Mrs. W. Allison, Rednersville, To Celebrate 100th Birthday

She is a dainty little wisp of a grand old lady, scarcely weighing more than a hundred pounds, she sat in a rocking chair at the home of her only daughter, Mrs. Arthur Rosebush, near Rednersville, yesterday afternoon and conversed in a clear voice, albeit one that quavered at times, with newspapermen.

A black lace shawl encompassed her shoulders. Keen eyes that need the use of spectacles only when she reads her favorite newspaper, gleamed at times with merriment as she recalled many scenes of her childhood, or softened with a reminiscent sad light as she spoke of her many friends that have gone on before.

Her face, that bears but few of the ravages of time, silvery white hair, keen eyes and a soft low voice, a smile that lights up her whole face, and a personality that Time has failed to take away, gave one the impression that here was a lady personality that must have fired poets and songwriters to their best efforts in that grandest of all themes "Mother".

One Hundred Years Old

For on August 2nd, Mrs. William Allison, who has seen five British monarchs mount the throne of England, who has watched from the sidelines of life, the magical changes, that science has wrought in transportation, communication, mode of living, and many other phases, will observe her one hundredth birthday.

Right to Expropriate Cemeteries To Prevent Commercialization Or Neglect May be Allowed

Attorney General Conant is Studying Whole Question Involved

BROTHER TRAMPS MILES IN SWAMP TO SUMMON AID

Four Rescued from Bush in Larder Lake Area by James Boylan

LOST A WEEK

Kirkland Lake, Ont., July 21 (CP)—Edith Boylan, 7, from the effects of swamp-water poisoning. James Boylan, today could thank his brother, Nelson, for saving his life by tramping for miles through swampy, wooded country to summon aid.

Carrying he was on the right track, Nelson Boylan struck out blindly through the woods of the Larder Lake area Monday and finally came upon the mining community of Larder Lake to bring help for his brother and two other men who had been lost with the Boylans for four days.

Tuesday morning Boylan returned across Larder Lake with a rescue party and pointed the way to where Edith Boylan, Andrew Gillis and Dan Dagne were found in an old prospector's cabin. Their return to Larder Lake, 10 miles east of Kirkland Lake, ended what must be a long list of successful searches for lost persons in Northern Ontario.

On Exploring Trip

The four veteran prospectors set out last Thursday on a one-day exploring trip, intending to go no further than four miles afield. Caught in a heavy thunderstorm they camped and when they looked around after a night of rain they found they were lost.

Rumania Barters With Germany, Italy

Bucharest, July 21—(AP)— An agreement by which Rumania will barter 50,000 carloads of wheat to Germany and Italy for armaments was reported today by informed sources.

These sources said the deal called for delivery by September of 30,000 carloads to Germany and 20,000 to Italy with the price fixed at 46.000 lei (about $1,000) per carload with payment to be made in military supplies.

Thus, diplomats said, the Rome-Berlin axis would participate in Rumania's feverish rearmament, which is spurred by fears that the Soviet Union will attempt to bolt Bessaria recover territories which they lost to Rumania in the World War.

(Rumania has received British pledges of military aid in maintaining her independence and has signed a trade accord with Great Britain.

AIRPLANE FINDS DISABLED CRUISER NEAR ROCHESTER

Coast Guard Picket Within Mile of Cruiser Plane Reports

GOING TO PRESQU'ILE

Alarm Spread After Owner Fails to Phone Wife as Agreed

Rochester, N.Y., July 21—(AP) —An airplane searching for a cabin cruiser with five men aboard on Lake Ontario reported at noon today it had sighted a disabled cruiser about 45 miles northwest of Rochester. It believed it was the boat reported missing.

Lieut. Commander Russell Holderman, pilot of the plane (Gannett Newspapers), said by wireless a coast guard picket boat, also seeking the missing vessel, was within a mile of the disabled craft.

The 38-foot cruiser, reported owned by Ray Statt, set out yesterday at 8 a.m. EDT from the Rochester Yacht Club basin. It was scheduled to make the Canadian port between 11 a.m. and noon yesterday, but coast guardsmen said it had not been reported in Presque Isle today.

Pal-O-Mine, the large Rochester yacht owned by Ray Statt, has for the past several years been a familiar visitor to the Bay of Quinte and the cruiser has become well-known among boatmen of the city.

Mr. Joseph Goyer, local guide, has the 299 tons, or eight years conducted Mr. Statt and his guests on trips to the fishing shoals of the bay.

MAN NOT LOST CHANGES MIND

Picton, Ont, (Special)—Sam Arm-strong, resident of Cherry Valley near here, figures that a man has the same right to change his mind as a woman without anyone getting unduly excited over it.

Wednesday last Sam had informed his wife and other relatives on Wednesday that he was going to Belleville and Trenton, and while en route decided to change his plans and went instead to Toronto. Instead, was greatly surprised to find that his wife considered himself, and of his being reported missing.

His wife, it appears, becoming alarmed when Sam failed to return home on Wednesday, notified police and a search was started.

The thirty-two year old garage mechanic finally received cheques on his person and theories of possible accidents, upon which Wednesday's description was broadcast via radio, and the posse started to scour the surrounding country.

But last night, Sam drove in his car from Toronto and, after passing over the fuss caused on his non-arrival at home on schedule, "I'll too bad that a fellow can't change his mind and go to places other than those originally planned" he said. He said he had heard the broadcast while en route home, adding that he had intended going up Toronto some time ago but did not make up his mind. He said he had left for Trenton and Belleville.

The purpose of the trip was to purchase automobile parts.

All defence exercises also will be held in Berlin at the end of July, with a section for secret flights, sham raids, and trial mobilization of voluntary air protection squads.

Projects Studied In Some Provinces For Youth Training

Hope Entertained Young Men Might be Absorbed by R. C. A. F. or Civil Aviation Companies

TYPES OF JOBS

Provincial Schedules Have Not Yet Been Submitted to Labor Department, but Plans in Course of Preparation

Ottawa, July 21—(CP)—Several provinces now have agreements with the Dominion in connection with the youth training plan, and schedules of projects are being drafted, it was learned here today. Attention is being given to establishing courses wherein young men will be trained in those trades associated with aviation.

Some months ago Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie and Labor Minister Rogers discussed the possibilities of training youths as air mechanics. The expansion of the Royal Canadian Air Force demanded the taking on of several hundred recruits, and defence authorities saw in the youth training plan an opportunity to obtain men who had already been given some instructions as air riggers, fitters, wireless mechanic, wireless operators and the like.

2000 Mentioned

The figure initially mentioned was 2,000. The hope was entertained that the Civil Aviation section of the plan a large proportion of the men might embrace the opportunity to engage with the R.C.A.F. while others would be absorbed by the civil aviation companies operating the aircraft manufacturing industry generally.

While the provincial schedules have not yet been submitted to the Labor Department it is understood those in course of preparation will include courses along the lines indicated.

Canada's aircraft industry flourishes in four provinces—Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. At the same time prospects are for substantial increase in personnel of the R.C.A.F. in the next three years.

Engaged in drilling a section of slate while at work in the Stephenson Adamson Company shops yesterday, Manni Reinap, Rossmore, received painful injuries when for some reason the tire rapidly turning drill jumped out of its pilot hole and penetrated the left arm, piercing the flesh deeply. 178 APPLICATIONS FOR 30 POSITIONS

That large crowd of young ladies that congregated at the local plant of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada on MacDonald Avenue between ten and eleven o'clock this morning, was not the forerunner of a strike, nor was it a girls' school convention. Just one hundred and seventy-eight applications came for work in the radio department of the company following an advertisement that appeared in yesterday's edition of The Ontario Intelligencer, stating that thirty young women were wanted.

Mr. Arthur Young, Canada's general manager expressed surprise today. "I did not know there were that many young women unemployed in this city," he said. "I only wish we had sufficient work here to give all of them jobs."

COWS FOUND BETWEEN PILES OF CORDWOOD

A search which had extended for a period of nearly three weeks for two Ayrshire cows ended on the farm of John LePeur of Campbellford this week when the discovery of the two animals wedged in a narrow lane between two piles of cordwood on the pasture field. One of the cows was dead, the other in a state from which it appeared to be also slow, if at all.

The animals which at first were believed stolen had entered the narrow passageway through the piles of wood blocked at each end by a blind alley, and had been unable to back out. For, nearly three weeks they had been imprisoned without food or water, and through

by PETER BENEDICT

That meant an exceedingly nice judgment on Britten's part; and Britten was sure of his calculations, and gave the signal to touch off as coolly as before. And in the second that the fuse glowed, and before the man who had lit it had taken three steps back from his handiwork, someone — and the someone turned out afterwards to be Mickey Dennis, gave a sudden cry and pointed, and turned all eyes on the lane.

Both ends of the lane had been guarded well enough, and there was no way into the lane between them but had its red flag and white-winged guard. But no one had thought to put a guard on the little white gate, for there was no way through it, but only the one ferny path; and why should anyone be inside the glade in the late afternoon of a winter's day?

Nevertheless, a woman had just emerged unnoticed from the gate, and was now walking briskly along the lane towards the spot where the ash tree leaned outward.

"It's Mrs. Court!" cried Mickey, and everyone shouted and waved frantically at once, so that the girl heard, and saw, and hesitated, conscious that something was wrong, but unable to guess what it could be. She stood hesitant for a moment; and then, since she did not know what else to do, walked on as before. Then jet of smoke from the fuse ran.

"Catherine, go back!" cried Adam.

The name he had given her was lost in the general shout, but before it had passed his lips he was running full for the hedge. It was not low, for the bank to cut through it with a rending of thorns and tearing of twigs, like so many mice, or reports from the report to come; and then he had her in his arms, all the startled frightened, elusive reality of her, warm and shudder-ing with an instinctive fear that had swept her into the far hedge, and crushed her into the shelter of the ash tree, she the damsel for an outer barrier.

Catherine did not know what was happening, but she yielded to his arms as readily as the leaves to the wind, and crouched quivering and panting in the shadow of the tree. Then was a dull noise which seemed at once very far off and very near; and the turf under her feet seemed to heave with a hollow boom, and sickle again slowly; and a great hail rained from above, spread over the light, so that only the two of them remained in the world, crushed breast to breast against the tree.

The noise ran on in her ears, and would not cease. She lifted her head, and found him laughing. The thorns of the hedge had torn a furrow across his cheek, and a slow trickle of blood was running down from it; and he was laughing gently to himself; for not a stone of the lane was displaced, and scarcely a twig of the far hedge was broken.

Aerial Honeymoon in "Wrong Way" Plane

After their wedding, on the first anniversary of his flight to Ireland while flying the "wrong way", Douglas Corrigan and his bride, Elizabeth Marvin, took off from San Antonio, Texas, in Doug's old plane, bound for a New York honeymoon. The two were child-hood sweethearts.

"I'm sorry if I frightened you," he said, in the measured and cool voice she knew, "It seems there was no reason, after all."

Catherine was silent.

He looked down at her face uplifted so strangely from his arms, and it was ashen pale still with the suddenness of the onslaught, and without any expression but a sort of dazed wonder. She was thinking, not of this brief and rather ridiculous scene, but of the evening when she had met him first, when she had walked into his arms, and they had folded and never touched her, with a detached care one would have for a chair ornament. They were firm enough about her now, those arms; this was the completion of the scene begun then; and it seemed to her that if only his arms had tightened upon her then as they had done now, all the weary interim could have been wiped out and put aside, and each of them would have been spared much pain.

This was the right thing; this was the only thing; and neither of them had realised it until it was too late.

She smiled, suddenly; and something of what she felt came into him. This had always been the most real part of her to Adam Probert; the mere heft and balance of her in his arms, resilient and strong coming along the lane towards them.

He kissed her, and kissed her, as simply as if an inevitable fate led him; and in that moment, when his lips were leaving hers, he saw her eyes sharpen upon someone or something which she saw over his shoulder.

He turned, and beheld Lyddon Strang coming along the lane towards them.

CHAPTER XX

MEMENTO OF DEAD ROMANCE

Catherine and Lyddon Strang walked slowly back through the dusk together, the first dusk which was hardly more than a deepening of the blue which showed in the distant hills, and a dimming of the sky in which hung everywhere over the trees of Court Brandon.

There was silence between them, there had been silence since they had left the... shadow of the new moon; and so, that they walked like two very weary people.

They had talked about everything; about the houses, and the rents their tenants were paying for them, and the bus service, and the swimming-bath, and the tennis courts, and all the other myster ous things which Adam Probert had given to Court Brandon out of his own fertile mind; about everything which was in their minds, except the one thing which loomed greater than them all.

Not a word had he said, nor she, of that kiss in the shadow of the ash tree in the lane. Not a word would either of them say about it, if they walked until midnight. It was so much easier, after all that had happened, to let things go on as they were.

Catherine had taken off her hat, and swung it in her hand as she walked; and the evening air upon her forehead was gently warm and damp, as if with the promise of rain.

She did not look at Lyddon, but downward at the ground, her brows drawn together in her pale face. But persistently she felt his eyes upon her, eyes no longer puzzled, but only gently wondering, not now at her or any of her inconsistencies, but only at what he himself should do in this strange and unforeseen emergency.

"I always thought," he said at last, "that there was more in it than we had seen. It was a strange that he should choose this place at all. There were other sites nearer to town, and just as suitable for his purpose; and he seemed to me—and to you, too, as I know—a man who would always do everything in the light of cold reason. But neither of us guessed the reason.

"How could we?" said Catherine. "It was the thing I hated most in him, and the thing I admire most now. But—don't let's talk about it any more."

They walked for a few minutes in silence after that, and silence seemed now the only language in which they could talk to each other; for now that they almost acted no words, Catherine felt herself drawn nearer to Strang, and slipped her hand within his arm, where his fingers closed upon it warmly; and so they walked, more and more slowly as they reached the first rise of the hill, in a subdued companionship which they had seldom attained before the day. And presently even speech seemed easier to Lyddon.

Suddenly he stopped, dead upon a step, with a little helpless sound like a laugh and a sigh in one. Catherine stopped, too, looking at him along her taut arm with the first glimmer of wonder in her eyes, for Lyddon was seldom unexpected in anything he did, even to the littlest thing which passed between friends. But she said nothing.

"Catherine," he said, taking her by both hands and drawing her round to face him at the edge of the grassy waste which bordered the road. "Oh, Catherine, why do we go on pretending like this! Pretending that everything's the same as ever, and that we're going to be married, and live happily ever after! Why do we keep up this feint of caring about each other?"

"Don't you care about me?" asked Catherine dully, raising her tired dark eyes to his face.

"You know I do, and always shall, but I don't care to have you like this. I should never have brought marriage into it at all; it was enough joy to me just to help you, without giving you my help, like that."

"It wasn't like that at all," said Catherine, stirring herself to protest for his sake, though still her thoughts were far from him. "You mustn't talk about it in such a tone, Lyddon. You must see to it marry you, and I said I would, and the help you were giving me had nothing to do with it."

"It had everything to do with it, Catherine, and you know it. You gave me an advantage of you, you see, I knew you wouldn't be willing to take something for nothing. I'd've nothing in exchange. I knew you were too proud for that. I knew it was the only chance I ever had had, or probably ever would have, of—getting you into my power." He smiled, and swung her hands lightly in his. "It sounds silly, doesn't it, when I'm so completely in yours, and always have been? But the fact remains that I took advantage of you."

"You wanted me to be happy," she said softly, "and you wanted to be the one person to make and keep me happy. I was glad of that, least."

"But that still doesn't make me any prouder of it."

"But, my dear Lyddon, everything's just the same as before. She drew her left hand slowly from its grasp and showed him his ring shining upon the marriage finger. "I'm not complaining, you see."

"And you never would. Don't I know it? But it's not enough, Catherine. Something has changed, my dearest, changed out of all knowledge. I was willing to be unscrupulously to any chance of winning you in the end, I was—I am low enough to get you by trickery. But I've not yet sunk so low as to keep you where you don't want to, to someone else."

"What do you mean?" cried Catherine, flushing before his steady smiling glance. It was a smile she remembered at once re-signed and embittered. She saw the end of his happiness in it; if indeed, she had ever brought him any happiness.

"I mean that you love him. Oh, don't try to put me off now. You can't stand on your dignity with me any longer, you know."

"I—love—him!" repeated Catherine, slowly, as if she had not understood.

"You didn't know it, did you? But it's true. Think of it; isn't it true?" Her pale face did not change; she stared at him in silence, like a puzzled child, her eyes wide and dark, until he laughed gently, and with the warmest impulse he had ever felt even towards this most beloved person, he put his arms around her. The sparse leaves rustled faintly over their heads in a rising breeze; along the twilit road nothing moved to disturb their loneliness.

"That kiss," said Catherine, slowly, "you don't mistake it; it was nothing—nothing at all—"

"It was not that; or perhaps it was, partly, but what I saw was your face, my dearest Catherine, and the way you looked at him, and—the way you looked at me."

He lifted her left hand, and gently drew his ring from her finger, and shut it into her palm, holding the doubled fingers that closed upon it, though they did not so much as flutter at the touch.

"Keep it, if you will; I don't want it to be a reminder of anything unhappy for you. You could possibly think of me sometimes, without being miserable—and without being so foolish as to think you should reproach yourself about me. Well, I shall be glad." He lifted the clenched hand, and kissed it. "There! It means nothing but that from now on. Your friend Lyddon Strang gave it to you as a memento—a reminder of something which is blessedly dead."

x x x

Catherine's face quivered; she opened her lips to protest, and he put his fingers gently over them.

"No, don't say anything yet. Don't say anything until I've gone. I'm going very soon. You won't be troubled with me any more. And don't try to make me stay, because I know it would be silly, and hurt both of us in the end. I'm going back to Stanchester; and you're going to him." He smiled. "I think you're wise to love him. May you be happy, my-darling."

He kissed her, and turning away from her suddenly, walked rapidly down the hill.

Catherine stood still, staring after him, breathing slowly and deeply, as if she had been asleep. She saw him reach the crossroads, and there he turned, and waved his hand ,and so went on; and after a few minutes more the dusk received him from her sight, and he was irrevocably gone.

JUSTICE COMES TO THE RIVER THAMES ONCE A YEAR

This most unusual scene is duplicated annually on the Thames but once a year, when the mayor of one of the five so-called "sinque cities" presides as admiral, over the admiralty court. The court confers on a barge from the staff of which flies the navy's white ensign. All squabbles which have arisen among those who make their living on the river, for the past year, are brought up and ironed out to everyone's satisfaction. This year the mayor of Rochester presided. He is seen seated in the hold of the barge, at the LEFT, with his chain of office around his neck, on either side of him are his aldermen. Seated against the other visible side of the hold are the various complainants and defendants who have waited one year for justice to be meted out.

SCENES IN THE TYROL

Stories coming out of North Tyrol, now in Italy, once Austrian until after the World War when the land was ceded to Italy in settlement of peace, show that it is not well. Many of the German Austrian minority do not want to move with the mass emigration of 200,000 people according to the agreement of Dictators Hitler and Mussolini. This land has been in the hands of the owners for centuries and it means as much as life to them and they wonder why they should be made the pawns and be obliged to leave it to settle within the German Reich.

It is a tragic tale, one of the saddest in history. What would new homes mean to these people when they come to Germany, families and relatives probably scattered? Since the treaty between Italy and Austria at the close of the war these people have dwelt under Italian rule. But in pledge of the Brenner Pass guarantees given by Hitler to his ally, Mussolini, an emigration of 200,000 has been planned.

Why should any individuals, whether Germans or not, be made the pawns in the game of destiny played by big nations?

No political expediences are so important as the happiness of thousands upon thousands of people. A business man who runs none too large a business could make a better adjustment of the situation than the dictators and treaty-makers have done. There is no reason in the world if two nations are sincere with one another why such a population could not be left unmolested in their own homeland under an agreement which would not hurt the feelings of either nation or of the unfortunate inhabitants. There surely is a way of common sense. These Austrians naturally have resisted Italian attempts to make Italians out of them in the past twenty years. Now the Nazi Government steps in but what does it know of human feelings? One look at the conquest of Austria would prove that. If a second look were necessary we would have only to look to the land of the Czecho-Slovaks, to find attempts to make Germans out of Czechs.

Italy is proving as uncompromising as Germany has been. She wants the German Austrians of the Tyrol cleared out because she was awarded the territory at the close of the war. They say they must be moved to Germany or other parts of Italy, for military and political expediency as the Fascists see life, causing all this trouble.

These people have little except their love for their mountains and rocky slopes, their orchards and their goats. But it is home—their only home to them. They offer passive resistance.

These people occupy land which may be in the path of a movement some day. It is necessary that it be nationalized properly and so the inhabitants must get out. So say the heartless dictatorships.

One wonders at the alliance of the two Axis powers—how far they trust one another when they have this situation between them, how much sympathy the German Nazis have for these men and women of their own race who are to be lifted out of their homes and taken to Germany where there are perhaps no beloved mountains over which they can roam and gaze. If these nations fully trusted one another why would political expediency dictate every step? Fascism wants the Tyrolese out. Nazism wants them within the Reich. Does either of the two care for the feeling of the individual citizens who are supposed to move or be moved like pawns on the chessboard? These Tyrolese have one fault, they love a part of the world, which is home to them, but which Italy and Germany have agreed should see them no more.

Where is the Nazi love of its people? Where is Italian generosity to people whose country is their ally?

Italy recently threw a veil of secrecy over the Tyrol; people have been expelled lest they see tragic sights of moving populations, starting for they know not where.

The poor Tyrolese, look both ways if they will, find a cold shoulder or a frigid or indifferent look. They look upon themselves as victims of betrayal by Italians and Germans alike.

Most of them probably would just ask to be left alone, not to go to the Reich or to Italy. The German Government has abandoned them, and Italy would expel them.

In such a scene one wonders when large nations which have been credited with a share of culture for generations will come to deal fairly with such folk. Why should the latter be the victims of Fascism and Nazism? Nazism and Fascism can be cruel to any thing and to one another. Between them what matter a mere 200,000 Alpine folk?

SUNDAY SCHOOL STORY

A boy there was who, day and night, until he grew too old to,
Went off to school and up to bed as soon as he was told to.

In later years he ran a race, and when he met disaster
Declared the other fellow won by running so much faster.

When grown, he did his work with zeal and skill unprecedented
And met his notes and paid his bills the day they were presented.

And he became a statesman who, to everybody's wonder,
Outspokenly admitted that for once he'd made a blunder.

HITCH HIKERS HAVE FALLEN UPON EVIL DAYS. In Prince Williams Police Magistrate fined three youthful thumbers five dollars and costs each for soliciting rides, under a section of the Highway Traffic Act which does not seem to be generally known. This section says that "No person shall, while on the travelled portion of a highway, solicit a ride from a driver or operator of a motor vehicle other than a public vehicle." Second offense calls for a minimum of $10 and a maximum of $25 and costs, with a third offence up to $50 and costs and the right to impose the additional penalty of 60 days in jail. According to that hitch-hikers must be well off the beaten highway and do long-distance thumbing to escape the law. Brockville Recorder and Times says that "Hitch-hikers congregated at stoplights and elsewhere have become an infernal nuisance. This section says that—Hitch-hikers congregated at stoplights and elsewhere have become an infernal nuisance. This section says that on the sidewalks. But when they step out into the road or street, as they sometimes do, they also add to the dangers of traffic through forcing cars out of their regular lanes." So it would seem that the lot of the hitch-hiker is not as happy as it might be, and his or her popularity, if any, is rapidly waning, the result of impudence and worse on the part of the professional hitch-hiker.

IF AN ARMY TRAVELS ON ITS STOMACH most individuals can also be said to have their stomachs from the home to the office and back again governed more or less by the individual stomach. Busy business men who have become vitamin conscious and wont to boast of good health and vitality say eat, light and airy, may be interested in a newspaper doctor's dictum that a heavy breakfast is the thing to promote health. This doctor asserts that heavy breakfasts help to keep constipation away, promote health generally, if plenty of time is taken in the eating. The aforesaid doctor suggests that the business man get up half an hour earlier, eat a large and unhurried breakfast, read his paper, and thus get off to a good healthful start of the day. Sounds good, but most business men have little appetite for breakfast and are under the impression that they can save time on lighter breakfasts. When diet experts disagree what is the poor business man to believe?

PROPOSAL TO BUILD A FORTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLAR BRIDGE BETWEEN BROOKLYN AND THE NEW YORK BATTERY has been vetoed by the United States War Department on the ground that it would be a potential hazard in time of war. The Secretary of War also declared that Brooklyn Bridge and the Manhattan Bridge should be replaced by tunnels as soon as practical. This evidence that the United States War Department has become war conscious in a big way will come as a shock to many people. The fact that the United States Navy Yard is in close proximity to existing bridges spanning New York City indicates that the U. S. War Department considers bridges might be bombed and become a menace to navigation and the movement of warships in case of war and the few obstructions the better, hence the tunnel suggestion.

FIGHT PROMOTERS IN THE UNITED STATES FIND GOOD PICKINGS. BROTHER TRAMPS

Somehow they wandered 10 miles away from Larder Lake, through bog and over fallen trees, until they came on a prospector's cabin Friday night. There they settled down for the night, their only food a tiny supply of coffee and flour left more than two years before.

James Boylan became ill Saturday. The next day his condition was worse and his companions were feeble and thirsty.

On Monday Nelson, Boylan, knowing the effect the swamp-water his brother had drunk might have, decided to try to find his way to Larder Lake. He came on the village that night after dragging his way through the wilderness for nine hours.

The next morning an airplane, sent on Boylan's instructions, spotted the lost trio in the bush. Boylan himself helped police Chief Ralph Paul of Larder Lake lead a search party across Larder Lake. Boylan stayed with the boat while the other searchers walked along an ill-marked trail to the cabin.

James Boylan was brought out in a mine basket, the other two men leaning on the arms of the search party.

Mr. Whitehead said that in only two or three instances did he find that members of the undertaking profession had membership on cemetery board. "While such a situation might give rise to some doubt as to the ethics involved, there is not, in my opinion, sufficient to warrant any prohibition of an undertaker holding a position on a cemetery board," he reported.

Sufficient Safeguards

In three or four cases, he found that members of the medical profession held positions on the boards of cemeteries but "from all the evidence adduced, their presence in this capacity was not such as to invite proper criticism."

Mr. Whitehead offered his opinion that the safeguards of the Security Commission afforded sufficient protection to the public in the event of the sale of cemetery stock while the Real Estate Brokers Act gave the government sufficient control over salesmen of cemetery plots.

52 BOYS, GIRLS ATTEND VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

Former Belleville Girl Conducts Summer School at Centre Street Mission

2 WEEKS' PROGRAM

Centre Street Mission is at present the scene of a daily vacation Bible school for boys and girls, the leader being Miss Edith Vesterfelt of Fort Erie and formerly of Belleville, who is studying religious work, and is spending her vacation in her former community.

The attendance has been as high as 52.

The school opens in the mornings at nine thirty and continues until noon. First there is assembly, then a welcome song, roll call, memory period and a school yell. The school is divided into two classes, children under seven years of age, called primary and those from seven to sixteen, called juniors. The primary class has a Bible story and a few memory verses, while the juniors have a Bible story, memory verses and Bible questions with answers. There is a recreation period at ten forty with games played outside until eleven o'clock, returning to the classwork, the primary scholars make little objects, while the older ones fashion posters or of "The Old Rugged Cross," "The Good Shepherd" and so on. After recreation period a cooling drink is provided the juniors.

Object of The School

All the children require is a note book and pencil and there is a prize in each department for the neatest work at the close of the school.

The object is to bring children into contact with religion as a real power in their early years. The lessons they learn at the school they stay with them all their lives.

Miss Vesterfelt says she enjoy working among the children and I believes that is one of the reasons the Gospel can be spread."

The young teacher has found the mothers of the mission congregation very anxious to help and on Tuesday and on Wednesday quite a number were present to assist in whatever way they could.

She says that the reason I believe the work should be carried on in the church is that the children realize it is the Lord's house and besides it is most convenient and central for the community."

Miss Vesterfelt is assisted by her brother who is a graduate of Model Institute, Chicago. He is remembered here for he preached for some time at Centre Street.

On Sunday evening Miss Vesterfelt and her brother and others associated with the school will conduct the service. The school lasts through next week.

FORTIFICATIONS ALONG FRONTIER

Yugoslavia Building as "Neutrality Insurance" Circles Disclose

Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, July 21 — (AP)—Yugoslavia is building fortifications along its frontier with Germany as "neutrality insurance," army circles disclosed today.

Five thousand carloads of material have been ordered for construction of artillery emplacements, pill boxes and tank barricades at border points, they stated.

The army men said there is no contradiction between the defence program and Yugoslavia's cordial relations with Germany, emphasized by regent Prince Paul's visit to Chancellor Hitler in June.

"The new fortifications are for the purpose of preserving our strict neutrality in case of a conflict involving neighboring countries," it stated.

Yugoslavia joined Bulgaria in a declaration of "independence and neutrality" July 10.

Among the 1,200,000 Slovenes who live in the northern wedge of Yugoslavia, bordered by Italy, Germany and Hungary, relief over the army's program was expressed publicly. Enmity has grown up between the Slovenes and the German minority of 80,000 because of Nazi activity.

Slovene Nationalists accused the German minority of organizing secret military units and working for German intervention in Slovenia. At Marenburg, police were called out recently to protect German residents from a mob which broke windows in their shops and houses.

Boycott against German firms has been started to spread after the Nazi flag was raised surreptitiously over the town hall at Ptuj on Hitler's birthday, May 20, last year.

CLAIM RUSSIA

No Report Received

The government's studied word as to whether Soviet authorities had carried out a threat to confiscate property at a midnight, Thursday deadline. No report has been received thus far either from Bukhalin or from Moscow.

At Moscow, Shigenori Togo, Japanese Ambassador, was engaged in negotiations with S. A. Lozovsky, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, in a last-minute effort to avert a clash.

Official circles expressed fear of a repetition of the Nikolaevsk massacre of 1920, when some 600 Japanese were slain.

The present dispute arises from a Soviet court decision levying two fines amounting to 700,000 yen ($196,000) on Japanese fishermen. The Japanese appealed, charging that Soviet claims were groundless.

A Thursday, midnight, zero hour was set for payment of the fine, with confiscation as an alternative.

Japanese Charges

Vice-Admiral Masano Sakon-ji, President of the North Sakhalin Oil Company, charged Soviet obstructionist tactics had reduced the annual oil yield from 150,000 barrels to less than 40,000. He said the Soviets had reduced the quota of food supplies, machinery and replacements to one-third the normal amount, as a result of which both oil and coal plants had been partly decommissioned, with workmen facing starvation "before the end of the summer."

The Vice Admiral also charged that many arrests without reason had been made by Soviet authorities, in one of which a Japanese prisoner was kept standing continuously for 11 days until "finally his legs developed a kind of dropsical condition and burst."

(Surrender of 1925

Japan acquired rights to operate coal mines and oil fields along the northern coast of the Sakhalin eastern coast as a result of the tragedy at Nikolaevsk, which is on the Siberian mainland, across the Tatar Straight from Sakhalin. (Japanese occupied all of the island in 1920 but withdrew from the northern half on receipt of the concessions.)

A convention signed at Peiping Jan. 30, 1925, guaranteed Japan her rights in the island. Friction over the concessions has continued for a long period, Sakhalin said, and apparently is now reaching a climax. There are approximately 500 Japanese workmen in Russian territory.

Experts said Sakhalin oil is suitable for distillation into the best airplane gasoline—Japan's only far-eastern source. The rest is imported from America. The navy, also, is largely dependent on the Sakhalin yield.

Sakhalin, 600 miles long and from 12 to 100 miles wide with a population of 344,000—322,000 in the Japanese half—has been a friction spot between Russia and Japan for many years.

The island was occupied by Japan in 1904 during the Russo-Japanese war and at the end of the war Japan received the southern half. In 1920, after the Bolshevik revolution, Japan occupied the Russian half but eventually withdrew on receipt of valuable oil and coal concession in the northern, or Russian, part.

KEEP COOL THE "SALADA" WAY

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

GOLF CLUBHOUSE BURNS

Toronto, July 21—(CP)—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the suburban Lakeview Golf Clubhouse here early today with damage estimated at $50,000.

A spaniel, owned by Charles Lean, club manager, roused Martha Andrews, the housekeeper, who awakened three other staff members and a dozen guests. All escaped in night attire.

The clubhouse, built in 1916, was valued at $40,000. The remainder of the loss consisted of members' equipment in the lockers.

25-Pound Meteorite Found Years Ago By Gilbert Sills

Foxboro, July 21—(Special)—With the publicity received by Western Ontario through the finding, in a farmer's field, of an eighty pound meteorite which apparently fell in that section of the province last week, a Foxboro resident has revealed a similar phenomenon that he has had in his possession for over twenty five years. Wednesday night Mr. Gilbert Sills, of this village, was displaying to a host of interested spectators a peculiar lump of burnt and pitted metal of about twenty-five pounds weight, which he claimed he had discovered on his farm at Zion's Hill more than a quarter of a century ago.

The strange lump of metal is almost identical in appearance to the meteorite which fell in Western Ontario last week and there is no doubt whatever but what it is of the same composition. Remarkably heavy for such a small mass of metal, the pitted lump fairly glitters with small specks of some foreign element, while adhered to what might be termed its under side are several small pieces of rock very much like our natural granite and it is thought that this might be explained from the fact that in its descent to earth, it had evidently struck some granite boulder with some of the broken pieces of rock becoming fused into the metal as it cooled.

Mr. Sills offers no suggestions as to the probable date of the meteorite's descent, but stated that from appearances it had been in the position where he found it for a considerable time. He remembers of no meteorites having fallen at any short time previous to its being found and therefore is a possibility that it came to earth some hundreds of years before being found. Mr. Sills states that he has never had the lump of metal analysed so has no idea of what it might contain, but when it was suggested that he knock off a small piece and send it away for analysis, he said that he would not consent and that he was merely keeping it in its original form as a keepsake.

She doesn't care about swiftly moving automobiles or aeroplanes. She wouldn't want to ride in one. Her first mode of transportation was the arm of her school teacher, who carried her through deep woods from the home of her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daly, to Cold Springs, near Brighton, to the log schoolhouse some distance away.

Later she rode in a buggy and with the family in the time-honored "democrat". "They are good enough for me yet, but you don't see them any more," she smiled.

Brilliant Memory

She has a brilliant retentive memory. With scarcely a pause, she tripped down through the years ago as lightly as a fox vaults a fence. Events of sixty, seventy, eighty years ago "when I was in my teens" were recalled with an almost startling clarity.

She has a distinct dislike for crowds, "I don't see the King and Queen when they were here, for that reason" she smiled. But she quickly added "I remember when the late King Edward VII, who was only sixteen years of age and the Duke of Wellington visited Canada, to which Queen Victoria sent him," and here a bright smile illuminated her face. She paused for a moment. "I can see it all now," she continued. "When the small steamer docked at the landing all some people got off, a man walked up to her on deck dressed in a sailor suit clothes and roughly ushered them back. 'Can't you wait until she Prince gets off to the gangway?' was that smile illumined Mrs. Allison's face, as memory flooded her active mind. "He didn't know, that it was the Prince of Wales that he was pushing" she laughed, "and all some people got off, a man walked up to her on deck dressed in a sailor suit clothes and roughly ushered them back. 'Can't you wait until she Prince gets off to the gangway?' was that smile illumined Mrs. Allison's face, as memory flooded her active mind. "He didn't know, that it was the Prince of Wales that he was pushing" she laughed, "and all some young folk of today say, his face became extremely red."

"Too Much Freedom"

The young people of today? They will not live to ripe old ages. This modern way of life is too fast and much freedom. Mrs. Allison says, and "I don't like that kind of freedom" and "I do not indulge in tea or drink. Young folks crowd too much into the limited space of time with little or no work, is her opinion.

Thin white hads raised in mock horror, when a newspaperman attached the subject of modern clothes. "Goodness gracefil" she exclaimed, although that warm smile caused the corners of her mouth to tremble. "Why in my day it was shocking if a young lady exposed her ankles. The other day I saw a girl, slacked and sandaled at that, mind you, dressed in shorts. Why, you could have knocked me down with a club" she said.

The time-honored stock newspaper question "to what do you owe your longevity" was turned aside by Mrs. Allison. "Why ask me" she replied, deep sincerity in her voice. "It is the will of my Maker to let me live. Why should I argue with Him? If He sees fit to give me a long life, then I am content".

Saw Prophecy Come True

Once in her life she saw a prophecy come true. She recalled the words of a strange man, who visited her home, when she was a young girl. He looked deeply into the future. There will be carriages, that move without horses", he said. People laughed at him. Many years later when Mrs. Allison was walking down a country road near her home, a "horseless carriage" passed her. Frightened, curious, she gazed at the strange vehicle as it moved slowly down the road. Then she ran home as fast as she could. Breathlessly she related her strange experience, "it was going without horses", she told the family. "There were no horses in front of it or behind, and I couldn't see a thing on it to which you could hitch a horse", she added.

"I remember clearly that a lady with two children was driving it", she said. "Such an engine must have been under the seat, for I could not see it."

Recalls Many Incidents

Her active mind, whetted by many stirring incidents of the old days, recalled the United Empire Loyalists, the William Lyon Mackenzie Rebellion when there was a lot of fighting "by some relatives".

The departure of the boys to fight the Fenian Raiders was fresh in her mind. She told a vivid story of "Comfort Church", who was smuggled across Lake Ontario from Cobourg in a crockery crate to escape the wrath of political enemies.

Shoulder to Shoulder

And she recalled how she and the splendid pioneer women of her day stood shoulder to shoulder with their menfolk, not only against the ravages of bush fires, but in the tilling of their broad acres. "I remember when I sowed, and picked hay in the fields and mows. Shucks; that wasn't anything for the womenfolk of my time to do. But now?" and her silver-crowned head shook sadly. "You admit that is a little too much for them" she added slowly.

Amusement

"Amusement is all the young people of today look for", she said. Asked as to what form of amusement she referred to, she was at loss in her teens, she replied. "Oh, we went to picnics, on holidays, and after the Sunday service we went to church".

"What did you do after church on Sunday nights?" a newspaperman aptly queried. Quick as a flash came the reply. "Why we went home of course."

"You know about the time, when Mr. Allison and you were — say—scurrying?"

Bright eyes flashed momentarily. The scribe sat nervously in his chair. Evidently he was treading on delicate ground.

But a gleam of merriment came into Mrs. Allison's eyes. "Young man," she exclaimed, "now you want to know something, but", with a finger pointed in mock anger, "I'm not going to tell you." And eternal characteristic of the feminine, yields in her personal affairs since.

Asked to sit for her photograph instinctively her hand went to her hair. "My goodness", she exclaimed, "here it is four o'clock and I have only combed it once. I am not pretty", she laughed but you may have a picture if you want it". And graciously she allowed herself to be assisted to a rocking chair on the lawn where she sat and smiled for the camera.

Mrs. Allison is in fairly good health, Her mind, as has been said before is clear and active. Up until a year ago, she assisted with the housework washing dishes etc. She walks around the homes of her children with whom she is spending her declining days, but does not indulge in any active exercise.

Looks Forward to Picnic

She is, however, looking forward to one event. On July 20th, the family and other relatives are holding a picnic in her honor, in Hanna Park, Trenton. There she will see her numerous relatives, a host of grandchildren and a number of well-wishing friends.

She would not venture how many more years she would live. "I like life," she says, "but I am not afraid to meet my Maker. When He calls me I am ready".

Graciously, with a gesture reminiscent of her early girlhood, she extended her hand to the newspaperman when they rose to depart, "Good-bye", she smiled, her silvery, "Come again and see me after a soon sunlight," and come and see me again."

Six Children Living

She was born in Cold Springs one hundred years ago on August 2nd. She attended the log schoolhouse of the district for some time, later removing to the vicinity of Codrington. Later she came to Amelianburg Prince Edward County, where she has resided for a large number of

Sidney Boys, Rawdon Girls Softball Tourney Winners

Nine Teams, Three of Which Were Girls, Compete in Tourney

1,500 PRESENT

Pleasant Outing Ends With Dance in the Agricultural Hall

Foxboro, July 21.— (Special) — Transforming the village of Madoc into one vast arena of sporting activity for just one day, rurallites from almost every part of this county took the place by storm yesterday as they congregated there for their big annual Hastings' County Junior Farmers' Field Day. Fully fifteen hundred persons, representing almost the entire southern portion of the county, were in attendance at this popular event yesterday and every year sees greater crowds and a keener rivalry between the various townships in the sporting events.

Quite in keeping with the practice established some years ago, the principal item on the sports program was again the softball tournament, with no less than nine teams, six boys and three girls, fighting it out for the season's softball supremacy and for the right to hold the big handsome silver trophy which is emblematic of the championship. For the past few years the Sidney boys have dominated this softball series and as they became permanent possessors of the original cup last year, a new one had to be put up for yesterday's event., Sidney, however again showed the stuff that they were made of and carried off the new trophy to hold for another year. The Rawdon girls were also successful in defending their cup which they had won last year and now only need one more victory to have it for keeps.

First Round Draw

In the first round of the tournament, yesterday, the Rawdon boys stacked up against Huntingdon, Sidney battle it out with Hungerford while Madoc and Marmora were drawn together with the first team in each case coming out victorious to advance into the semi-finals. Sidney then grew into the finals leaving Madoc and Rawdon to fight it out.

Madoc Township lads proved to be vastly superior to their Marmora rivals in their tussle at the same junction grounds and banged out a decisive 27-11 victory over the new comers to route to go into the semi-finals. Scoring in every frame they soon established a lead which held no doubt as to the final outcome being in years had only one good inning, the fifth, when they managed to push, across five runs.

The lineups — Marmora — LaLon, Wicket, Buck, Neal, Clem, MacInny Gaskey, Doyle, and Gallery. Madoc —Siewart, Naylor, Sine, E. Woods, Gibson, Taylor, C. Wods, Delve and Jones.

Madoc	010 020 0—3
Umpires— Williams and Ketchenson.

Played at Armouries

Owing to the fact that there was only one diamond on the fair ground the Sidney vs Hungerford game was transferred to the Armouries lawn, where the Sidney lads had no difficulty in disposing with their Hungerford rivals. Scoring fourteen runs in the first two innings, the winners were never in danger and simply coasted home with Smith doing the hurling of Wright, who kept the visitors hits well scattered during early part of the game but was beginning to be hit quite freely on in rounds five and six. There was fortunate enough to draw a bye right into the finals. The lineups were and were thus given a good rest before going into the most important tussle of the day.

The teams— Sidney — Ray W. Woods, C. Woods, Campbell, Wright and Thrasher, Jury, Shortt, Phillips Hungerford — Gates, Adams, Fowler, Cooler, Mercy, Gunning, Mock, Vance and Coulter.

Score by innings—

A Weird Tussle

Rawdon and Huntingdon took their game over to the high school grounds and after seven innings of intensive slugging on the part of the Rawdon aggregation the score stood mounted to cricket proportions and it was past dinner time when the final out had been declared. Both teams used three or four hurlers in a vain attempt to end their rivals batting sprees and with home run, triples and doubles galore ringing off their clubs, finally wound up with Rawdon leading 34-13.

Girls' Games

Shortly after dinner the first of the girls' games were played with the Sidney girls stacking up against the Tweed lassies, while the Rawdon girls got a bye into the finals. Sidney girls showed to better advantage in defeating the Tweed girls over the five inning route as they scored enough runs in the third inning to win the game with ease. The teams—Sidney, M. Fisher, S. Kingsenz, R. Woods, V. Walbridge, O. Sine, E. Sine, L. Sine, A. Nicholson and R. Fisher. Tweed—D. McComachie, M. Freeman, M. Tummon, L. Keen, Len D. Bassett, M. Tummon, G. Keen and V. Officials —Walbridge and Higgs.

The best softball of the afternoon was served up to the spectators directly after dinner on the exhibition grounds, when Rawdon and Madoc hooked up in the boys' semi-finals with both teams playing heads up ball to run off the game in record time. Madoc got away to a six run lead in the first inning, however as a couple of errors put the Rawdon hurler in a bad hole right off the bat. They added another to the record but were held scoreless from then on till the sixth when they pushed across two more. Rawdon got one in the second and finished their scoring in the fourth when they shoved two more across the plate.

Naylor, on the mound for the winners went well with his sinker giving the Rawdon lads plenty of trouble to hold them scoreless in five innings of the seven. Potts started on the mound for the losers but gave way to Fraser in the first and then came back later to finish the game. E. Woods and Gibson for the winners went well at the plate while R. Pryer was the only one for the losers to get more than one hit. The teams.

Rawdon Girls Win

The Rawdon and Sidney girls then took over the diamond for their final game and after scoring in every inning the Rawdon girls annexed way the championship by trimming the Sidney lassies 27-18. So great was the interest of the fans in this game that the umpires had to stop play upon different occasion to put them back within bounds before the game could proceed.

The teams —Rawdon, F. Heath, M. Morrison, E. Sutherland, M. Morrison, I. Potts, M. Hagerman, N. Smith, E. Campbell and M. Mowney. Sidney—D. Bassett, S. Kingsenz, R. Woods, V. Walbridge, O. Sine, E. Sine, L. Sine, A. Nicholson and M. Fisher.

Sidney Boys Successful

The final game of the afternoon took place between the Madoc lads and the boys from Sidney, with Sidney emerging as victors after a nine inning tussle in which some hard, hard and indifferent softball was dished up to the fans. Spotting their rivals a six to nothing lead up to the fifth the Sidney lads appeared to have met their match in the Sidney had no trouble in but starting the fifth by getting one run each in the fifth and sixth, continued to pound the offerings of Naylor to all corners of the lot and finally knotted the count in the eighth by a scoring spurge which netted them six runs. Mercy and Martin then took their turn at the hurling chores with little difference in the Sidney lads and they went on to pile up a 21-19 score. Sine pitched a fine game for the winners and after a shaky start proved to be the master of the situation as he continually fooled them with his baffling change of pace to utterly baffle them batters with curves.

The teams—Sidney —P. Ray rf; G. Woods lf; C. Woods ss; Campbell 3b; Wright 2b; Thrasher c; Hall and Jury p; Phillips 1b and Shortt p.

Madoc—Brown and Alexander lf; Naylor and Mersy p; Stewart ss; E. Woods c; Gibson rf; Marsh 2b; C. Woods 3b and Delve 1b.

SAYS GERMANS MAY LEAVE WEST

Bund Leader Schilling Charges They Are Being Driven Out by Propaganda

Winnipeg, July 21—(CP)—Hugo Schilling, district leader of the German bund at Lost Lake, Sask., last night declared that "every good German in Western Canada, who can raise the fare ,will go back to Germany unless the campaign of anti-German propaganda, now being carried on by Canadian newspapers, ceases."

Mr. Schilling passed through Winnipeg with a party of Germans who are returning to Germany. They left St. Walburg and Loon Lake areas of Saskatchewan, recently the scene of settlement by refugees from Czecho-Slovakia.

Hans Schilling, son of Hugo, said that because of the so-called "anti-German propaganda" in newspapers here his people had been treated as "outcasts."

Kicked Out by Propaganda'

"We are Canadian citizens but we are being kicked out by propaganda," he said. "We settled the Loon Lake District and developed it from the time there were only two Indian trails until it became one of the best farming districts in that area. But as a result of the anti-German propaganda campaign which began two years ago, our fellow Canadians have been treating us as outcasts and as second-rate people. After my experience I would rather be a German citizen than a Canadian citizen."

He maintained a German baker in his district had been threatened with boycott unless he stopped attending bund meetings. Schilling added, however, that no pressure had been placed on his people to leave the country and that they were doing so at their own free will.

Schillings said the bund meetings were purely musical and social gatherings to maintain German culture.

NOVELIST WRITES DRAMA OF 'FAUST'

Play Which Deals With Sale of Soul to Devil is Presented in London

London, July 21—(CP)— The theme of John Faunt's new wrestling with the devil, which has occupied dramatists and philosophers for some centuries, got a thorough going over by Dorothy L. Sayers, mystery author, whose new play "The Devil to Pay" opened here last night.

The novelist, who prides up about £500,000 ($2,340,000) through detective fiction which made her detective hero, Lord Peter Whimsey, a byword in London and New York, has written an apparent hit.

She has changed Goethe's Faust to a sober philosopher, who seeks salvation of the world through union with the devil, and mixed some of Christopher Marlowe's best situations with her own interpretations of heaven and hell.

The result is a provocative, but wordy play. The product is shot full of lofty comment on the present day such as "we find a world where men are impeccable for the shape of their noses."

Some of these brought salvo after salvo of applause from the audience and at the end a rousing cheer for the author and cast.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, July 21

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A VERY promising state of affairs, especially in putting over new or unusual ventures, is forecast from the ruling aspects of major planets. It is a time for forging ahead, with heightened creative forces and much initiative. All new things are under high stimuli and ways and means for promotion of novel and audacious enterprises are assured. Cultivate those in place and power for support of such adventures, but keep an eye on extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which their creative forces and faculties will be spurred to successful achievement in important, new or uncommon directions. Unusual ideas or novel methods of rejuvenating old or outmoded projects may be assured of substantial recognition of those financially equipped for promoting major enterprises. Be wary in signing papers and don't be carried away by extravagance or boastfulness.

A child born on this day may have much creative ability and originality of methods in launching new projects. It may attract support from superiors and those in financial power. Its besetting traits may be extravagance and indulgence. Being over-critical, it may defeat its promising career.

Canada's Rebuilt Davis Cup Team Lacks Experience

Havana, Cuba, July 21 (CP)—Canada's Davis Cup team, young and full of ginger, but lacking experience, opened play in real test today.

It is hoped that Bobby Forster, Montreal sports editor, brought to Havana to meet the veteran Cubans in their North American zone series for the right to play Australia, will play two singles for his afternoon.

First on the court will be Bruce Hall, 20-year-old Toronto University student, and Ricardo Morales, Cuba's singles champion and ranking Spanish Australia, now 36, has played for Cuba against both Morales and Jorrin, but has held the Cuban title five times.

On Sunday the singles players will complete the series with Hall scheduled to play Aguero and Forster able to meet Morales. But possibility was seen that Guido Conill, 25-year-old Havana star, might take Morales if the veteran finds the task of three matches in three days in Cuba's July heat too much for him.

Chicago White Sox Climb To Third Place in American By Winning 15 of Last Nineteen

Score Second Shutout in Two Days by Whipping Boston 4-0

GIANTS SLIPPING

Crippled New Yorkers in Sixth Place and No Ray of Hope Seen

By BILL WHITE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Wonder what kind of raw meat Jimmy Dykes is feeding those White Sox of his?

Whatever it is, it certainly brings results. The Chicagoans have won 15 of their last 19 games, have risen from fifth place to a challenging position in what is left of the American League race, and are just 9½ games back of the runner-up Boston Red Sox.

Until two days ago the Sox hadn't been able to shut out an opponent but now they're boasting a pair of whitewashing jobs.

The second consecutive one came yesterday and the Red Sox were the victims by a 4-0 score as Thornton Lee turned in a nine-hit job that was cracked up by four-base plays.

Included in the Chicago upswing since the first of the month is a sweep of the St. Louis series, two out of three over Cleveland, a sweep of three games with Detroit, a brief series to Philadelphia, two straight victories over Washington and the three-game triumph over the Red Sox.

Yanks Back at Old Tricks

However, all that leaves them still something short of the Yankees who are at it again. The champions took No. 8 in a row from St. Louis Browns by 2-1 yesterday in a game that was not quite as close as it sounds. Red Ruffing's four-hit pitching, for his 13th triumph of the year, was impressive while the Yanks got 13 hits and threatened to bust loose any minute.

Bobby Estalella helped Washington to an 8-7 victory and a split of the series over Detroit Tigers, when he banged a homerun in the eighth with a mate aboard. Four-base blows by Hank Greenberg, Earl Averill and Rudy Hamilton couldn't match, in effectiveness, the Estalella round-tripper.

In the other American League tussle, Mel Harder had to pitch himself out of a lot of trouble before he came up with a 3-2 decision over the Athletics.

Both Important

The National League had only two games to offer but both were important in the general scheme of things.

Pittsburgh Pirates jumped from sixth to fourth place through their 8-4 victory over the Giants. That dropped the crippled New Yorkers down to sixth place, 1½ games out of seventh.

Boston Bees, humming merrily along with seven victories in 10 games, offered an unbeatable combination in stopping the Cubs again, this time by 2-1. Keller Bill Posedel hurled six-hit ball and Rabbit Warstler, substitute shortstop, had a perfect day at bat.

SHELL 'OILERS' TIED FOR FIRST

Will Play Corbys Sudden Death Game After Being Defeated By 'Firemen'

Extra base hits spelled defeat for the Shell 'Oilers' as the Dracup 'Firemen' pounded out a 12 to 10 win in the final game of the city softball loop last night at the Pista. The reverse suffered by the 'Oilers' dropped them back into a tie for the league leadership with the Corbys A.C. and a sudden death play-off was immediately ordered between these two clubs for the first slot position by President Clem Bowler to be played this evening following which the league playoffs will commence.

Four big runs in the eighth inning gave the "Firemen" a distinct edge and assured victory for the fourth-placed "Firemen." The veterans, Sonny Dracup, went the route for the 'Oilers' and was touched for 14 hits, including a quartette of four base blows. Elizabeth Jim Hunter hurried for the Dracups and gave up 10 hits in his free ball pitching contest. The teams batted even until the Dracups broke out in a batting spree in the eighth.

For the winners, Little had four for five, while Riggs, Barriage, Fowell and Hunter had two hits each. Both Fidwell's hits were mammoth homers, while Little and Kincaid also connected for circuit clouts for the losers. Amo and Green had a trio of hits, with Sero and Bamford earning two apiece. Pitcher John Bawden also hit for the circuit for the losers.

The teams:

Shell—Little, 2b; Riggs, s.s.; Barriage, 3b; Sinfield, cf; Tuttle, c; Folwell, rf; Hanna, if; Kincaid, 1b; Bawden, p.

Shell—Amo, lf; Ronsky, 3b; O'Neil, 1b; Dicks, 2b; Green, c; Rowbotham, c; Moon, 2b; Whalen, cf; Green, p; J. Bawden; H. Bawden.

Umpires—G. Clapper, plate; A. Elther, base.

The situation on the Giants is going from bad to worse for Manager Bill Terry. The Giants, who had a first baseman platooning with Zeke Bonura, a right-fielder on third, a second sacker at short and the president of the Amarillo (Tex.) Club in left field.

PITCHERS REACH MID-SEASON FORM IN INT. LEAGUE

Hurling Has Been Excellent All Week and Batters Put on Spurt

TORONTO WINS

(By the Associated Press)

Judging from the excellent pitching performances so far this week, the International League pitchers at last have reached that mid-season form managers talk about so longingly in April and May.

Roy Joiner of Jersey City led off the week with a three-hitter against Buffalo Sunday. Hank Borowy hurled Newark to a victory over Rochester the same day and Johnny Post and Pete Wilson are added to Johnny Gee and Ted Kleinhans, both of Syracuse, as three-hit shutouts with Gee and Post beat Toronto twice in Wednesday night's twin bill at Toronto. The five-hit shutout which Charley Fischer had handed the Clinton Maroons and last night's performances were cast in the same mold.

Rochester's veteran, Mike Ryba, showed the way with a four-hit job to give the Red Wings a 7-0 decision over Buffalo. Ryba's victory was his 12th of the season and increased Rochester's lead over the third place Bees while adding Jersey City's scalp to its game.

League Leaders Seniors

The league-leading Little Giants themselves were victims of some heavy clouting on the part of Jack Tuling, who bested Hollis Stiles in a pitching battle to give Syracuse a 3-0 triumph in the series opener.

Kemp Wicker got the Senators and Earl Caldwell of Toronto batted 11 innings and allowed only seven and three hits, respectively, before Wicker made a wild pitch with the bases full to give Elliott Jump home with the run that gave Toronto the 3-2 decision. Bridge Donghe hit a home run with one aboard in the second for the Leafs. In the afternoon game, Rookie Dan Kerr gave up only six hits for Baltimore pot luck, 5-3, to Newark on four-bagger hit by Walter Judnich in the eighth with two men on. That big blow gave George Washburn his eighth victory against nine defeats.

We have gotten in an acceptable at the speed of 150 miles per hour or better and on more than one occasion saw 100 miles per hour registered on the speedometer of one of our more high-powered automobiles of this modern age, but according to Lloyd Hicks, owner and driver of "Baby Regene", the latest racing power boat, we ain't seen nothin' yet when it comes to speed. We will admit that 100 miles per hour on land was an experience we never hope to shiver and shake through again, as the 150 m.p.h. in the air was nothing compared with it however, Mr. Hicks says we've yet to experience the greatest thrill in a ride in a hydroplane going at 50 miles per hour on water. Mr. Hicks promised to take us out for a spin in his "Baby Regene" one of these fine days when he is tuning her up for the big Rotary Club Regatta of Civic Holiday. We are looking forward to compare the difference between power boat speeding and that of speed on land and water.

Lloyd Hicks' Baby Regene is a 210 cu" class craft. The world's record for 210 class boats is 44.723 miles per hour, over the measured mile and return. On Civic Holiday off Massasaga Point, Mr. Hicks is going to try and shatter the present existing record for 210 class boats with the Baby Regene. Some weeks ago Mr. Hicks covered what he firmly believes was the measured mile at the rate of 50 miles per hour, nearly six miles an hour faster than the existing world's record for 210 class boats. Of course the time made by Mr. Hicks was not official but Lloyd feels certain he can bring a world's record to Belleville with his Baby Regene, barring accident or mishaps on the course. It might be interesting to know that under the rules of the Power Boat Association rules the power plant in a second class 225 inside inch displacement boat can not cost over $400.00, while the power plant in a class 210 cu" c.c. boat can run well over $1,000.00, that is for the motors alone.

When Jack Dempsey was stricken with an acute case of appendicitis a few days ago, he was the victim of one of the greatest anniversary celebrations ever to be attempted. Arrangements were Dempsey and Tunney should meet in the privacy of a stateroom on the third man in the ring. The bout would have been a memorable one and no doubt would have attracted a large paying crowd had not Dempsey been taken ill.

Do you remember when Sir Malcolm Campbell raced his car at Pendine Sands at 150.76 mile an hour, 14 years ago last July, to beat the 1926 record of 146.14. The British speed king has since boosted his mark by nearly 100 miles an hour and has also set the world powerboat speed record.

A lot of extra base hits coming in the way of Harry Kemp's Dracup "firemen" last night, resulted in a 12 to 10 win for the Dracups over the Shell 'Oilers'. Kemp and the 'Oilers' and the Corbys tied for first place in the City Softball League, and a playoff game is having been completed. Directly President Clem Bowler ordered a sudden death game be played between these two clubs this evening, with the winner taking a bye into the O.A.S.A. final play-offs and the loser meeting Dracups on Monday in the first round playdowns. Incidentally as we did last night's story on the part of the 'Oilers' look to the patrons that we saw several dyed-in-the-wool softball fans walk out of the stands. Actually there was a bad aroma connected with the whole set-up and we look for the good of softball, that it does not continue.

There are several suggestions we have to make before the softball play-offs commence and the first is that umpires have been too lackadaisical of late games. They should see that balls are being paid well for their services; second, the diamond at the Colman Plant is in no shape to play important play-off games upon; there are holes in the infield resembling gopher holes and lastly let's see a little more zip injected into the games, if only for the looks of things.

Heavyweight fighters today feel one bout a year, or at least not more than two, is enough provocation when Noah Bronneaux (Tommy Burns to you), was heavyweight champion of the world back in the early days of this century, he defended his crown 12 times in two years and ten months, as against seven times by Joe Louis in over two years Burns, the only Canadian ever to wear the heavyweight crown, successfully defended his title seven times in one year and against the best of the crop in those days. Jack Johnson, the black menace, followed Burns halfway around the world to beat the Canadian in Australia in 1906.

Bill Terry's crippled Giants have tumbled badly during the past week; yesterday's game their sixth straight and are floundering down in the cellar division, in fifth place. It has been a long day since the Giants have been in the second division as late as this in the schedule. Injuries and crippled players are attributed paramount cause of the decline of the Gothamites.

A week ago the fans were saying "the Yankees are in a slump, watch 'em crumble on their next western swing around the American League." Such has not been the case with Red Ruffings allowing the Yankees but four hits; Only 1,683 patrons attended the game, however.

Gabby Hartnett, managing catcher of the Chicago Cubs, played his 1,700th major league game yesterday. The fact Hartnett played 1,700 games does not mean too much to be a major league player or fan, but it must be remembered that the job of catching is the toughest on a player's legs in the major leagues. In May, 1937, Hartnett caught his 1,000th game for the Cubs and has remained with that club for 17 consecutive seasons.

BRITISH GUARDSMEN MARCH THROUGH STREETS OF PARIS

"Vive l'Angleterre" was on every lip in Paris when Prance marked the 150th anniversary of the French revolution, Bastille Day. For good reason, too, for at the head of the mighty parade of 20,000 troops, 100 guns and 350 tanks marched the British Royal Guards. This impressive scene shows the guardsmen in full dress full pace of honor during the march down the Champs Elysees, The Arc de Triomphe looms in the background. It was a spectacular show of the "united front" being put up by France and England against the axis powers.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

The Wrong Envelope

By FLORENCE MELLISH

"Hullo, Will Carmody! Packing up?"

"Something of the sort. Do you think this grip will hold one more parcel, there? If you hold it together I'll pull the strap."

"That's all right, if it doesn't bust. Has old Ennis at the bank given you the grand bounce?"

"Hardly. He has given me two weeks vacation and a raise." Will tried to speak in a casual tone, but he could not keep out a note of satisfaction.

"Good work! And you're going to spend that vacation with your uncle and aunt in Kirby?" Carl Andrews glanced at the label.

"Yes. They were awfully good to me after I was left alone. I lived with them two years before I came here."

"Hence these knobby parcels. What sort of place is Kirby—pretty lively?"

"Just a little village around the station. Then half a mile up the hill there's a cluster of houses where I'll have a good visit with Aunt Martha and Uncle Ben and the old neighbors."

"Is there a bunch of pretty girls in that cluster?"

"Only two girls, but they are both pretty."

"Ah! Please, show me the one in your wallet."

Will laughed helplessly and opened the case, revealing a gentle and thoughtful girlish face.

"Why, she is pretty. What's her name? Janice Merrow? A pretty name. What does the other girl call herself?"

"Ruby Merrow. They're cousins. Ruby is more gay and dashing than Janice."

"No picture of her?"

"No, I don't think so. I did have two or three, but—"

"But you've been housecleaning. Quite right, my boy. Now you may as well tell me the whole story, like those guys in Shakespeare. As you seem a little bashful, I'll adopt the Socratic method.

"Very considerate of you. Fire away."

Will's story was soon told. The trouble were inescapable, though quite unlike. The families on the hill were intimate, and it seemed a matter of course that Will should escort the two girls to the merry-makings in Kirby village. He hardly knew which he liked better, though he seemed to be better acquainted with the frank Ruby.

"She was a little hoydenish, perhaps," he went on, "but good and sensible. Janice was always very sweet, but a little remote in her sweetness. After I left Kirby I corresponded with both girls, but I haven't been writing to Ruby much lately. You see, I began to get acquainted with Janice through her letters.

"She is really wonderful in her depth of feeling and sympathy, and in her appreciation of things, and we've come to understand each other better and better, and have come nearer and nearer to each other just through letters."

"I see," Carl nodded.

"Well, last night I wrote to both of the girls."

"Both, eh?"

"Yes. A nice, friendly letter to Ruby, telling her that I anticipated the renewal of our acquaintance, and so on."

"Um-m. Hail and farewell."

"Then I wrote to Janice, telling her—well, just how I felt, and asking her, if she felt the same way, to meet me at Kirby station. Then perhaps we'll walk up the hill together.

"There! And if the girls are inseparable, will Ruby be along?"

"Of course not," with some impatience.

"Shot, Will." Carl asked more soberly, "what if Janice shouldn't come, either?"

Will shook. Blink—I should hope, something had happened to detain her."

x x x

On the northbound train Will Carmody sat with his gaze fixed on a recent magazine, but the sharp-eyed little spinster in the seat behind him noticed that he never once turned a leaf. His own story was too absorbing. Would Janice be on the platform to meet him? He felt sure she would. And would she be wearing that dull blue gown in which he had seen her last time, and which suited her pensive beauty so perfectly? Probably not. A girl did not wear a gown for two years. Still, he fancied the new one would be blue. He pictured the shy, spiritual smile that would curve her pretty lips—just a touch of archness with the shyness. He would smile back. They could not say much just then. The western sun would touch them warmly and perhaps they would cross the platform and sit down together at a marble-topped table in the back of the little fruit store for an ice cream soda. Then they would climb the hill together, going past the row of maples, a bright red now and then falling like a benediction on their linked arms.

"Kirby!"

Will sprang up and seized his grip. When he was on the platform, shaking hands with two or three of the townsmen. But Janice? Hadn't she come? Yes. There she was at the end of the long platform, and waving her hand. She was not wearing blue, as he had hoped, but a dashing sports shirt and an orange hat and sweater. It was not Janice! It was Ruby. Heavens! Had she come with her cousin, as Carl Andrews had suggested? No. Janice was not there at all. Will stood as if glued to the spot. As Ruby came nearer, radiant with smiles, his mind worked rapidly. Both those letters had begun with "Dear Friend." He had simply placed each in the wrong envelope. What carelessness! And Janice! What could she be thinking of Ruby?

He had only a few seconds in which to decide what to do, but he made the decision. He would not spoil three lives for the sake of gallantry or to save a temporary embarrassment and mortification.

He would tell Ruby exactly how it was. They would laugh it off together and Janice would understand. He waved to Ruby mechanically and smiled in a sickly way. But when she met him with her joyous "Hello, kid!" there was a new tenderness in her hand-clasp and a soft light in her happy eyes that he had never seen there before. Could it be that she was caring, and that he had given her a heartache with his clumsy carelessness?

"Ruby," he said in a choked voice, "I must speak to you alone before we say anything more. Can't we—" he looked helplessly around.

"Sure we can." She piloted him into the little station and they sat down on a side bench, sheltered by a big dry-goods box. The pressure of her hand on his arm and the confident air with which she waited, gave him a self-reproachful twinge.

"Ruby," he began hoarsely, "I wrote you a letter."

"Oh, yes. I got it. It was all right," She smiled reassuringly, and Will stumbled on.

"I wrote to Janice at the same time."

Ruby nodded. "I know, Will. That is all right, too." She pressed his hand, sympathetically.

"Oh, Janice!" he thought. What bitterness of spirit might be hers at this moment!

"Ruby, you see—"

"Oh, Will, will you never give me a chance to explain? Janice was coming, of course. All yesterday she was like somebody in a dream. But that little brother of hers—you know he is always catching something—has caught the measles, and that idiotic Doctor Judkins has quarantined the house today. I've talk'd with Janice through a closed window, and she was worried for fear you would be disappointed and a misunderstanding might arise. So I offered to meet you and explain. I know how you both feel"—another sympathetic pressure—"for I've been engaged to Charlie Twiss for a week and we're almost dead for you and Janice. Goodness!" with a glance at the station clock, "I have a date with Charlie in 15 minutes."

Will had straightened up. His was all smiles and cordiality now.

"Ruby, I am very glad; Charlie is an all-round good fellow."

But Ruby never knew how glad Will was.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was watching ma sewing on her sewing machine and,I said, Say ma, can I have 10 cents to add to what I've saved up for pop's birthday present?

Why yes, I suppose so, you can take it out of that little pile of change on my dressing table, ma said.

With I did, and ma said, How much does that make now altogether?

15 cents, I said, and ma said, What, why for goodness sakes, I thought you had at least 30 cents saved up.

Well so I did, ma, but G winnekens, it's feame the way money gets isa if you're not careful, I said, and ma said, Well, I admit I know something about that from sad experience, what are you thinking of buying your father?

Well, I been thinking of a couple of things, I said, I saw a peculiar looking pen wiper with a picture of the Eiffel Tower on it and 4 different color round things to wipe on, I said, and ma said, Is that very practical considering that you're father invarbly uses a fountain pen?

Well jimminy, me, his fountain pen might get out of order some time and meanwhile I could keep the pen wiper up on my desk and treat it in a little for him so it will look more useful instead of just ornamental, I said, and ma said, Perhaps you'd better think of some less brilliant idea.

Well how about a 15 cent necktie from Winestein's three 5 nine and 15 cent store? I said and ma said, that sounds more like a present for your father.

Proberly meaning instead of for myself, so I didn't even: tell her about my other idea of buying him a box of mixed packages of chewing gum.

Butter Remains Firm on Inactive Market

Top quality graded eggs continued the uptrend while cheese lost further swing toward lower prices during the week, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Butter prices were unchanged in a quietly steady market.

A scarcity of eggs was reported by wholesalers, who said producers in the country were sending their eggs to Montreal, where prices are higher, instead of Toronto. A good demand was displayed in Toronto yesterday, and light receipts were kept moving steadily under better conditions. Grade A large eggs were unchanged, grade A-large eggs firmed to 21½c and grade A-medium to 22c.

Mayor Pleased With Announcement Of Premier Hepburn

"That's what we've been looking for and fighting for for two years," declared Mayor Jamieson Bone, advised today that legislation to provide a share in the spending power of school boards of the province will be enacted at the next session of legislature, according to a statement of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

"That will do more to cut down the tax rate on the burdened ratepayers than any other legislation they could pass," added Mayor Bone.

"One year ago, when I tackled the Premier on the matter of curtailing expenditures of school boards, I was told that the expenditures of the school board, I told him I was sure they should and he told me then that "something would be done."

Details of the plan to limit the expenditures of the school boards have not been completely worked out, Mayor Bone has been informed, but the main feature of the legislation will be the power of civic councils to have representation on the school boards. The government is considering seriously the matter of giving councils authority to veto educational expenditures where they exceed a certain proportion of the total tax rate.

Black Leg Causes Death of Valuable Heifer

Foxboro, July 20.—(Special)—After a lapse of a number of years in which there has been no outbreak of Black Quarter, have been reported among dairy herds in this district in now spread highly virulent and infectious and deadly disease which is known as black leg, has broken out in two widely divergent points. Only a short time ago a Hawdon district farmer reported some of his stock infected with disease and on the recommendation measure some 45 head of cattle were inoculated against it, while the remainder of the herd this week when Mr. George McCullough of Foxboro, lost a young heifer, which had taken the disease.

In the latter case the animal came up from the pasture field in a lamed condition but was at first thought that it had suffered a scratch or a bruise of some nature. Veterinary aid was called in, however and finally was called in, with a short examination, pronounced the case of Black Leg. Although everything possible was done to relieve the animal it appeared that the disease was too far advanced and the heifer died a short time later. Taking precautions Mr. McCullough immediately had the balance of his herd inoculated against the disease and was advised by the veterinary to have the carcass of the dead animal in such a way that dogs could not possibly get at it.

Germ Lives in Soil

According to veterinary authorities, the Black Leg germ lives in the soil and can only enter the animal's system through a break in the mucous membrance of the body such as a scratch on the foot or legs. Certain kinds of soil seem to suit the germ better than others and once the ground will remain so for years.

BUILDING BOOM IS PARTLY DUE TO CITY'S EFFORT

City Property Cleaned Up and Older Eye-Sores Removed

MANY NEW HOMES

Efforts of the special property committee of city council to clean up the city's backyards and front doorsteps has resulted so far this season in the biggest building boom ever recorded in Belleville within the past fifteen or twenty years, official records at city hall reveal.

Up to the end of June this year 16 applications have been granted by the office of the building inspector for the construction of new homes and twelve permits for the alterations of existing homes, it was announced by Alderman Dr. Jack Hamilton, chairman of the special property committee.

"When I took this chairmanship at the beginning of the year, I had high hopes, hopes which I am now happy to say have been more than realized. I told the rest of council at the time that I would resign if I were given help in the matter of cleaning up the backyards of our own city, property tearing down the buildings which were hopelessly out of repair, and tearing up the chaos, then citizens would be given some inspiration to build. I promised then that we would have at least fifteen new homes built by the end of the year through our example at cleaning up.

"None of the rest of the councillors believed this impossible, but they were highly behind me in it. We have gone ahead and up to the end of the month of June we have got fifteen, and twelve alterations built, which does not take into account the new alterations of others.

"The sale of building lots is now booming, and the present year looks as if it will be the heaviest one for building in the city for twenty years. Indications point to many other new homes being built which will place the total number far ahead of the estimates I at first had.

"We are going right ahead on this same line of clearing up and cleaning up until we have a city we can be proud of. We have made a good start, and we intend to keep it up," added Alderman Marshall.

Fire Squads, Apparatus Busy Answering Alarms for Grass Fires

Five grass fires breaking out in various parts of the city yesterday and today, brought the ever-growing total to fourteen within the past five days.

Fire squads and apparatus answered alarms to the Belleville Golf Club grounds, West Moira Street, Herkimer Avenue, Sidney Street and the Coleman gas station plant broke out in dry grassy areas.

In an effort to prevent further blazes, Fire Chief William Lorge aided by fifteen reliefees today also yesterday burned large areas of the Fairgrounds, near the Bay, behind the Cricket Field, and Wellington and Burton Streets.

Chief Lynch launched his second appeal of the week to the general public today, asking for co-operation in preventing the ignition of blazes. He said that they usually result in a heavy loss of property and perhaps life, if we can't understand how the majority of these fires get started. Hundreds of dollars of children are respectfully asked to inform their offspring of the danger of setting fire to grass."

PIECE OF METAL WORKS WAY OUT

Stirling Veteran Will Probably be Relieved of Chronic Pain

When George Heasman of Stirling became the target of German gunfire somewhere in France about twenty-five years ago he little realized that the bombardment a piece of shell casing in the back and a free ride to the base hospital was all he'd get out of it.

Army doctors performed a delicate operation and removed the greater part of the steel splinters, except one section which was found buried in the spine and too dangerous to touch. George was sent home on pension and since has suffered continuously with attacks of pain, swelling, stiffness and partial paralysis. X-rays from time to time showed the metal still in place, but a few days ago Dr. Sloan, Group Leader, took charge of the problem. Mr. Heasman was admitted to submit to an operation.

On Wednesday evening of this week he had an unusually acute attack of pain and the doctors were consulted. An abscess in the neck was examined and a probe inserted. Through the abscess and into the metal. Dr. Wesley Vaughan, Miller, Blaker, Web, Boyd, Ridley, P. Blaker, Ridley and Wilson.

GRASS AND BRUSH FIRE CONTROLLED

Twenty Acres of Land and Brush Burned at Chuckery Hill

Picton, Ont. (Special)—Battling for upwards of four hours, residents of Chuckery Hill, four miles west of Picton, brought one of the worst grass and brush fires in years under control last night after it had swept over twenty acres of land.

Starting on the pasture farm of Robert Jamieson, Picton, the flames roared through long, dry grass, stumps and brush eating out of control until it reached the edge of a large woods. Fortunately no buildings were in the path of the fire.

Fanned by a strong breeze the flames gave firefighters a stiff battle before they finally got it under control. The thick smoke and blaze lost headway due to the lack of fuel when clouds were posted over and near the burned area and it was feared flying embers might start another conflagration.

Several persons picking huckleberries in the vicinity of the origin of the blaze denied they had any connection with the fire. Three strong chimney swifts were surrounded by blazing grass managed to escape with only injuries received.

Fighters were forced to wet bags and large branches of trees before they were successful in reducing the fire. Dense clouds of smoke were visible for many miles and attracted a large crowd of spectators.

Polish newspapers put on their inside pages stories that a Polish priest—Father Bernard Wiecki, a social worker from Zoppot named Kompha and a railway worker, Augustyn Potrykus, were being held by Danzig authorities.

The papers said no reason was given for the arrest of the priest but the postal worker was said to have been accused of smuggling Polish newspapers into the Free City. The railway employee was said to have been detained for "political reasons."

Madoc

Madoc—The W. M. S. of Trinity United Church, met on Thursday with a fine attendance at the home of Mrs. A. Thompson and Mrs. S. S. Ashley.

Following an opening hymn, the president, Mrs. F. Dafoe conducted a brief business period. Interest was shown in the account of a splendid tale with an estimate value of $82.50 forwarded to the Western Mission stations and also one distributed locally to the value of $25.00. Reports were received from the secretaries of the following departments, literature, Mrs. F. Fleming, Peace, Mrs. R. C. Fair, Mission Band—Mrs. T. E. Burnside, treasurer—Mrs. S. Ashley, and Christian Stewardship and Finance—Mrs. M. Fox, whose careful analysis of the financial standing for the first six months of the year offered encouragement and warranted praise for the president and members.

In a brief period of worship opened by a hymn, the leader, Mrs. T. E. Burnside, spoke of the amazing results that have followed through the centuries from the teachings of Jesus, known to all for His modesty, sincerity and truthfulness. Scripture verses from John 15:1-17 read by Mrs. Jack and a prayer offered earnestly by Mrs. F. Fleming concluded this period.

The duties and responsibilities to the society as presented by the various officers proved informative and interesting. A hymn and the Benediction concluded a helpful meeting.

Mrs. A. H. Corrigal and Mrs. C. R. Johnson assisted the hostess in a pleasant social time.

It may be of interest to recall that a fine representative group of the W. M. S. of Trinity United Church met at the home of the president Mrs. F. Dafoe with the purpose of extending a note of farewell, in a genial manner to Mrs. J. E. Kennedy before her departure.

Following the enjoyment of contests, Mrs. Robert Wickham expressed in an address, the warm feeling of companionship and friendliness that has existed in the society among the members and the desire wish that in the new fields of endeavour much happiness and advancement would follow Mrs. Kennedy and family. A beautiful oil painting was then presented by Mrs. Wickham to the guest of honor. In fitting words, Mrs. Kennedy offered appreciation for the gift and many sincere wishes for their welfare.

Mrs. Dafoe and her assistants offered lunch in a pleasant social time.

On Friday afternoon, the members of the Jr. C. G. I. T. of Trinity United Church met at the home of their leader, Mrs. Jack Weeks, the purpose of spending a pleasant time with Miss Margaret Kennedy, before her departure.

During lunch hour the president Miss Joyce Fleming spoke of the happy feeling that existed among the members and expressed the wish that always, happiness and advancement would follow Margaret. The book, "Salute The King", by Arthur Jones was then presented by Joyce to the guest of honor. Words of appreciation were offered by Margaret and the hope that many of the girls would visit her.

Games and contests brought a pleasant time to a close.

On Wednesday afternoon the members of Madoc Rebekah Lodge held a very enjoyable outing at Sagonaska Cottage, Moira Lake, the home of Mrs. A. E. Watson and Mrs. Davies. Games and sports were indulged in during the afternoon and at six o'clock a splendid supper was enjoyed by the members.

Mrs. Cross of Belleville, Miss Emily Stewart, New York City and Miss Matheson of Toronto, spent Wednesday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Seymour and Miss Wood.
